Jet Play Pen stretches to any diameter up to 6 feet; a locking device keeps the crisscross, folding bars immovable in any opened position. Pen folds to tubular form measuring 36″x9″ that's easily stored or carried on outings. Weighs only 11 pounds. Strong, riveted structure has rounded ends and nontoxic finish. Use pen for fencing plants after baby outgrows it. $13. Pad, $5.00. From Damar's, Damar Bldg., Newark, N.J.

For fast canapé- or sandwich-making acquire Robeson's spatula-like sandwich spreader. This type of implement, standard equipment in restaurant kitchens, far outstrips a knife for spreading purposes. $1.75. Also helpful for sandwiches is Robeson's double-edge knife which combines a serrated bread slicer and a hollow-ground meat slicer. $4. All have Stratafied Formica handles, black and white. Hammacher Schlemmer, N.Y.C.

Hamilton's insulated Jolly Jug and Jolly Bag are highly efficient and also smart-looking. Their polka-dot design is white on black. Bag is insulated with Fiberglas, jug has replaceable glass liner. Hamilton's Skotch Ice (in plaid cans) is a worth-while ice substitute which is reusable; 4 cans (69¢) equal 36 ice cubes. Bag 7″x12″x8″, ½-gallon jug; $7.95; bag 8½″x15″x9″, 1-gallon jug; $10.95. From Bloomingdale's, New York, N.Y.

FRED LERNER

Solo-Shade, held by a clamp, is applicable to a lounge chair or play pen, a golf cart or canoe. For shade control, there's a gooseneck used to tilt umbrella as you wish it. Should a high wind turn umbrella inside out, there's a snap-action spring that rectifies the matter. Umbrella diameter is 4 feet, height is adjustable. White with red, green, yellow or blue. $6.95; 4 for $25. From Solo-Shade, 3 Meredith Rd., Philadelphia, Pa.

When the membership rolls close again—as they must in a few short weeks!—you will be glad indeed that you seized upon this opportunity to obtain BEAUTIFUL, beautiful BOOKS LIKE THESE—AT THE SAME PRICE AS AN ORDINARY NOVEL!

Now—but for a brief time only!—you can obtain a unique collection of the world's classics, especially illustrated by the world's great artists and well printed on permanent papers—for the same price as rental library books!

YOU MAY KNOW—indeed, you should know—that the membership rolls of The Heritage Club are not always open for new members. When this does happen, you are offered an unusual opportunity which you should be alert to seize. Through this advertisement, you are now offered the best such opportunity in twenty years!

For now The Heritage Club is preparing the announcement of the Twentieth Anniversary Series of its fine books. For this Twentieth Anniversary Series, the membership rolls are opened to new members for a brief time—for a brief time only!—and special privileges will exist for new members.

THE HERITAGE CLUB distributes to its members "the classics which are our heritage from the past, in editions which will be the heritage of the future." These books are not falsely de luxe, nor are they old editions dressed up for a new market. In all the crush of "book clubs" there is none at all like The Heritage Club. For the Heritage books are especially designed by the most famous typographers in the world, they are illustrated by the greatest of the world's artists, they are carefully printed by leading printers on papers which have been chemically tested to assure a life of at least two centuries, and they are handsomely bound in the staunchest of materials and then boxed.

So you may find this next statement hard to believe; but nevertheless it is true, and it seems a principal reason for the continuing success of this Club's co-operative plan: the members obtain these books for the same price that they are called upon to pay for ordinary rental library novels! Each member pays only $3.95 for each book—or as low as $3.55, or even as low as $3.35 if he takes advantage of the special discounts which are to be made available during this Twentieth Anniversary.

NOW a handsome Prospectus is being prepared for this Twentieth Anniversary Series. In this Prospectus are described the books especially made for the members during this Series.

If you apply for one of the newly created memberships in The Heritage Club (and in time to get one of them!) you will obtain books like these:

Rousseau's Confessions profusely illustrated by William Sharp; and Green Mansions with paintings in color by Covarrubias; and Moby Dick illustrated by Boardman Robinson; and The Arabian Nights Entertainments illustrated with sixty piercingly-beautiful miniature-paintings by Arthur Szyk; and Dostoevsky's The Idiot illustrated by Fritz Eichenberg; and Camille illustrated by Bernard Lamotte; and Oedipus Rex; and The Education of Henry Adams, and The Red Badge of Courage....

These are only some of the remarkable treasures which you may have. Yet, if it should happen that you do not desire to have any of these books, you are given a list of fifty Heritage books-in-print—from which you may select substitute titles!

Additionally, to celebrate this Twentieth Anniversary Series, you will have the privilege of a discount of ten per cent if you take the Regular Quota Membership of twelve books and make your payment in advance, or a discount of fifteen per cent if you take the Full Quota Membership.

THERE HAVE BEEN great book bargains before, of course, and there will be again. But it seems safe to say that never in the history of book publishing has a greater bargain than this been offered.

Indeed, you are now invited to put that statement to the test! If you will fill out the coupon printed at right and mail it, you will be sent a copy of the Prospectus. Also, one of the available memberships will be reserved for you.

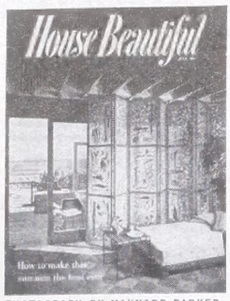
The Van Gogh Album—retail price, $13.50 will be yours free if you obtain a membership at this time!

It is 12 by 18 inches in size: and in it you will find mounted prints of twenty of Vincent Van Gogh's most famous paintings, ready to be framed if you do not keep them inside the Album. Included is a description of the paintings, and a chronology of Van Gogh. This Album will be sold in the shops for $13.50. But a copy will be given to you FREE, if you join the Club now!

Reservation Coupon



To THE HERITAGE CLUB,
595 MADISON AVE., New York 22

Please send me a copy of your new Prospectus, in which are described the books to be distributed to the new members in the coming twelve months, and send me also a circular more completely descriptive of THE VAN GOGH ALBUM. I understand that, if I send you my application at this time, I will be entitled to have a copy of THE VAN GOGH ALBUM [retail price, $13.50] without cost; and that you will now reserve a membership for me, awaiting receipt of my formal application.

INSURING HIS FAMILY'S COMFORT . . . AUTOMATICALLY

- TIMEPIECE ACCURACY
- DECORATOR STYLING
- BUILT-IN DEPENDABILITY

A light touch at his General Controls heating-cooling thermostat takes a heavy load off his mind. He knows his family will enjoy year 'round comfort inside his home — whatever the weather outside. A satisfying safeguard — and so easy!

His wife also benefits from the miracle of automatic control many times a day, thanks to General Controls' products on many other appliances. She barely lifts a finger to do household chores that once kept her hands busy from breakfast to bedtime.

These miracle servants work better because the controls carry the famous red shield of General Controls.
Look for it when you buy — as your best assurance of a safe, comfortable, convenient life — automatically!

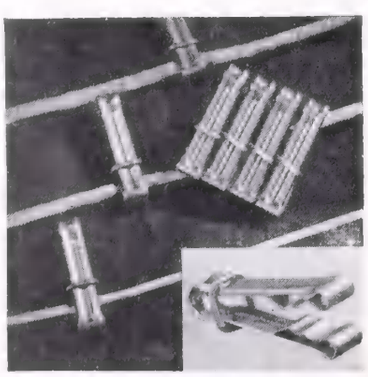
With Minifold folding lounge chair tucked into its shoulder case, you're all set for solid comfort on reaching the beach or wherever. Also, storing a couple of Minifolds in the hall closet affords comfortable TV viewing for guests. Aluminum frame adjusts for two sitting positions; seat-and-back sling is strong, woven Saran in plaid design. Chair folded is 26″x6″x2½″. Weighs only 4 pounds. $12.50. From Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Truly Magic Window Washer provides a major convenience for windows, mirrors, wall tile. Vacuum pressure automatically feeds rich suds to the sponge giving rapid, dripless washing; you follow up with a whisk of squeegee blade leaving the surface gleaming clean. Filling washer's handle with water plus 3 drops of detergent, handles all windows of an average house. $2.69 with detergent. Truly Magic, 287 Delaware, Buffalo, N.Y.



Bostwick's charcoal lighter is dispensed by push-button pressure. It's a highly convenient method and provides controlled spray that can be precisely directed. The can automatically reseals itself when spraying ceases. This leakproof closure permits transporting the can right in the picnic hamper without contaminating foodstuffs. Safe-T-Spray Charcoal Lighter gives rapid ignition, leaves no soot. $1.58 for 2 cans. From Jordan Marsh, Boston.

Back Yard Bubbler connected to an outdoor faucet gives you a drinking fountain. Garden hose connects to the second coupling, permitting hose and fountain to operate simultaneously. Raising fountain's Tenite bowl produces a gentle drinking stream; bowl lowers automatically when released causing water flow to cease. It's a gardening convenience. $4.95. From Rayl's, Griswold & State, Detroit, Michigan.

Lok-Pin is a clothespin that holds fast even in a high gale. It's self-adjusting to the thickness of any clothesline and to the thickness of fabric being hung for drying. Locking device is a sliding band so designed that it can't come off. Rustproof construction is strong, spring aluminum. Although new in America, Lok-Pin has wide use in England where it's made. $1 a dozen. From Louell Products, 423 Fulton, Brooklyn, N.Y.

FINE FURNITURE BEGINS ON THE INSIDE

MAGNIFICENT, NEW GENERAL ELECTRIC WALL

In this de luxe refrigerator-freezer are 10.7 cubic feet of storage room—8.7 cubic feet for fresh foods and 2 cubic feet for frozen foods. It is 5 feet 4 inches long, 3 feet $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches high and $17\frac{1}{2}$ inches deep. 1. The exterior is long-lasting baked enamel with a wide band of textured aluminum. 2. All 3 doors are kept shut by famous alnico magnets. There are no handles, no catches. 3. Separate vegetable and fruit compartments have transparent, sliding doors. 4. Top shelf provides space for tall bottles. Shelves are adjustable to various levels. 5. Separate compartments for butter, egg rack and door shelves for small jars and cans. 6. Zero-degree food freezer has room for up to 83 packages of frozen foods. 7. Four new-style Mini-Cube ice trays. 8. Frozen fruit juice storage rack. 9. Dependable and whisper-quiet sealed-in G-E refrigeration unit.

REFRIGERATOR-FREEZER

Little or no remodeling necessary. The new G-E Wall Refrigerator-Freezer can be installed with little or no remodeling in most homes. The cabinet is mounted safely and securely to a sturdy, 5-foot "picture-hook" mounting bracket which is screwed to the wall. It can be moved and rehung in another location, if and when desired.

Hangs on the wall like a picture

First of all, brush aside all your conventional ideas about refrigerators. This new, magnificent refrigerator-freezer that hangs from the wall is a completely new and advanced concept of modern living. Truly, it is the most convenient and magnificent refrigerator-freezer ever produced.

TO YOU, the advantages of this utterly new G-E Wall Refrigerator-Freezer are obvious: There's no need to bend or stoop for foods because everything can be seen at a glance. The new G-E Wall-Refrigerator is luxuriously convenient in other ways, too. It can be installed directly above a work counter to provide extra counter surface. And, there's room in the kitchen for extra base cabinets because this compact new appliance occupies no floor space.

All three doors are equipped with famous alnico magnets that grip the doors shut . . . no projecting handles.

The new G-E Wall Refrigerator-Freezer is available in your choice of six Mix-or-Match colors including white. Only a limited number of G-E Wall Refrigerator-Freezers are now being produced. See your G-E dealer, or send the coupon below. General Electric Company, Appliance Park, Louisville 1, Kentucky.

An Assembly of Films

Have a family film festival in your living room, with some of this year's 16mm prize-winners

By CECILE STARR

If you were one of the seventeen hundred people who attended the second annual American Film Assembly early in April, you undoubtedly had a full five days of 16mm films.

If, on the other hand, you were among those who did not attend the American Film Assembly—or possibly never even heard of it—let me tell you what it was all about, and give you some ideas for a 1955 film festival in your own home.

This year's Assembly, held at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City under sponsorship of the Film Council of America, was just about the largest collection of non-theatrical films and film people ever amassed in this country. A total of 331 films were shown in competitive screenings, with as many as ten or twelve running simultaneously in different rooms before different juries.

Golden Reel Awards were given to the films with top rating in each of 24 subject categories. An additional 59 films were cited with Recognition of Merit certificates. There were talks by Bosley Crowther, motion picture critic of The New York Times, and by James Card, motion picture curator at the George Eastman House in Rochester. There were symposiums by professional film-makers, workshops for film-users and everywhere films, films, films.

It was, like Joseph's coat, a many colored affair. In one room, avid partisans might be looking at avant-garde and experimental films, while in adjacent rooms or across the hall similar attention would be paid to films on religion and ethics, sales promotion, medicine, education or a dozen other subjects. But like Joseph's coat, this many colored curiosity held together as one piece and served one over-all purpose. It focused attention on the scope and significance of the 16mm film field, and it resounded with the theme which the Film Council of America offered at last year's Assembly: 16mm is not a film width, it is a state of mind!

The non-theatrical film is primarily concerned with the excitement and drama that is to be found in the real people and things of the world we live in. If it is not this, then it is very little—since it can never hope to equal the unreal excitement and drama that has been so successfully created within the motion picture studios of Hollywood and other film capitals.

The films that were shown at this year's Assembly were all released for 16mm use within the previous twelve-month period. From the possible total of three or four thousand that were released during the year, only 33 were entered and selected for showing. Among the many prize winners, some have little or no interest to the average home-viewer—films like the University of Wisconsin's Character Make-up for Men or Churchill-Wexler's Fractures of the Femur about the Hip.

A number of the winning films are suitable and available for home showings. I have in mind such diversities as the following: the film version of Menotti's opera, The Medium; a feature-length fairy tale called The Emperor's Nightingale; short films on art with subjects like the American painter, Dong Kingman and the British sculptress, Barbara Hepworth; shorts on nature, telling of strange plants and the abstract wonders of living things; an Eskimo legend; a modern dance film. And there are half a dozen others equally diverse and each with a special freshness and cinematic imagery.

Why not have a film festival of your own?

Following is part of my selection for a home show series: (Interesting to note, they come from all over the world—Canada, Denmark, France, Britain, Holland, Wales, Czechoslovakia, Italy, India, New York and New Mexico.)

And Now Miguel (63 minutes). Of all the films I've seen this year, festival or no festival, this seems to be my special favorite. It is the documentary story of ten-year-old Miguel Chavez who lives on his

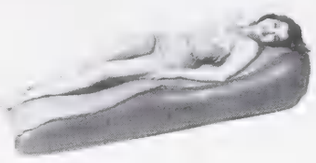
THE RETURN OF CROQUET brings with it a remembrance of a time when life had the gentle manners of a Jane Austen novel. Young men wore blazers; and the boxwood flourished; and homemade root beer awaited the players on a broad veranda. It is a wonderful game! Good wood set for 4, with stand and instruction book. $10.95 ppd. Edith Chapman, Nyack, N.Y.

TRAVELING KITCHENETTE. In motel or hotel, you can be sure of early morning coffee or late-at-night hot soup with the Boilmaster Kit. Plaid zipper bag has 4-cup aluminum Boilmaster (heats, cooks or boils in seconds with AC-DC current). 2 cups and saucers, spoons. Instant Coffee, Instant Soup, one auto and one house cord set. $19.95 ppd. House in the Garden, 19 Garden Place, Brooklyn, N.Y.

BUTTER TAKES A FIRM STAND when you serve it in this remarkable new Buttermaster. No longer will it get slurpy, because this butter dish has its own built-in refrigerator! A magic refrigerant is hermetically sealed in the base. Just keep it in the refrigerator until mealtime. Bronze, yellow or red plastic, it holds a ¼-lb. bar. $1.98 ppd. Lee Hendry, Queens Drive, Little Silver, N.J.

NECK-SPECS are the folding sunglasses that hang around your neck from a lucite chain. On the French Riviera, they're more chic than a diamond dog collar! Made with fine ground lenses, and the frames and chain come in tortoise, champagne, blue, crystal, rose, amethyst or taupe plastic. $2.95 each; two pairs for $5. French imported. Ruth Brawer, Box 4035, Dept. BSP, Tucson, Ariz.

SHOPPING WITH Pat-Gunan



BATHING SUIT JEWELRY. Light as a whisper and dazzling against a tanned arm is this gold-plated link bracelet. It is, amazingly, rust- and tarnish-proof, so you can wear it while you swim and start a new fashion! $5.95 including tax and postage. Aimée Lee, 545 Fifth Ave., New York.

FLIRT WITH A FAN. There's something about a fan that makes a woman feel part devil, part angel, and even if she uses it only to stir up a breeze, the effect is as demure as dynamite. This pretty coquette is copied from a Spanish fan, looks like carved ivory, is actually plastic. In black or white, 7″ long, it opens to 13″ wide. $1 ppd. Helen Gallagher, 413 Fulton St., Peoria, Ill.

LOAFING MATTRESS. Cleopatra's couch had nothing on this new Contour Mattress of inflatable vinyl plastic. The jumbo size not only lets you stretch out full length to get an allover tan, but it doubles as a very comfortable emergency bed for an unexpected guest! 67″ x 24″. $14.98 ppd. Merrill Ann Creations, 102 Warren St., New York.

BUTT BUCKET. We think this is absolutely wonderful. We hope everyone with a swimming pool, and everyone who has ever groaned when a guest tossed a lighted cigarette on the velvety lawn, orders it. A black wrought-iron bucket, 8″ high, with handle, rubber-footed stand and sifter of gleaming brass, comes with a bag of white silica sand. $4.95 ppd. House of Schiller, Dept. 30N, 180 N. Wacker Drive, Chicago.

present your name attractively guide your friends—beautify your home!

PERFECT FOR GIFTS—ANY WORDING YOU WANT!*

Your name gleams in permanent, reflector letters on your DAY-n-NIGHT Marker—shines brightly in headlights, softly in moonlight! It helps your friends find their way—helps the doctor, mailman and delivery men. Its graceful proportions and quiet good taste make your home more attractive.

The letters are treated with the same material that makes highway signs shine in your headlights, and they are permanent because they are embossed in the background plate.

- Shine bright at night
- Easy to read DAY-n-NIGHT
- 2-sided; raised letters on both sides
- Rustproof — lifetime aluminum throughout
- Permanent embossed lettering — raised in solid plates
- Baked enamel finish — black background — white reflector letters
- Attractive size — nameplates 2½″ × 18″, number plates 2½″ × 7″
- Any wording you want, up to 15 letters and numbers on nameplates, up to 5 on number plates. Same on both sides.

HANGING ON EVERY NOTE of this musical rack goes the coat of one of your guests. And on the shelf above, chapeaux! Hang it in your front hall where the keynote is hospitality and the tempo is gay. Staff, trebel clef, 6 note-hooks, are black wrought iron, 11" high x 18" wide over all; grille work shelf is 11½" x 8½". Price is $4.95 ppd. Laurie & Co., 507 Fifth Ave., New York 17.

FROG FOUNTAIN, to sit beside a garden pool or in your bird bath, will send up a gentle play of water that will fall like cool musical notes into the pond or basin. Or you may want to spot him on a dry patch of lawn as a decorative sprinkler. Cast in lead in a verdi green finish, with hose connection at back and spray holes at front, he's 6" long, 3" high. $6.95 ppd. Beverly Baker, Box 135, Darien, Connecticut.

A FLASHING LANTERN, with a road-tested red flashing lens visible for one mile, is the only lantern with a 25-foot extension beam light. A 4-way switch operates the flashing red and the white beam light together or separately. Marvelous for car and boat owners, campers and hunters. Aluminum construction, it uses a 6-volt battery. $6.95 ppd. Dart Sales, 3812 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn 24, New York.

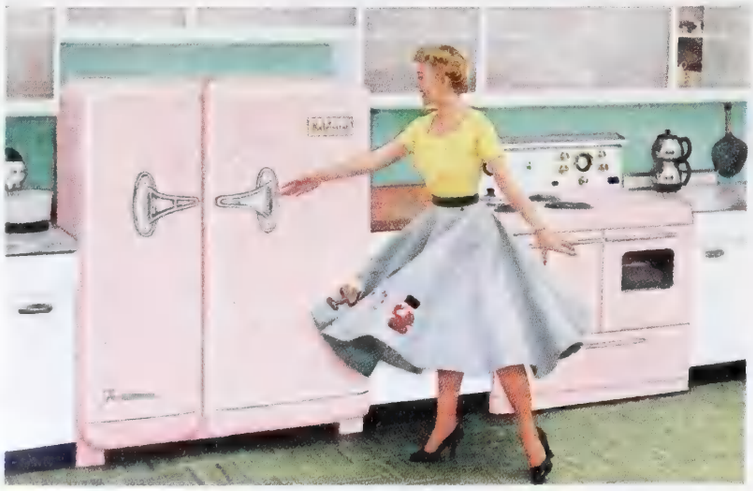
A brand new concept in luxurious living

...THE FABULOUS "FOODARAMA" BY KELVINATOR!

A NEW STAR is born in the foodkeeping field! From Kelvinator comes a new concept in modern living. Here is the ultimate result of years of planning and more than four decades of appliance experience. It is the fabulous FOODARAMA—without an equal anywhere.

Open one door to a whole new kind of luxury living—freezer living. Here is an upright freezer with storage space for 166 pounds of delectable meats and frozen foods.

Open the other door to the finest refrigerator built—11 cu. ft. of refrigeration that never needs defrosting—the magic of "moist cold" to keep food dewy-fresh, roll-out shelves, moisture-seal Crispers.



And in the doors themselves are the conveniences you've always longed for. In the refrigerator, there's the handy Breakfast Bar for bacon, eggs and juices, Cheese and Butter Chests, bottle and jar storage. And in the freezer door an ice cream shelf, frozen juice racks, freezer wrap dispenser, and even an unrefrigerated place to store bananas.

This last word in food keepers can be yours—at far less cost than a comparable separate refrigerator and freezer.

See it at your Kelvinator Dealer. Or write Kelvinator, Detroit 32, Michigan. In Canada: Kelvinator of Canada, Ltd., Toronto 15, Ontario.

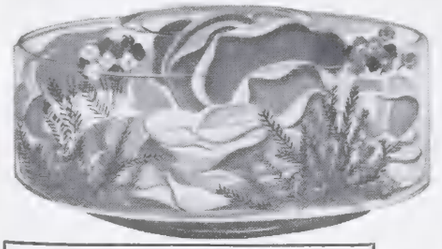
SISTERS UNDER THE SUN. Three little nuns have taken to the baseball diamond like Big Leaguers! The umpire looks so angelic, the batter is very demure, but the pitcher is winding up with impish delight to deliver a sizzling one across the plate! Glazed porcelain Nuns have habits of gray with black and white: bat and ball are gold. About 5½" high, set is $3.95 ppd. Susan Smith Co., Carpentersville, Ill.



NO-MELT CANDLES. They're fabulous fakes that are made of wood, and they're a joy for all those candle holders and wall sconces that you use for decoration rather than illumination. These will never look like limp spaghetti, no matter how hot it gets. They're white with a lavish gold "drip" and stand 12" straight. $1 the pair plus 25¢ post. Taylor Gifts, Spread Eagle Inn, Wayne, Pennsylvania.

IT'S THE NUTS for grinding peanuts for curry dishes, for chopping walnuts for brownies, sweet potatoes, salads and desserts. It's made of see-through plastic, adjusts for coarse or fine grinding, is marked for teaspoon and tablespoon measures, and has a spout for pouring. 59¢ ppd. "GARDEN UNDER GLASS"

Now at ½ Price! 1.98

The "Garden Under Glass" was originated by one of the most famous florists in the world. His secret—retaining the freshness and color of natural flowers for years and years—is one that many others have tried to imitate time after time without success.

Natural Flowers, Pine & Vinyl Roses Sealed under Glass to last for years!

Sealed to keep out moisture. Flowers retain freshness and colors for years.

Here's one of the most breathtaking home ornaments in years—lush, exotic flowers from the forests of Brazil, sprigs of Princess pine and rich red Vinylite roses under a sealed glass centerpiece! Guaranteed to keep their freshness and beauty for years and years! Place the centerpiece on your dining table and see how your linen, china and silverware reflect its vivid colors. Your guests will marvel at it! Add distinctive beauty to your living room when placed on window ledge, TV set, coffee or end table. Measures 19" round, 4" high. The Brazilian flowers, pine sprigs and Vinylite roses blend into a lovely cavalcade of color. A thoughtful gift for shut-ins, especially. Present supply is not large: to make sure, order TODAY! Marvin Culbreth Styles a Bathroom That Features Steel

"When you're after beauty on a budget you'll score a success with steel," says Marvin Culbreth, noted designer and consultant. "This room takes its whole character from steel. It's the focal point in the decor.

"I enjoy using steel wall tile for its jewel-like beauty that masks its modest price . . . its durability . . . ease of application (you can install it yourself)."

The tile Culbreth specified in this bathroom design is made of Weirzin, the electrolytically zinc-coated steel that resists heat, moisture and rust . . . that forms a lasting bond with its finish. And, it whisks clean in seconds.

The key below shows the many ways in which steel dresses up this room. So remember, for the luxury-look . . . for strength . . . for beauty . . . use steel.

1. Table framework 2. Heater 3. Wall tile 4. Steel framework 5. Bathtub and handrail 6. Sink 7. Cabinet 8. Drawers.

⟶ HAIR A MESS—NO MORE ⟵

Learn to Train Hair to Stay

By Karen March Journal-American Beauty Editor. (Reprinted from Mar. 19, 1955 issue).

Victor Vito's Home Hair Stylist School, whereby the dean of hair stylists not only gives enrollees an attractive hair style, but actually shows them how to set and care for it at home.

Before enrollment, style needs and preferences are obtained from a questionnaire the applicant fills out. Mr. Vito then does the styling himself. No adherent of fancy "dos," he keeps them simple so that the busy housewife and career girl will have no difficulty with homework.

As the hair is set, the operator carefully explains how and why every pin-curl is made. During and after the hair is set, photographs are made of the head from all angles so the student has ready reference in case she forgets which way No. 3 curl winds, to or fro. At a second session, two weeks later, the student practices her pinup and brushout technique. Any loopholes are tied up then and there under critical supervision.

SHIP MATES! If you love the dash of salt spray in your face, if you thrill to the sight of spinnakers ballooning in the wind on a sparkling blue and gold day, if you love all things of the sea, this jewelry is for you. Sterling silver sailboats decorate a pin ($2.50), earrings ($1.10), cufflinks ($2.20) and tie clasp ($1.10). Prices incl. tax and postage. Studio Shop, 557 Boylston St., Boston 10, Massachusetts.

WATCH THE BIRDIES preening their "feathers" on the rim of this darling alabaster bird bath. You could, of course, fill it with water and set it on a post on your lawn. But we think it's too pretty to let out of your sight. So why not fill it with flowers or mints, or use it for an ash tray? 5" in diameter, $2.50 ppd.; no c.o.d.'s. Edward H. Ziff, 5316 S. Dorchester Ave., Chicago 15, Ill.

THROW-AWAY PLATES on black wrought-iron holders are terrific. The holders give distinction to the plates, raise them up and hold them down. Plastic-surfaced 9" paper plates won't absorb food or gravy, come in yellow, green, blue, pink. Set of 4 holders with 32 plates, $2.95 plus 15¢ post. 8 holders with 64 plates, $5.95 ppd. R.M.S. Picture windows usher the outdoors right inside this distinctive living room! But large windows let in solar heat and winter chill, and make the rest of the house uncomfortable—if an ordinary thermostat control system is used. The extra warmth from a fireplace has much the same effect. Only Honeywell Zone Control, with its separate thermostat systems, assures even comfort all over the house.

Sleeping areas are often on separate levels and are used at different times from the rest of the house. They also have different exposure problems when they face in other directions from the living room. That's why the sleeping area cannot be controlled comfortably by the living room thermostat. Your bedrooms should be zoned with a separate Honeywell thermostat system.

The extra room in your house, whether basement game room, upper level playroom or first floor den, will have different exposure and use problems from your living area. Naturally, you want these rooms comfortable when you use them. The ideal way is with a separate Honeywell thermostat system. This gives you even comfort in all parts of your house in all kinds of weather!

Honeywell Zone Control gives you luxurious comfort all over your home

Zone Control means dividing your home into two—or more—comfort areas, each with a separate thermostat.

These are the modern thermostat systems used with Honeywell Zone Control

Automatic Clock Thermostat

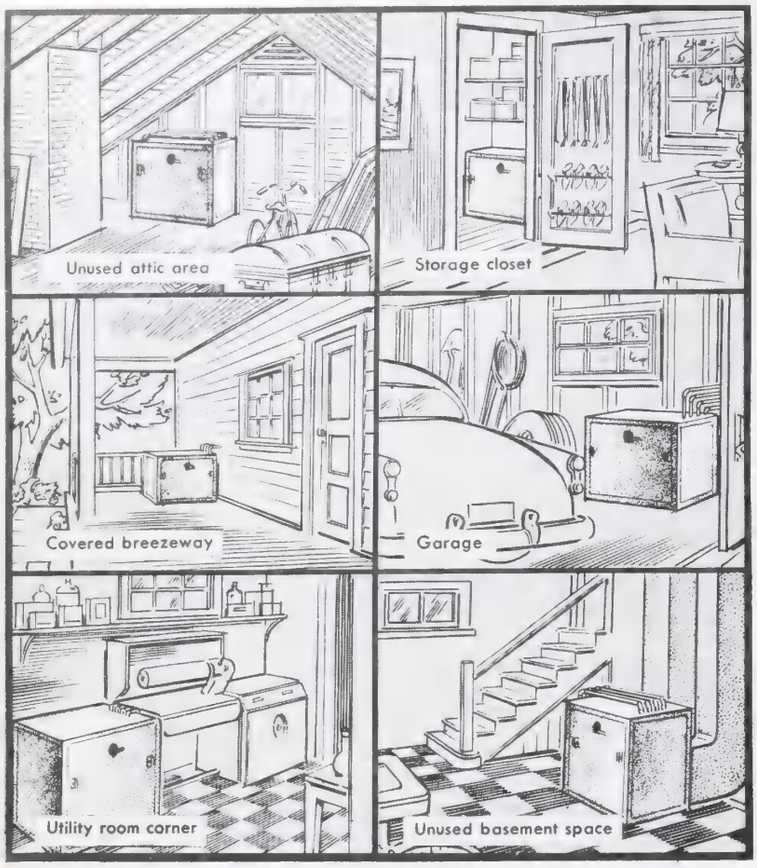
(for living and bedroom areas)

Completely automatic Clock Thermostat—comes in both electric and electronic models. In winter, it automatically turns the heat down at night for better sleeping comfort and greater fuel savings . . . and then turns it up before you awaken.

Honeywell Round

(for your den, playroom or basement game room)

This is an unusually attractive decorator-designed manual thermostat. You can set it for the exact temperature you wish—or turn it back to save fuel when a room isn't used. The ring around the dial snaps off, and can be painted to blend with any color scheme.



If you're building or plan to build a new house, be sure and talk to your architect or builder about Zone Control. And send for your FREE copy of the fully-illustrated, colorful booklet on Honeywell Zone Control. Address: Honeywell, Dept. 2743, Minneapolis 8, Minn.

AN ASSEMBLY OF FILMS

family's sheep ranch in New Mexico. Miguel can't wait to be grown-up so he can join the other men of his family in the summer pasturing of the sheep in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains. He gets his wish but not without hardship.

Everything in the film is shown and said with utmost simplicity and directness. Miguel's gentle voice and face indicate from the start that he is someone to be loved. As if through his own eyes you see the people who are close to him—his handsome brother Gabriel "who gets everything he wants," or so it seems to Miguel; his father and his grandfather, two men who think and feel and act with openness and dignity; the itinerant shearers and the wonderful sheep and lambs; the sisters and mother of Miguel in whose soft faces is reflected the quiet possession of outright love.

It is a simple film, a tender film. One that anyone can enjoy at any age, in any place. It is a picture of the West that rarely has been seen in the movies.

The film, incidentally, was produced for the overseas program of the U. S. Information Agency especially to show to audiences in the Near and Middle East areas. Its narration has been recorded in 20 languages other than English; in any language the film has an innate and universal appeal. It reminded me to be proud that there are people like Miguel and his family in my country and in my world. Proud too that there are film-makers like Joseph Krumgold who can bring such people to life for all of us to know and enjoy.

Mr. Krumgold is also the author of a book about Miguel. And Now Miguel, published by the Thomas Y. Crowell Company ($2.75). Jean Charlot has provided about 30 handsome pen-and-ink drawings. For me there were laughs and tears on every page. I'm not sure that I don't think it's even better than the film.

And Now Miguel (the film) is this year's Golden Reel winner for the Human Relations category. It is available for purchase from United World Films, 1445 Park Avenue, New York 29, N. Y., at $102.38. Rental prints may be obtained from a number of 16mm circulating libraries, including Contemporary Films, 13 East 37th Street, New York 16, N. Y. Rental, about $15.

Along with And Now Miguel, you might enjoy seeing a short like Asian Earth (22 minutes, color). This is a sensitive and intimate picture of a Hindu farming family in the Lower Ganges Valley. Quietly paced, with a woman's voice reading the narration, the film's purpose is to engender "an intimate, reflective understanding of the simplicity, the unity, the reverent devotion of Hindu peasant life in India." In doing this it takes us through two simultaneous cycles of one day and one year. Family work and ritual are shown in sympathetic detail. The hardships of primitive life on the soil in India are presented with what seems at this time to be extraordinary honesty.

Asian Earth was filmed in India by Michael Hagopian, a political scientist who has turned to motion picture as the best modern means of conveying ideas between people of different cultures. The film, top winner in the section on International Understanding, is distributed by Atlantic Productions, P. O. Box 46216, Hollywood 46, California. Sale price, $200 for a color print, $120 for black-and-white; rental, $10.

The American Flamingo (13½ minutes, color) was filmed in the breeding grounds of the Yucatan jungle. There is a considerable amount of padding at the beginning and end of the film, but when it focuses on the young birds themselves, the film is fascinating. Golden Reel winner in the Natural Resources category. Available from Carlin Films, 450 West 56th Street, New York 10, N. Y. Sale price, $110; rental, $6.

Kumak the Sleepy Hunter (13 minutes, color) is an authentic and lively Eskimo folk tale, re-created in single-frame puppet animation by two very talented Canadians, Alma Duncan and Audrey McLaren. In the story Kumak is such a sleepy fellow that he can't catch anything, not even a wife. Then, thanks to a magic man he befriends, he becomes the greatest hunter of all—but not for long. Children will enjoy the fun of it, although they'll probably be let down by the bluntly stated ending. But more important than the story is the tender care that has gone into backgrounds, costumes, facial expressions and the sweet little animated figures. Kumak won a Recognition of Merit certificate in this ear's American Film Assembly. It distributed by Film Images, 860 Broadway, New York 23, . Y. Sale price $140; rental $10.

One Little Indian is another puppet film for the small fry in your household (16 minutes, color). Its urpose is to present traffic safety ules, within the framework of a tory that would entertain three- ten-year-olds. And because it is n honestly entertaining film, older hildren and grownups will enjoy too. It's about a delightful circus oy named Magic Bow, who anders out on a city street for he first time and learns to watch raffic lights, play in playgrounds nd never, never, never to walk beween parked cars. Produced by the National Film Board of Canada nd distributed by its New York ffice at 630 Fifth Avenue, New ork 20, N.Y. Sale price $125 in olor, $60 in black and white. Rental prints are available from he International Film Bureau, 57 ast Jackson Blvd., Chicago 4, llinois, at $5.50.

On the subject of puppet films, ere's another that is a decided reat for both children and adults. The Emperor's Nightingale (55 inutes, color) is a somewhat elabrated version of Hans Christian ndersen's famous tale. It is the areful creation of the master film uppeteer of our time, Czech artist iri Trnka. It's about a Chinese mperor, a nightingale and a mechanical bird. For good measure real boy is introduced into the ilm. American narration for the ilm was written by Phyllis McGinley and read by Boris Karloff in is gentlest of voices. The film had successful run in art theaters several years back, and now for he first time is available for nonheatrical use. There is quiet beauty nd simple charm in the film, as pposed to the bang-bang, haw-haw inds of entertainment most children get at the movies and on TV. The Emperor's Nightingale won Recognition of Merit certificate n this year's film festival. Distributed by Rembrandt Films, 35 West 53rd St., New York 19.

Try to see Compenius Organ at Frederiksborg Palace, Denmark if there's music in your life. That's a pretty long title for a little film that lasts only eleven minutes. The film, however, is an impressively intelligent introduction to a famous organ built by hand in 1610 exclusively of wood; it has been kept in perfect playing condition through the centuries. The various stops are demonstrated, and music by Buxtehude is performed while details of famous tapestries show scenes of castle life in the early Seventeenth Century. Produced by Dansk Kultur Film in Copenhagen, it is another recipient of the 1955 Recognition of Merit certificate. Distributed by Brandon Films, 200 West 57th St., New York 19, N. Y. Sale price, $55; rental price, $5.

Another film of which I am especially fond is the Dutch nature abstraction, Panta Rhei—All Things Flow (10 minutes). Although it won top place in the category of avant-garde and experimental films, there is nothing out of the way about the film—except that it is a sort of cine-poem and exceedingly well done. Lovely patterns of nature are recreated; we see in time-lapse motion technique the clouds overhead, shadows on a forest floor, a flower opening its petals and the fantastic circling patterns of a huge swarm of birds. It is a film which is likely to appeal to everyone, from the simplest to the subtlest of visual tastes. The film was made by Bert Haanstra, whose name has often been seen on documentary and commercial 16mm productions abroad. Available from Rembrandt Films, 35 West 53rd St., N.Y.C. 19.

Between Two Worlds (19 minutes, color) was the more startling and controversial runner-up in the avant-garde class. Produced by the Oxford University Experimental Film Group, under the specific direction of Sam Kaner and Guy L. Coté, the film attempts "to weave dancers, sets, and color into a moving abstract pattern." Three characters (a blind artist, a girl and "a mysterious stranger") give continuity to the film, but their story is subordinate to their movement and the rhythm of camera and editing. The first time I saw Between Two Worlds, I was bored. You may be too. But on the second go-round some months later, I was decidedly more interested. Between Two Worlds is distributed by Kinesis Incorporated at 566 Commercial St., San Francisco 11, and 54 W. 47th St., N.Y.C.

NOTE: for a complete list of this year's Golden Reel Award winners write to the Film Council of America, 600 Davis Street, Evanston, Illinois. This organization also undertakes to answer general and specific questions about 16mm films. Membership is open to all who have an interest in non-theatrical film uses.

Another in the series on Italian opera, this article discusses Puccini

But is it Art?

By RICHARD WILLIAMS

The tunes are so good that you cannot get them out of your head, and the melodies are so sentimental that you cannot get them out of your heart. Who can fail to find in this music the rose glow of romance? It is all so immediately enjoyable that one could speak of it as "escape" music. But just because it is so easy, the quality is a little suspect. Are these melodies not too obviously sentimental, the tears more sweet than salty, the love too lush? It is wonderful stuff, and we love it, but is it art?

It is possible to raise these questions about Giacomo Puccini, the only composer of Italian opera who rivals Verdi in popularity. In orchestral music we speak of the three B's—Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms—as the mainstay of our repertoire. Opera is poorer. The assistant manager of the Metropolitan recently said that for box-office success he could deal only with Verdi and Puccini.

Like Verdi, Puccini knows a good dramatic situation when he sees one, and having found or invented such a situation he can shake out of his sleeve a superb melody to adumbrate it. When Puccini's first opera, Le Villi, was produced, Verdi, then seventy-one years old, issued a kindly estimate of the young composer's talent. "He follows the new tendencies, which is only natural, but he keeps strictly to melody, and that is neither new nor old."

Yes, at first glance, or rather at first hearing, Puccini keeps strictly to melody. Examine any of the famous ones you please—Tosca's plea to her tormentor, "Vissi d'arte" (I lived for love), or Butterfly's passionate wish for her lover's return, "Un bel di" (One fine day), or Mimi's short autobiography, "Mi chiamano Mimi" (They call me Mimi)—and you will observe that these arias have certain characteristics in common. Their contours are soft, their shape as gentle as the figure of a woman, and yet they are clearly defined, precisely limned. The colors may be pastel but they are never washed out. The melodies are self-assertive, if I may use this expression. We are never in doubt and are not likely to forget them. One never asks about Puccini. "Now, how does that tune go?" They are not that difficult.

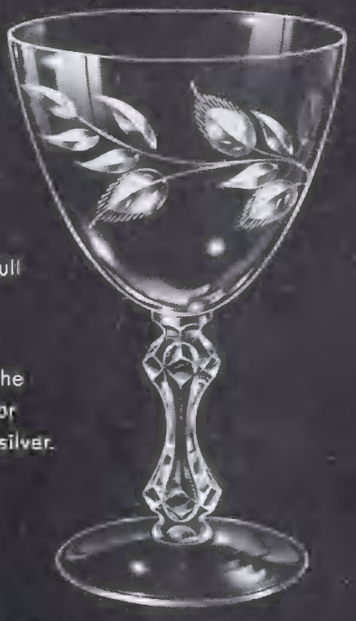
On closer acquaintance with his music, however, it appears that the melodies aren't everything. His major operas, Manon Lescaut, La Bohème, Tosca, Madama Butterfly, Gianni Schicchi, and Turandot are more, very much more, than a pretty garland of perfumed tunes. He is a superb dramatist. The more we know him, the larger grows our admiration for him as a genius of the theater.



OPERA is usually defined as a play set to music. In reality, it has to be more than that. The play cannot merely be set to music—that is, the music cannot merely accompany or underscore the action. The action must be expressed in music. The characters of the play have to be defined in the music and they have to come alive through the music. Puccini accomplished this within the orbit he set for himself, an orbit which excluded high tragedy, the pride, pomp, and circumstance of war, myth, and magic. It was with people such as you and me that he dealt in the main, bringing them to life with a new musical style, a style which owed something to Verdi but which is nevertheless so markedly individual that you can recognize Puccini after three bars.

Nervous, quick-changing, stimulating music this is, as well as glowing, caressing, and amorous, and with it Puccini created operas of the strongest fascination and drawing power. And he created characters who will remain appealing so long as romanticism is an important ingredient in the art we love.

He was particularly successful with his women characters. This is the key to Puccini's musical personality. Puccini himself was all his life more interested in women than in men. He formed few friendships but many liaisons. In his operas his favorite heroine was the "unheroic" heroine, the slight girl—charming, exquisite, and faulty—who falls in love only to be destroyed by love. She goes down unostentatiously and uncomplainingly. She expires with a sigh. Lightning does not strike and thunder does not roar at the end of Puccini's tragedies. His women sink softly under the burden of a life which has become impossible. The close is quiet. Mimi dies without a sound, warming her hands in the muff that she so very much coveted; Butterfly stabs herself with quiet despair when she knows that Pinkerton has remarried; Liù, in Turandot, falls rather than betray her prince's secret; Manon reminisces gently in her last moment.

ONLY Tosca is an exception. The great diva dramatically jumps off the parapet, crying, "Scarpia! Before God!" But even Tosca is not a classically noble heroine, but a woman we can recognize on our level. Capricious she is, gullible, moody, unstable, jealous, but capable of greatness in love.

The drama which involves these women—with the men having some excellent arias to sing but being as characters less interesting than the women—is very different from the drama of Verdi. Puccini would have been incapable of fashioning an opera on the Othello theme, nor could he have composed the Temple scene of Aida. His drama lives in a smaller house. Only once, in his last opera, did he broach a large-scale subject, that of the man-destroying Princess Turandot. It is significant that even into this icy fable he introduced a warm and soft girl, Liù, a character of his own invention.

Puccini's operas, then, represent the ordinary heightened to the extraordinary through music. He is able to set everyday conversations to music. Little phrases, casual remarks, the happy give-and-take of early love, lovers' quarrels, prattle about flowers in spring, troubles that come from being poor—all these find remarkable expression. One word, one phrase, one question becomes in its context poignant and moving.

Puccini's life was replete with success and recognition. His very first opera put him in the forefront. His third opera was Manon Lescaut, which made him famous. He had his share of failures, the most incomprehensible of these being Butterfly, which was hissed and booed at the premiere in La Scala, only to sweep on to world-wide success a few months after. But by and large, the worth of his work was immediately recognized and his operas earned him a considerable fortune.

Puccini had many reasons to be happy. Occasionally he was, most frequently he was not. Plagued by a jealous wife, who had plenty of cause for her jealousy, he was restless and, in spite of his personal and artistic successes, he was unable to find balance or certainty. He was very charming, polite, somewhat naïve, well dressed and well spoken. He was always traveling and, when he was, he longed for his quiet lakeside villa, Torre del Lago near Pisa. But once returned he'd go off again to enjoy another triumph in Paris, New York or London.

He enjoyed hunting and had a passion for automobiles. He read very little, except books and plays that might prove to be material for a libretto, and had no interest in painting. He was happy only when he was at work. So intensely did he live in the fictional world of his creation that his women characters became real to him. "Liù died and she died well," he telegraphed a friend. He felt her death as if it had been a personal loss.

IN FORMER years it was the custom to regard Puccini as nothing more than an operatic songsmith, though of course a good one. Such was the custom among the critics, anyway. Not a few of these critics regarded Puccini as facile. The fact is, however, that Puccini was not a facile composer and that his music, whatever its faults, was composed carefully and with great sincerity. Today his popularity, like Verdi's, is still growing. But so is critical estimation of him. His music is finer than we are at first inclined to give him credit for, dazzled as we are by the melodies.

La Bohème is in my opinion Puccini's masterpiece. We will discuss it in some detail in next month's article.

PANTRY SHELF NEWS

By JULIE POLSHEK

Orange Toast, a unique delicacy made by House of Lea, proves that culinary creativeness can raise even so mundane a thing as baker's bread to epicurean stature. The toast is made of finger-length bread strips soaked throughout with butter, then with a rich, tart syrup containing caramelized sugar and the juice and grated rind of fresh lemons and oranges. These flavorings are baked and toasted into the bread strips by methods that give Orange Toast a chewy consistency somewhat like a macaroon and outwardly a crunchy crispness. You use the toast as you would cookies or tea biscuits for serving with beverages, sherbet or ice cream.

In addition to great taste appeal, Orange Toast has remarkable keeping qualities; we found also that the initial crispness still prevailed some ten or twelve days after the jar had been opened. Jar contains 20 toast strips; price postpaid is $1.25 from Valley Mart Gourmet Shop, 6253 Falls Road, Baltimore 9, Maryland.

Falernum, an almond-like syrup spiked with alcohol, is well known as a flavor-smoothing ingredient for rum drinks, but the product's many culinary uses tend to be overlooked. Now that Falernum's sale has been transferred by legislation from liquor to food stores, there should be a better chance for the exotic product to come into its own in the kitchen.

Falernum lends exotic flavor to any number and kinds of raw or cooked fruit desserts. It has countless parfait possibilities, is a delicious topping for vanilla ice cream. Puddings, gelatin desserts, tapioca, milk shakes take on new flavor interest when supplemented with the tangy syrup. Falernum also affords an interesting sweetening agent for iced tea. For a tall drink, mix it with sparkling water, lemonade or orange juice. Use can also be made of the syrup to flame dessert omelets or to glaze ham or pastries. Factually, Falernum is a blend of cane sugar syrup, spices and a 5 per cent alcohol content, all of which somehow results in a tangy, almond-like product.

You can obtain the Falernum from Vendome Inc., 19 East 48th St., New York, for $1.65 (⅕-quart bottle) plus shipping cost.

One of the most delectable cocktail tidbits I know of is a rich pastry product made with cheese and centered with an unskinned, roasted peanut. The brand name of the product is Louise Dart Nucheese and, if you've not yet caught up with it, you'll want to soon.

The pastry used for these delicious nuggets is rich with butter and pungent cheddar and, although indulging in such eating may exact a caloric penalty, who wants to count calories when there's such palate pleasure to be had?

Mail orders for Nucheese will be filled by Vendome Inc. The price per 3½-ounce jar, exclusive of shipping charges, is $1.

Droste's is now making instant chocolate pudding. Like the "regular" pudding of the past, the new product has the benefit of Droste's fine Dutch cocoa which is a very definite taste asset. As with any instant pudding, preparation entails only combining the powder with cold milk and letting the mixture stand until it's congealed. The end result, suitable either for filling pies and tarts or for serving "as is," has custardy consistency and rich flavor. I added the crème de café essence of Glen Hall Brands to one pudding batch I made and highly recommend the procedure for extra-special results.

If your local food store does not have Droste's Instant Chocolate Pudding, Gimbels at Herald Square in New York City will fill a mail order if you order two dozen of the 4-ounce packages. Price for that quantity is $3.40, plus postage.

How to leave home and like it

By MARION GOUGH

"We will be stopping at a place called Mal-lorka," said the lady for whom the bon voyage cocktail party was being given. "Have you ever been there? What's it like?"

Majorca, we told her, carefully pronouncing it mah-YORK-ah, (because that's how you say it, whether it's spelled Mallorca in Spanish or Majorca in English) is the largest of Spain's Balearic Islands, sunning itself tranquilly in the Mediterranean, 136 miles southeast of Barcelona, overnight by ship, 55 minutes away by air. It is inexpensive, although we've lately heard some snappish comments about its rising prices. (The Spanish peseta is now about 38.95 to the dollar.) It is a siren of a place; in no time at all it mesmerizes most visitors into plotting ways of coming back to live happily ever after in its soft air and mild climate (average 63° F.). In appearance it looks somewhat as if the Santa Clara Valley and the rockbound coast of Maine floated off together hand in hand and settled down in a subtropical sea, but not before both had passed through a process that turned them partly into gold. It is incredibly beautiful, we heard ourselves say four or five times as we attempted to describe its curiously terraced mountains which are cultivated into farms, like shallow flights of stairs from summit to seashore. It has a fertile central heartland dotted with extraordinary windmills. This is where the almonds grow and turn the whole earth into a snow field of blossoms during January and February. Almonds, like olives, are common as tablesalt in Majorca. Everyone eats these darkly roasted little nuts with his sherry, may even stoke his car with almond shells in time of fuel shortage, as after the war.

So beguiling a place is naturally honeymoon country—Spain's answer to Niagara Falls. The capital in Palma, trade-marked by the silhouette of its rather glorious, multi-pinnacled Gothic cathedral. Ships and planes land here. Its port, on a perfect circle of a blue bay, was known to Phoenicians, Carthaginians, Iberians, Romans, Vandals, Byzantines, Arabs, Catalonians and Valencians. All of whom, together with the French, have united to produce the Majorcan people who cannot be outclassed by any people in the world for kindness, industry, personal dignity and the simplicity which is true wisdom. This mixture will also account for the local patois which is just as incomprehensible to American ears as it is melodious.

Majorca's highways, few but good, can get you easily from Palma to whatever towns you may want to visit. Buses are excellent, really luxurious, and no (Please turn to page 109)

Home owners who built with Thermopane® insulating glass for winter comfort and heat savings are finding out a wonderful thing:

Thermopane is a real blessing in summer, too!

Just as it keeps heat from flowing out through glass during winter, it keeps heat from flowing in during hot weather. More comfort . . . an easier load for air-conditioning systems. Naturally, glass walls should be shaded from direct sun by a roof overhang or trees.

You don't need storm sash. That chore's off the list, spring and fall.

Home owners who have Thermopane (and others who wish they had) will tell you that it's extravagant to build without it. See your L·O·F Glass Distributor or Dealer about Thermopane. Nothing is more temporary than pleasure, yet nothing lasts longer.

There is no pleasure like owning your home, and half the pleasure is doing things for it. There is no pleasure like a summer day, and yet there is nothing so fleeting.

So, make this summer the best ever. Make it last all year round. Make even the temporary permanent with beauty, whether it is a garden seat or a cooling plunge, a rag rug or some concrete mixed with imagination. Make everything you do have style and quality that long outlast the whims and breezes of summer. Make your pleasure permanent.

Picturesque patio-in-the-sands skillfully preserves the free and open feeling of the seaside, while providing a protected, private area for sun bathing, entertaining and family meals. It is separated from the public beach by planting and a huge driftwood tree trunk. Previously the Benoists relied on screening and an umbrella for privacy on their porch (lower left). The new boardwalk and sand patio, with plantings set behind the old bulkhead, gave them a new outdoor living space. (A list of beach plants is on page 124.)

This close-up of the beach house on our cover suggests that your summer retreat—and your summer life—can be more private, more serene, than ever before

A light-filtering plastic screen stands at the big living room window facing the beach. It shields the room from public gaze and cuts down glare from the sand. It is flexible and can be opened easily when the sea view is desirable. Emile Norman created the panels, appropriately decorating them with sea shells and sea flora. Devices like screens, folding partitions, draperies and room dividers are especially useful in a summer house, where flexible sleeping and dressing arrangements are usually required to accommodate guests.

You can make this the best summer ever. Order your house and your habits so that your family forgets the restrictions of confining winter in the casual freedom of summer. This is the true luxury of summer: an easing of daily tempo, a soothing mildness of weather encourage us to be natural, to shed artificialities and restaints along with our winter overcoats.

A cottage at the seashore is a wonderful place for summer living, but if you share the beach with the public it sometimes seems a little too casual, too open. The Louis Benoists' house at Aptos Beach on the Pacific was open to public view across a small yard and an old bulkhead. Landscape architect Thomas Church designed a handsome little sand and boardwalk patio behind a sheltering row of plants in which they can sun bathe or dine alfresco in comfort and privacy. Now they enjoy much of the seclusion of a private beach without sacrificing any of the wide-open flavor of the shore. The interior of the house reflects the same idea—the pleasure of private summer informality.

Summer house furnishings should be as practical as this hemp rug and tweedy cotton upholstery. Besides practicality they give a feeling of luxurious comfort. Robert Kasper, Inc., decorators.

A garden seat of simple and refined design

The pleasure you experience when using a beautiful object is heightened when you actually have made it yourself. This handsome seat is constructed simply from 2″ x 2″ and 2″ x 12″ redwood lumber fastened together with brass screws. The quality of the natural grain and texture of the lumber, the beauty of its detailing, as at the mitered joints of the arms, and the refinement of its simple, clear carpentry combine to make it satisfying and beautiful.

The pleasure of making a useful and beautiful object

Simple form and texture can be beautiful

This little garden grill clearly demonstrates the point that common materials can be truly beautiful when they are combined simply for utility. As it is a semicircle (the diameter of a standard barbecue grill) the reflecting wall can be built one brick thick, since the form creates a structure capable of standing easily by itself. Thus no great skill is needed to build it and the resulting structure is both useful and appealing.

Make a summer discovery a year-long pleasure

The discovery of beautiful things in nature is an exciting experience; when they are brought home to be used imaginatively the excitement of discovery becomes a permanent enrichment of living. These great shells form a sculptured detour for a tiny stream of water ending in a reflecting pool. Italian terrazzo blocks made from white stones embedded in fine, colored cement form the complementary floor of the pool.

Go to the beach without leaving home

This beach-in-the-back-yard invites you to rest and, at the same time, provides a point of visual interest in the garden. Fine sand, pea gravel, pre-cast stepping stones and sympathetic plant material are combined with two-by-four redwood edging to produce strong patterns. The back rest is a piece of plywood or a flush panel door braced with adjustable hinged legs.

Contrasting forms in the garden

Look at the fun you can have with a few simple objects. These shallow steel saucers are obtainable in a variety of sizes, but if you cannot locate them, substitute some old plow discs or light fixture reflectors. You can be really creative with these; an endless variety of beautiful arrangements is possible. Here, set on pedestals, they are bird baths. Plants can be substituted for water—but remember to leave a hole for drainage.

Interesting pattern and unusual base

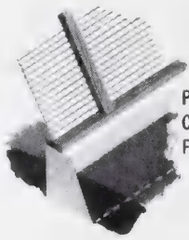
This garden table is the result of combining an ingenious pattern of two-inch-thick rough-sawn plank with a pre-cast concrete garbage pail base. Make the top yourself, as shown here or from your own design. Base is handsome by itself and would make a wonderful pedestal for garden sculpture or a plant. It is obtainable in the market, but an adequate substitute could be made of concrete block. The point is this: From simple everyday materials and a common need, you can create beauty.

Have you discovered the new PLASTICS BUILDING PANELS?

Possessed of manifold virtues, plastic paneling has become in a decade an accepted, standard building material. Now you see it everywhere, put to increasingly beautiful and effective use in homes and gardens. Architects, designers and Saturday carpenters have learned how to make the most of its unique qualities. This paneling is translucent and shatterproof, lightweight and strong, waterproof, non-fading in color, rigid yet flexible, as easy to carpenter as wood, and it comes in more than 90 colors.

Here are 13 installations to set you dreaming your own dreams.→

MEET THE "YARD ROOM"



Here is a fine example of a new ready-to-assemble product using plastic panels. It's a little A-shape structure that can be ordered by mail and dropped down agreeably in almost any garden or yard to solve a variety of needs. One reason for its versatility is that its yellowish-green plastic is colored to blend well with all colors of the landscape.

It's tent-like form can go with almost any type of existing architecture. And it's matching fence allows you to create a whole service yard so you can make more than a trivial incident of this new product. This ready-to-set-up yard room costs $250, f.o.b. Miami, foundation and fence not included.

Yard Room makes a great playhouse for youngsters and a safe storage place for bikes and toys. A 9½′ length of matching plastic fence costs about $48 for 60" height, $30 for 42" height.

This modern, back-yard A-frame is a useful and decorative shelter for garden tools and power equipment. Simplest foundation consists of sunken concrete piers to which structure is bolted. Three other possible installations are sketched opposite. It owes much of its architectural distinction to non-shiny finish of panels. Unit is 7′ high, 7′10″ wide and 9′ long.

A pair of hinged butterfly doors open at both front and back. Notice how snugly all the plastics panels fit into the grooved wood members, so that the thin edge of material never shows.

Inside, horizontal wood bars, called purlins, provide stiffening for the sides and hold hanging tools. Used as a greenhouse, the room can have special panels which will prevent leaf burn.

Much of this fiber glass and resin paneling has been used unimaginatively, in a pedestrian manner, by people who see in it only its waterproof, light-diffusing practicality. But, as these pages illustrate, in the hands of perceptive architects and designers, it becomes a rich, new esthetic addition to the lists of building materials. See how elegantly its luminosity and color may be blended with wood and metal, how the shadows it creates can become part of a building design, how ingenious framing gives its lightweight slimness a solid and substantial appearance. (Please turn the page)

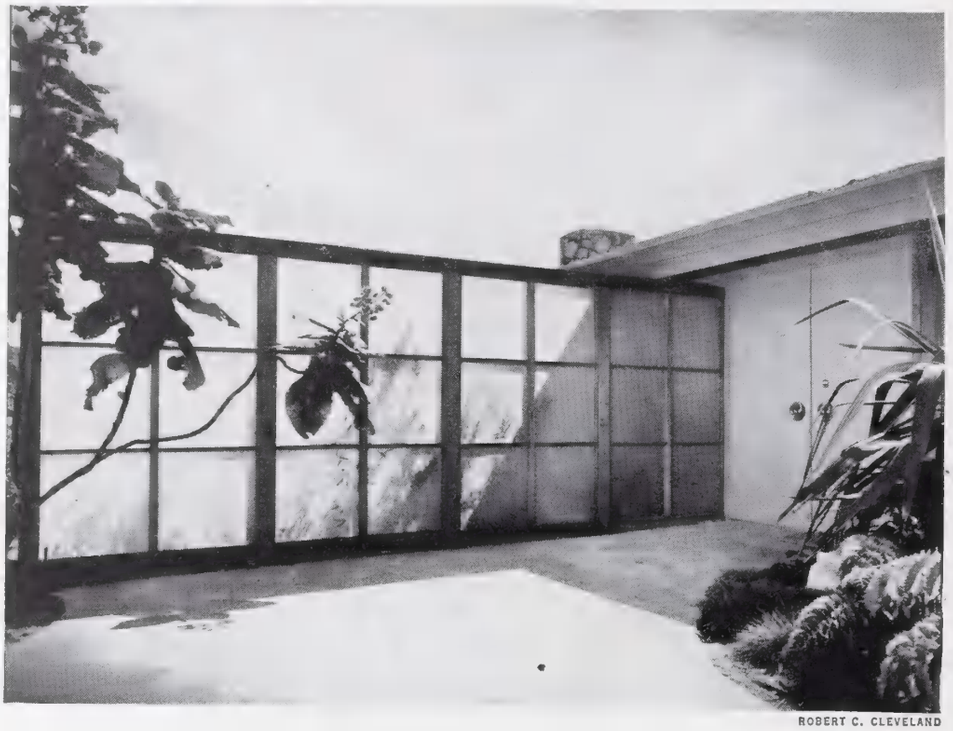
Corrugated panels, framed and capped in redwood, create a translucent fence which screens off an unsightly view without cutting out daylight.

On corrugated panels, flat wood frames leave gaps which give the structure a flimsy look, unless closure strips like these are used wherever framing meets corrugations. They come in wood, rubber, or vinyl, are used at seams, edges where panels are nailed.



In the studio of William Haines, interior decorator, a plastic-paneled door admits light while it protects privacy. Outline of pine branches was created by twine imbedded in the plastic. This was custom-made by Spencer Smilie, but it points the decorative way commercially made fiber glass and resin panels may go. Panels laminated with patterned fabrics and papers are available.

Last year more than 20,000,000 square feet of fiber glass and polyester resin paneling was sold in this country. Nearly half of this went into the building or remodeling of homes. We believe that this merely scratches the surface of its potential as a staple, standard building material. The installations shown on these 12 pages are convincing evidence of its design adaptability and proof that its days of inconsequential uses are past. Already it is noted for its satisfactory performance in a long list of uses: fences, sun screens, wind shields, terrace or porch roofing, awnings, skylights, carports, garage doors, light-diffusing interior partitions, shower doors, garden houses, greenhouses. Future uses depend only on the ingenuity of designers. Its light weight (1 square foot averages ½ pound) has created types of structure never commonly practical before—portable partitions and movable sun screens, or windbreaks, for example. Its light weight of course adds to ease of handling, so whether the man of the house or a professional does the work, savings in time and energy are great.

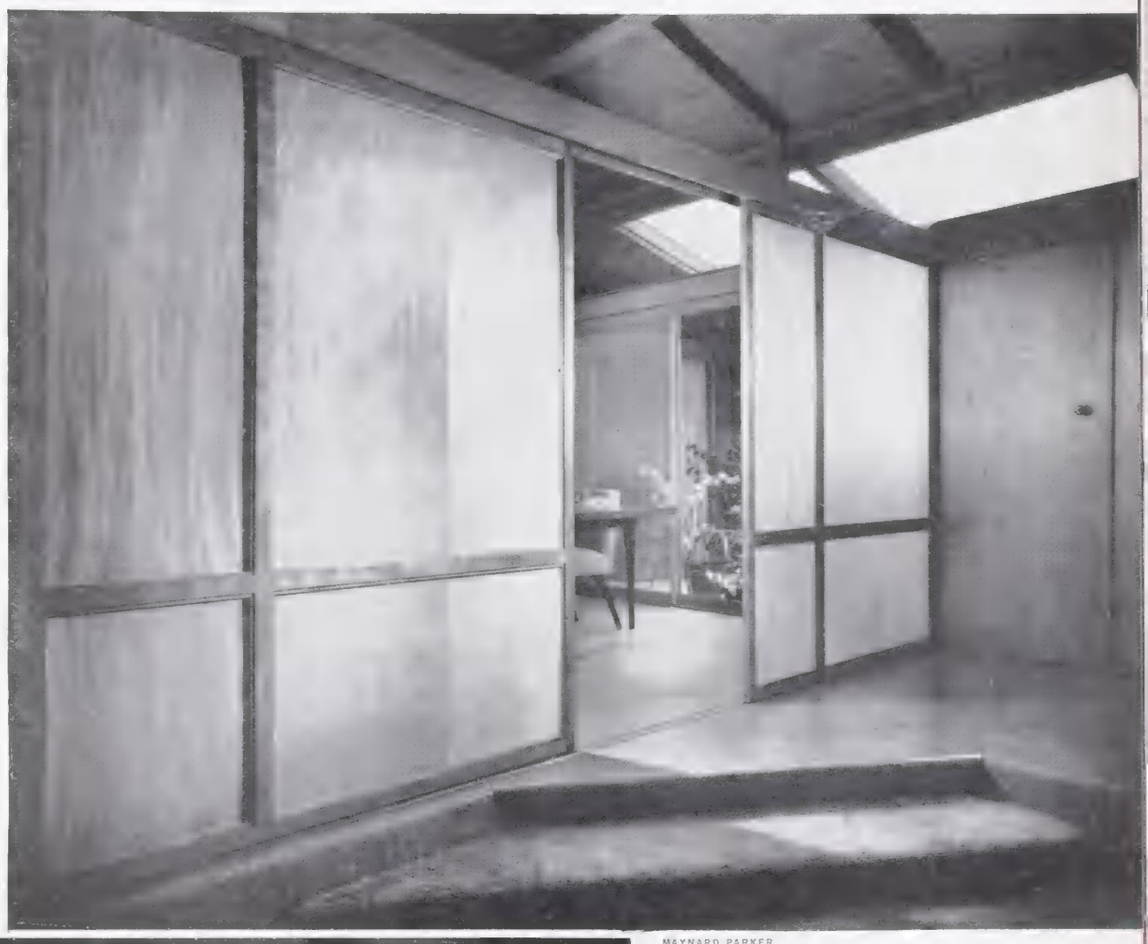
While topnotch designers are now giving fiber glass and polyester resin paneling the respect it deserves, the chemists and physicists have also been at work to improve the material itself. Its built-in color has become increasingly stable and most manufacturers offer at least six basic colors in a whole gamut of good, usable tints. Its resistance to sunlight is constantly being increased until now most of these products are not expected to show deterioration until at least five years' exposure. It comes in varying degrees of translucence, the lighter colors permitting as much as 90% light transmission. Darker colors can transmit as much as 45%. All of course are diffusers of light, cutting down glare, but they also help to reduce sun heat. If properly installed, they keep their shape, won't shrink, warp or split. They are sold in flat or corrugated sheets, usually from 4′ to 12′ long and 26″ to 42″ wide, in thicknesses ranging from 1/16″ to 1/8″. Corrugated stock is more rigid than flat and is preferable for installations that require large sections of plastics to stand unsupported. Otherwise, small panes of flat stock can be joined in decorative framework. It costs, at a lumber yard, about 80¢ to $1.25 a sq. ft.

PHILIP FEIN



This new material could well mean the end of our old post-and-board concept of fencing. Here the plastics panels are slipped into center grooves in their supporting posts. As a result, the supports become part of the fence design, not only on the "good" side which is seen by the owner, but also on the other side. Because material is so easy to cut and fabricate all sorts of variations of paneling and framing are feasible.

This pergola is roofed in a pattern of open wood slats interspersed with light-diffusing plastics panels, so owners enjoy shelter, soft light and the pretty play of shadows. Plastics paneling cuts down sun heat but lets in ultra-violet rays. Blue or green panels used as skylights produce a more comfortable light. You can imagine the decorative possibilities as techniques for imbedding patterns in plastics develop.

One of the less publicized but real assets of plastics as garden fencing is their translucence which helps eliminate the "north wall" problem. Since light and some heat pass through the panels, plants on the north side are no longer doomed to a sunless life. Nor do plants against the wall get lopsided, leaning toward the light. This fence looks like a stacking of shadow boxes and gives potted plants a healthy, dramatic garden setting.

A house built around plastics

Here is a house that could not have existed ten years ago. Why? Because here translucent plastic panels are used dramatically as a full-fledged building material. The big corrugated sheets make a light, glowing roof and create a softly lit garden room under a great spreading tree in the center of the house.

More and more we see these panels used to great advantage for many things from porch roofs to juke boxes. Now architects are discovering that this new material not only makes possible a lighter and less expensive construction (lighter supporting structure makes overall cost less), but it can be used to create great beauty. Light can be controlled by the density of the panels in a way never before possible with a durable material. Nothing equals the soft richness of this new light quality. The construction of this Hawaiian house would be suited to any other mild climate zone. In a northern climate, although it would not provide adequate insulation for heated portions of a house, it still can be used to great advantage for porches and other semi-enclosed unheated areas.

Mix CONCRETE with imagination

Concrete need not be a simple, dull material with a gray personality. Imprint a distinctive texture, add some color, mold it in a fine design

Here is the kind of plasticity you can create with concrete. The forms used to mold the seat base and table were sheet metal, curved to the desired shape and braced with stakes while the concrete set. Terrace is paved in big squares, wood divider strips left as expansion joints.

SMITHDSON & STALEY, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS

The Greeks had a word for it. The word is plastikos—which means "fit for molding." There's no better word for concrete. Discard your present notions about concrete if you think of it as a simple, dull material with a gray personality. A little imagination, perhaps some color and texture too, and concrete can become many and beautiful things without once trying to behave like something it is not. Its personality is not gray—it needs only to be drawn out.

Exploring the textural possibilities of concrete has just barely begun. You can join in that profitable exploration. With a little thought and some experimenting, you can discover the right texture to make concrete as attractive as it is useful for your terrace, your walks, and around your garden. We think working with concrete to improve your property can be your best summer project. Used with imagination, it can lend your garden a striking new mood.

Everyone has seen how boards used in making concrete forms leave their imprint realistically upon the completed wall. If striated plywood is used for forms, the concrete will be striated. Use an etched plywood and the deep-grained texture of wood will appear on the concrete. Even patterns of leaves, of bark, of pine-needled twigs are readily transferred to enduring concrete. Or dig round, square, or free-form holes in the earth and pour in two to four inches of concrete. Later, when the concrete has set hard, turn it over. Its surface will have the same patterned texture and the same minor variations as the soil upon upon which it was cast.

All this merely demonstrates the ready response of concrete to shaping. Understanding this, you can go ahead and shape it, fit it exactly to your own particular needs and situation, blend it to your surroundings, integrate it into your over-all pattern. Concrete need not be obtrusive to be beautiful. Its placement should be done carefully so that the result is both interesting and artful.

Basic in the selection of a concrete texture is a consideration of how the concrete is to be used, and how you expect it to function. Will it be in the sun where constant glare is a factor, or will it be on the shaded (Please turn the page) north side where reflected light is welcome? Is it to be used as a dance floor or for games? Are small children going to use it as a place to play? Will it be dangerous for the aged? Is it necessary that furniture glide easily over it and rest evenly on it? How does it feel underfoot?

Will the textured surface be among the ones which are easier to maintain, or will it collect dust and dirt and be stained by barbecue spatter and drippings? Can leaves be swept easily from it? Is it to be used in a traffic area, or will it be in some out-of-the-way place like a pool bottom? How big an area will it cover?

The ability of texture to offer contrast can be exploited in defining and limiting particular areas. Perhaps a center area should be steel-troweled to (Please turn the page)

MAYNARD PARKER

This interesting art path was developed because designers weren't afraid to abandon old idea that units must be exact duplicates, surfaces plain.

Concrete bowls bring a note of elegance to this Chelsea Flower Show garden, but could be a practical home project. Cast them in place, mounding up a temporary outline mold of tamped soil, lined with metal for a smooth finish, unlined for rough. Trowel in and shape thick concrete, hiding the reinforcing wire within it.

1. If the job requires a yard or more of concrete, buy the wet, ready-mixed variety. However, when the area is small or when custom-finishing necessitates working slowly, a platform of smooth planks or a wheelbarrow can be used for mixing. A brick under each leg makes its bed level. Cement and sand are thoroughly mixed first. Stone is then added and mixed. Water is added last.

2. Concrete, poured into its form and roughly leveled with a board, is not ready for final finishing until it has begun to set. This may take from 30 minutes to 12 hours or more, depending upon weather (quickest on hot dry days, slowest in winter). When a wood float passed over the fresh concrete does not dig in, the time has arrived for floating. The wood float produces a porous surface that is neither smooth nor rough. Steel trowel in left hand supports the worker's weight.

3. Steel troweling, which produces a hard, slick surface, is done after wood floating is complete. Wait, however, until all water sheen has disappeared from the surface of the concrete and no mortar accumulates on the trowel. The trowel should "ring" as it is swept across the surface. Avoid excessive troweling. It brings too much fine material and moisture to the surface, which later will cause chalking or sanding off. A plank supported at either end makes a good bridge for reaching areas otherwise inaccessible. Here the wood float is being used by the man for support.

4. Pattern, produced with a cooky cutter, makes a good non-slip surface and here repeats the pattern in an adjoining tile fence. With an understanding of the material, similar deviations can produce interesting results.

5. On a prepared base, any of a variety of design elements may be introduced. Shown here are land tiles, flowerpot dish, sections of Transite pipe, strips of corrugated and flat asbestos and a half brick. They are representative of materials that can be sectioned and finished off flush to create texture designs. The circular rings of Transite may be filled with concrete of the same color and texture, or with a varied material, to produce a polka dot motif—perhaps in a child's play yard. One or more sizes of rings may be used. Land tiles may be finished flush with the surface or projected above it for use as planters.

6. Transite, made of cement and asbestos, is ideally suited for combination with concrete. Sheets of it can easily be cut with an ordinary woodworking handsaw. Short cut-off strips, considered as waste by dealers, are often given away or sold at token price.

7. Transite strips may be placed to full depth in a concrete slab, or inch-wide strips may be placed on a base slab when the final topping is applied. Strips act as a convenient guide for strikeboard in leveling concrete which, here, has been darkened in tone by the addition of lampblack. Strips also provide necessary expansion-contraction joints.

8. An unlimited variety of straight-line patterns may be made with a groover. (The surface has previously been floated.) Take your cue from fabrics, the pattern of your windows, the lines of your fence. A straight-edged board is used here as a guide line.

9. Smooth round, stones, varying in color but uniform in size, are placed individually in freshly leveled concrete. Depress each stone so its belly is slightly below the surface. Then it will not work out of the bed later. A rustic finish of this kind does not produce a good flooring for terrace furniture.

10. Aggregates are exposed by scrubbing away cement and sand after the slab has set hard enough to support weight without tracking. Fiber broom, fiber brush and plenty of water will do the job. Be sure to wash stones clean; only acid will remove cement stains.

11. Most concrete is laid in a single course or layer. However, at times it may be desirable to place a base course, then follow with a finishing course an inch or less in thickness. Here a strikeboard is used in leveling the base course an inch below the level of the side forms. "Ear" on strikeboard rests on the form so that the strikeboard extends an inch below the form.

12. A board or float may be used to sink colored pebbles into the surface of the concrete. If concrete is fairly well set, use a lawn roller. In locations subject to weathering, use pebbles that will not readily disintegrate. If marble chips are used, be sure to select a type with good weathering characteristics. If later disintegration does occur, a relatively inexpensive grinding job will renew the surface which should then be treated with a special penetrating terrazzo sealer.

produce a slick surface for dancing. Not only does such variation heighten interest, but a breaking up into parts invariably results in a diminution in size of the whole. Texture may thus be used to shrink the visual size of a sheet of concrete. Pattern, synonymous in many ways with texture, is also an aid in reducing the scale of an area. Grids or dividers of wood, brass, plastic and such contrasting materials as bricks, slag blocks and tile can be used in creating pattern, or pattern may be stamped or scored into the surface, or scratched like sgraffito.

Not only can pattern save a large bare expanse from monotony, but it has an important structural function in (Please turn to page 77)

Problem here was to create a quick, low-cost way to enrich a small, new house. 13. Square flags are readily cast into a bottomless form, made of 2 x 4's. Set the form directly on the soil or on a strip of building paper. A gang form to produce six or more flags at a time is best if many flags are to be made. Note how these large flags have been scored to add interest.

14. Pouring a large slab of concrete, you will find, requires the efforts of at least two able-bodied men. However, by dividing the slab into squares with a grid, the concrete can be placed a square at a time—an ideal setup for the week-end handyman or the careful craftsman. Redwood, cypress or wood treated to resist rot is used to make the grid. Notch the pieces where they cross, so they interlock egg-crate style. Then the only nailing required is to the stakes. Doing this will prevent the grid from popping out of the concrete.

15. Form of the grid may be varied from the familiar perfectly square pattern. The textured topping in this Florida installation is cinnamon-colored "frozen gravel." Using some areas as planting beds helps achieve a change in color and texture.

16. Pebbled textures, ranging from artful, intricate mosaics and broad-sweeping patterns to simple cobble effects, offer unlimited possibilities for craftsmanship. This texture, in a pool-bottom at the UN, combines white stones of native origin with black pebbles imported from Rhodes.

17. After wood floating, an ordinary household broom may be used to produce a heavily textured nonskid surface. Brooming is usually done in one direction only, but a little ingenuity will help devise ways to yield a herringbone, a figure-8 or cross-hatch pattern. A fiber push-broom produces a heavier texture; a hairbroom, (after steel troweling) a pin-wale corduroy.

18. Pieces of old pavement, usually dumped as without value, can produce a handsome new surface with a quality quite different from flagstone. A rubble pattern, as here, will require negligible trimming. A squared-off style is readily produced: use a stone hammer and a broad chisel.

19. Striking textural effects can be achieved by using squares, hexagons or rounds of concrete in combination with grass, gravel, chips, tanbark or sand. Here a 4″-thick round is being cast in the earth where it is to remain. First, half of the flags are placed, finished off flush with the surface and allowed to harden. Then the in-between flags are poured and finished. This prevents crumbling sides of a mold when another mold is dug close to it.

20. A "coral texture" is achieved by scattering small pieces of coral on the fresh concrete just before it is floated. The wood float, dragging the pieces across the surface, produces a pleasantly pitted surface reminiscent of coral rock. Secondary texture of scored lines is done with a sharp stick, then smoothed with a kalsomine brush.

localizing cracks. Scoring the slab or dividing it by a grid provides planes of weakness along which the slab can crack when cold weather contracts it, thus saving it from unsightly random cracking.

The same brass, white metal and colored plastic strips used as dividers in terrazzo are ideal for use with concrete. Price range for such stripping is from a minimum of seven cents per foot to eighty cents for brass a half inch wide. These plastic and metal strips are flexible and can be shaped to meet almost any design demand.

The basic technique of concrete placement is simple. Typically, one part of portland cement is mixed with two parts sand and four parts crushed stone or gravel. This is (Please turn to page 127)

A Party Dinner Translated from the Creole

By VIRGINIA STANTON

If you've ever been to New Orleans and visited some of the famous restaurants in the Vieux Carré, you know that Europe has no corner on gourmet food. For some of the most exotic cooking in the world is a product of our own Louisiana. It is known far and wide as Creole cookery and, in my opinion, is the most distinguished and intriguing of all the regional "cuisines" of the United States. The dictionary describes Creole as "a person of French or Spanish descent, born and reared in a colonial or remote region." But it takes more than this to explain the suave and tantalizing overtones of seasoning that distinguish a Creole dish. For just as you can see the history of New Orleans reflected architecturally in French courtyards and Spanish delicate iron grillwork, you can taste its history in typical Creole dishes. This fascinating cookery started when the French first gained possession of the territory of Louisiana and the art of food preparation was at its height at the court of France. Haute cuisine was brought to the new world in all its glory, and the city was gay indeed. Then when France ceded Louisiana to Spain, the Spaniards brought their own, highly individual methods of cooking, their more pungent seasonings, their rice and bean dishes. And very soon these two great cookeries were mellowed and blended into one by Negro cooks who had a "know how" of food preparation all their own plus a tradition of African and West Indian cooking to add to the marriage of French and Spanish. For generations, travelers in the West Indies have noted that many island dishes have a surprising similarity to Louisiana Creole foods, especially in such French-influenced places as Haiti, Martinique and Guadeloupe. The very word "gumbo," which we associate at once with Creole, is actually the West Indian patois word for okra. Then, to add to all these influences, it turns out that "filé," the very special, most characteristic Creole seasoning, the tender leaves of sassafras, dried and made into a (Please turn to page 119)

RUG MAKING FOR BEGINNERS

PART 2

Color adds luxury to a rug. Select materials for their basic color, then introduce variations with home-dyeing

Color layout

Arranging materials in this fashion is a useful means of planning colors for a rug. Such a layout might serve for the pattern, too, but whether the final design is free form or fanciful flowers, good colors insure a good rug.

WILLIAM HOWLAND

Haiti Hooked entirely of rags and yarns, this rug is 4′ by 6′. Just two colors and a bit of pattern were added to the "necktie" stripes of the basic design. Variety in the collection of materials and in hooking produce individual quality.

If you want to make exciting rugs, don't insist that some teacher lay down hard and fast rules. Rug making is like painting and cooking: it's an art, not a science. As we explained in Part I, in our June 1955 issue, you can make a rug by one method and one material or a combination of materials and techniques. You can hook, stitch, knot or appliqué, work in any direction and change your plan if you want to.

When you start making rugs, remember that color is as important as design. Your materials, rags or yarn, have original colors which may work out harmoniously. You can undertake to dye the materials or even apply dye to the finished rug. The first job is to plan the distribution of light and dark values: the actual color scheme can be determined later. In a rug, colors tend to intensify: light colors look lighter and dark colors look darker than they actually are.

It's wise to let one color or a closely related group of hues predominate. Keep in mind the room in which you plan to use the rug. Don't try to match the colors of the room, but complement them generally. But don't hesitate to be yourself. Sharpen and add life to colors by working bits of another hue into them. Use different shades of a color. For example, magenta red and scarlet red don't go well together in the form of pieces of material, but do blend and liven each other when worked. Most upholstery colors are grayed. You can tone down colors with taupe, khaki or complementary color dyes, but remember that rug colors dull quickly as the rug is walked on.

I think that the "blotch," which André Malraux calls the most important single invention of modern art, has wonderful untried possibilities for wide use in rug design. It can be used over large areas as a pattern or as an underlay for other patterns. Color and texture can vary and mingle from one blotch to the other. (See "Floor of the Forest," opposite.)

Home-dyeing isn't too difficult and there are many methods. Basically, you wet the material first, wring it out and drop it into a kettle of dye. Add uniodized salt and simmer, stirring occasionally. Then remove it from the dye and rinse until the water is clear. Yarn takes more dye than fabric and every material reacts to dye differently. As a final touch, you can sprinkle dry or wet dye for blotches and blends.

Honeycombs

Appliqué with fur, fringe or fabric

You can add unusual effects to a rug by appliquéing on it pieces of anything, from heavy coat material to furs and portions of old carpets. Appliqué can be in small areas or in large blocks or strips with a few lines of hooking in between. Do the appliqué work before the hooking and if you use a speed hooker from the back, you must mark that part of the pattern on both sides of the rug. Hooking spreads, so don't hook too close to the appliqué.

Leopard has fur sections which stand out in striking contrast to the hooked background. In order to give the fur areas the same soft feel as the hooking, the fur was cemented with Rug-back to a sponge rubber carpet underlay. This was then cemented and sewed to the base fabric. Thick, bulky material such as sheepskin or carpet would not need any underlay. Fabrics used in hooked background were dyed to blend with natural color of leopard skin. Yarns were used for the raised diagonal lines. Light spots were rags cut $\frac{1}{8}$", closely hooked and clipped.

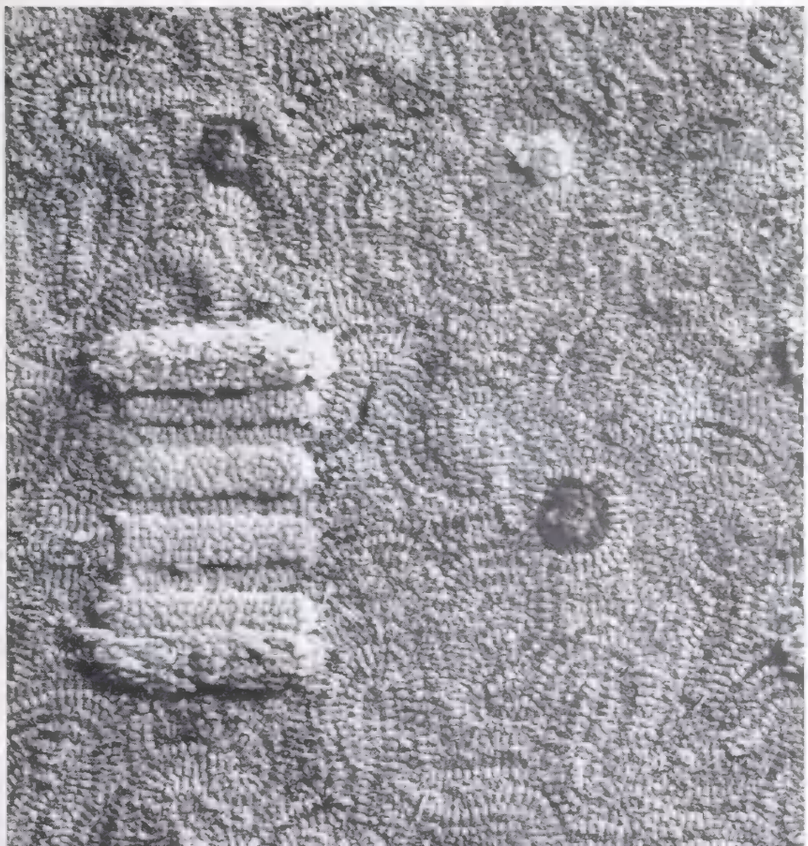
Bob White is hooked of gray felt strips cut $\frac{1}{4}$" wide. The frisky white tabs are appliquéd pieces of wool rug fringe used double. Low hooking or a piece of felt or fabric should cover the backing under each tab of fringe. Hook long loops of heavy yarn at the top of each tab and do a few rows of tight, short hooking up against the long loops to jam them so they fall over the heading and cover it. Loops are clipped and trimmed. Machine stitch the heading of the fringe before you cut it. Rug is fringed to match appliquéd tabs. Some of the raised blocks of yarn are partly outlined in white.

Honeycombs combines an appliqué of folded wool strips with a deep shag of hooked yarn. Rags, yarn and strong cotton string were all dyed the same color. Right-hand corner of photograph shows how wool strip is couched to backing by cotton string. To keep stitches in line, mark the appliqué areas in a graph pattern with a fountain pen, four threads to the square. Stitches should fall like brick joints, one row on the cross lines, the next centered between them. After strips are couched, run heavy yarn diagonally through stitches. Wheat field effect of hooking comes from spacing rows of 2" yarn loops $1\frac{1}{8}$" apart. Use 3 strands of Harmony 2-ply yarn.

Direction changes the texture effect

The direction of stitches and the fall of the yarn can influence the texture of a rug even more than the kind of material used. Hooked loops usually stand up straight. Widely spaced rows of long loops may fall in any direction, as does the shag in Honeycombs, opposite. You can make rows of hooked loops fall in one special direction by jamming rows of short loops tightly up against one side of a row, leaving them free to fall on the other side. Another kind of direction is simply the path in which your hooking lines flow. You can hook in long wavy lines, flowing curves or in neat soldier-like rows. All techniques influence the texture of the rug.

Flowing curves shows importance of the direction of the hooking. Except for the textured yarn and rag blocks, and a few small turquoise dots, the entire interest in this very soft, yellow-green rug comes from its direction. It was worked in ever-curving contour lines in the same way that soutache braid is used. The rags were irregularly dyed in two batches, one lighter, and these were hooked in alternate rows.



Free strokes has a design accentuated and enriched by hooking in sweeping free lines 10 shades of a deep color and 10 shades of light beige and off-white rags. A few free pencil strokes were marked between the darker stripes on the base to serve as guide lines. All-over patterns have a quality that makes them "stay on the floor" even when dark and light color contrasts are very bold and dashing.

Bergen was made by a combination of methods. The central area, where the yarn all falls in one direction, is needle-knotted and the outer border is hooked. The longer loops of the hooked border were sheared very irregularly. Beige and white yarn was needle knotted in rows 8 threads apart on warp cloth base, white pattern 4 warp threads apart. Later 2 rows of short, double-strand loops were hooked in as filler at top of each row of beige and white knots.

A blessed blender in the home

By ALICE B. TOKLAS
Author of "The Alice B. Toklas Cookbook."

Do the good friends who sent me the electric blender possibly realize to what an extent it has revolutionized my daily life and liberated me from the struggle of finding time to do what must be done and give me the compensating hours to do what I want to do? I think not. For them the blender is a reality; for me it is a miracle. Now that it has been my most precious possession for several months it has taught me two important facts, that it is possible to prepare with it most of the great French dishes in no more time than it does the simplest of food without it and that it permits one to cook, to serve and to be free to remain at table with one's guests.

Fresh fruits and peeled raw vegetables, after a few minutes in the blender, are creamier, more delicate and flavorsome than those from a tin. A blender should lead us back to fresh food with undisturbed and unimproved flavors. Tomato juice, after one or two minutes in the blender, comes from a celestial sphere. It is marvelous as a sauce to spoon over young spring lettuces. Excellent, too, is a crushed fresh fruit dessert, a single fruit or combination of peaches and strawberries in equal parts, or pears or raspberries, preferably unsweetened. A tablespoon of Kirsch or any liquor of your choice may be added. Served with whipped cream, it is a luscious dessert for unexpected guests.

Yes, the possibilities of the blender are endless. It has become necessary for me to limit my imagination. The budget does not stand the strain.

But let us commence with the right way to make one of France's greatest dishes, the delicate morsels of forcemeat of fish, called quenelles.

Godiveau Lyonnaise or Quenelles

Place in the blender the yolks of 3 eggs with ⅔ cup of flour, 4 tablespoons melted butter. Blend one minute and while blender is still running add ⅔ cup hot milk. Keep blending until perfectly smooth, place in a small saucepan over medium heat and cook about 6 minutes stirring constantly. Put aside to cool. This mixture is called panada.

Place in the bottom of the blender the whites of 2 eggs, then add ½ pound fat from beef's kidney, skin removed, and cut into small cubes. When perfectly smooth remove from the blender with a rubber spatula and replace with ½ pound cubed pike weighed after bones and skin have been removed (Use perch if you can't get pike—Poppy Cannon). Add ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg; in about 3 minutes add the panada, fat and egg mixture. Blend first at low speed, then at high speed until perfectly smooth and very fine.

ALICE B. TOKLAS, reared in California but a resident of France for 45 years, is probably the world's leading gourmet because she can cook at the same high level of perfection as she talks and writes about food. Until the electric blender came into her life she had not been willing to use any of the modern short-cuts because she felt they subtracted from perfection. Here are 12 famous French recipes with preparation time speeded up, thanks to the blender.

This mixture is now ready to be rolled between floured hands into finger lengths and poached for 5 minutes in salted water, 1 teaspoon to the quart. Be careful the quenelles do not stick to the bottom of the pan or together. Remove from water with perforated spoon and place on a kitchen towel to dry; pat them quite dry. They are now ready to be simmered for 10 minutes in whatever sauce is to be served with them. They may be served around a boiled fish in a cream sauce or in the juice of a braised chicken or around a roast veal or they may be served by themselves as an entree. In which case the sky is the limit for the sauce you choose, providing your choice is a delicate one. One which can be recommended is:

Sauce Royal

Prepare a chicken velouté. Warm 4 cups of chicken bouillon; place 1 cup in the blender along with 4 tablespoons softened butter, 4 tablespoons flour, blend till perfectly smooth. Add 3 green onions cut into pieces and blend a few seconds, just long enough to chop the onions. Add the sauce in the blender to the rest of the heated bouillon and simmer 1 hour, stirring occasionally to prevent scorching.

Place 6 tablespoons truffles (3-ounce tin) along with ¼ cup chicken bouillon into the blender and blend until the particles practically disappear. As the sauce cooks, gradually add ½ cup chicken bouillon. At the end of the simmering add ½ cup heavy cream. Then strain, replace over heat and stir in the truffles from the blender. When the sauce boils, carefully add the quenelles. Cover and simmer gently for 10 minutes. Then add ⅓ cup butter, cut in small pieces, and 2 tablespoons good, dry sherry. Do not allow the sauce to boil; do not stir, but gently tip the saucepan in all directions. When the butter is melted and the sherry is amalgamated, serve.

Salmon Soufflé

This is another one of France's gastronomic achievements.

Some people might prefer to call this a mousse rather than a soufflé. It is moist, fine-textured rather than puffy, and unbrowned. Place in the bottom of the blender the whites of two eggs, then 1⅓ cups cubed raw salmon measured after bones, skin and fat have been removed. Add ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, blend at low speed until fish and eggs form a smooth paste. Then turn to high speed and blend until the particles are very fine. Place in bowl surrounded with cracked ice. Do not place in refrigerator, it has not the same effect.

Beat, not too stiff, two cups of heavy cream and add it to the fish and whites of egg mixture surrounded by ice. Beat the whites of 4 eggs very stiff but not dry, and gently fold them into the mixture which you will now remove from ice and pour into a buttered soufflé dish sufficiently deep to permit the soufflé to rise. Stand in a pan of hot but not boiling water and bake in a moderate (350° F.) oven for about 40 minutes. Remove the soufflé gently from the dish and serve surrounded with shrimp sauce. Recipe follows:

Shrimp Sauce

Make 4 cups of fish fumet or stock, using 1 pound of heads, tails and fins. Your fishman, if he is amiable, will give them to you. If he is not, buy ½ pound of whiting, hake or fresh cod. Cover with 4 cups cold water, ½ cup dry white wine, add 1 sliced carrot, 1 sliced leek, 1 sliced onion and 5 whole peppercorns, a bouquet of parsley, ½ bay leaf, a sprig of thyme, 1 clove garlic, a few grains freshly grated nutmeg. Add ½ teaspoon sea salt. Cover and cook slowly for 2 hours. (Regular salt will do but sea salt, which you can buy from health food shops, has more flavor, because it is less refined—P.C.).

Make a blond roux by adding to 3 tablespoons melted butter, ¼ cup flour. When perfectly smooth slowly add the strained fish fumet. Cook slowly 20 minutes skimming any fat that may rise to the surface. Add 5 tablespoons heavy cream and cook uncovered until the sauce is reduced by one quarter.

During this time boil, shell and remove the black vein from ¾ pound jumbo shrimp. (Or you may use deveined quick-frozen jumbo shrimp in their shells.—P.C.) Place in the blender 1 cup of the fish stock and the shells and heads of the shrimp with 5 tablespoons softened butter and 4 or 5 of the smaller shrimp. Blend until perfectly smooth and very fine. Add to the sauce, heat the shelled shrimps in the sauce and pour around your soufflé.

Proudly House Beautiful shows Europe

These are our neighbors

At four European fairs, visitors to traveling exhibitions of "Main Street, U.S.A." will see these pictures of pleasant neighbors, the community in which the exhibited houses are usually to be found. And they will be told that more than half of America's families own their homes.

Invited by the United States Government, we have helped set up life-size exhibitions of "Main Street, U.S.A." for millions to see at the great International Fairs of Milan, Paris, Barcelona, and Bari in Europe. The houses exhibited are shown on these 10 pages. The sponsors are:

Recently, we were invited by the U.S. Department of Commerce to help prepare exhibitions for the many International Trade Fairs which President Eisenhower decided the United States would participate in this year.

In turn, we at HOUSE BEAUTIFUL have invited American industry to join us in presenting the people of Europe with a life-size picture of how Americans live. Our co-sponsors for the exhibitions are listed above. The over-all theme and plan for "Main Street, U.S.A." were designed by Peter Schladermundt Associates, New York.

The reception in Italy and France has been close to sensational. Instead of seeing small, boxy apartments looking out on sooty, city streets, as they had been led to expect of American life, visitors to the Milan and Paris Fairs have been amazed at the open spaciousness of the exhibition rooms with their views of pleasant gardens and pleasant neighbors. They were told that 57% of American families own their homes—and that figure is increasing yearly.

For one of the traveling exhibitions, we chose three rooms from a partially prefabricated house, sold by Scholz Homes, Inc. for $14,000, including all appliances and a large 60′ x

120′ lot. We furnished, decorated and photographed these rooms in Toledo, Ohio. You can see them for yourself on this page and on the three following. (Don't fail to unfold the first color form.)

Then, with the aid of participating manufacturers, we shipped two identical sets of these rooms to Europe, where they were recreated exactly, down to the smallest accessory, for a series of appearances at the International Trade Fairs.

For another of the traveling exhibitions, we chose a complete $12,500 house (also including a 60′ x 120′ lot) prefabricated by National Homes Corporation. We furnished, decorated and photographed it in Lafayette, Indiana, for exact duplication at the Barcelona Trade Fair. In the fall it will "play" another Fair in Bari, Italy. Pictures of this home begin with a full spread of color on pages 90 and 91, and continue in black and white for three more.

What is the significance of all this for readers of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, who have seen homes as good and some far better (if costlier) than these already published in our pages? This above all: These are not "just some more houses and some more furnishings." They are, as visitors to the International Fairs are being told, representative homes of American school teachers, office workers or skilled workers—carpenters, plumbers, bricklayers, mechanics. They represent the high standards toward which housing in America is tending, not only for slightly-above-average income families, but for those below.

To a surprising number of Americans, particularly to those who have been long pent in cities, it will come as a shock, and a welcome one, we trust, to discover that housing has moved upward so swiftly, further proof of the rapid climb of America's millions to levels of living unprecedented in the story of man. What has brought this about? Why are the fine houses shown here now becoming just average? Because, in our opinion, people wouldn't accept the average or minimum house of yesterday. They wanted something better then, and they want something now even better than what we are showing. Consequently they continue to push the average higher and higher. It is this restless pursuit of perfection (Please turn the page) in production, in consumption, in living in general, that has elevated American life and brought the golden age of the common consumer. We at HOUSE BEAUTIFUL are convinced that this golden age has been brought about because the common consumer is distinctly not interested in being common. He doesn't want to live an average or minimum life. And that is why, we believe, America is exploding with new ideas, new interests, new standards of living. If it is difficult for some of us to understand this dynamism in American attitudes, imagine the difficulty of the European visitor to these exhibits.

This spacious, comfortable house could be the home of a school teacher or a skilled mechanic. It represents the high standard toward which housing in America is tending, even for families only recently considered below-average income. Such is the story of America.

He will see how handsome these rooms are (somewhat suspicious of American "propaganda"), but he will not understand how far we have come from the past, and how far, if we continue our current rate of climb, we shall go in the future. He will see the physical aspects of an American house, but he will not see the movement of the people within it.

However, when he and his wife see what Americans demand from a home, we wager they'll understand. They'll understand what it means to have a home with at least one bathroom, with plenty of hot, running water, with an abundance of sunlight and electric light, with air and space and green surroundings. And they'll understand, as some of our own intellectuals do not, the freedom offered by washing machines and dishwashers, vacuum cleaners and automobiles and refrigerators.

As Russell Davenport pointed out in his recent, remarkable book, The Dignity of Man, "These things are no longer considered luxuries. Together with dozens of similar items, they have been incorporated by the (Continued overleaf)

This is how Americans are living at the mid-point of the 20th Century. These rooms testify to the explosion of new ideas, new tastes, new standards of living that are characterizing our unprecedented period. "The statistics of this change," one observer reports, "are all around us—and are exciting in themselves. But even more significant, and less easily recognized, is the new pattern. Today's workingman and woman have discovered that graceful living is far from inconsistent with productive labor," and are living accordingly.

There are air, space and comfort, even in our more modest homes. The wide windows open on green surroundings and good neighbors. The quality of the furnishings is consistently high, and at a price that most people can afford. What is more remarkable, is the noticeable improvement in taste, as compared with interiors of only yesterday.

Foreign visitors, particularly the women, will quickly grasp the true meaning of American appliances—the real freedom offered by our excellent equipment, the vast improvement they make in the daily details of homemaking. They will understand that far more is involved here than mere gadgetry, that a new and expanded life is before them.

Visitors to the United States are often most struck by the fact that virtually every family, even in "lower" income groups, has an automobile, and, hence, must have a garage or a carport, as here.

Proudly we show Europe how Americans live

Besides the extremely economical use of floor space and centering of service facilities, most noteworthy in the plan of this $12,500 house is the large patio, integrated between carport and house and hidden from view by a privacy fence.

Department of Labor into its cost-of-living index, which, in turn, is used by many corporations and unions to measure the fairness of their wage rates. The American way of life does not 'guarantee' all these things to everybody, and could not do so even if it wanted to. But it is driving in the direction of fulfilling the ideal of happiness in these terms."

No one concerned with American life, least of all the late Mr. Davenport, believes that the products of industry are the sole means to happiness. However, they certainly offer the conditions for it. The miracle of America is not in its industrialization, but in the fact that so many participate in its benefits. The wonder of America is not that there are beautiful homes, but that so many are beautifully housed. The hope of America is not in the high level of the present, but in the higher level of tomorrow. The example of America is not in a few exhibition rooms, but in the experience of American life itself—a family in a garden on a long two-day week end, in a living room with a world of music at its fingertips, in the private world of an individual bedroom. The meaning of America is not in its photographs, but in the life of its people. (Please turn page)

Most newly built American houses are designed to have a look-through effect which adds visual spaciousness to otherwise small rooms. Similarly, they are furnished to make maximum use of all wall space.

This entire house cost $12,500 continued

What must be kept uppermost in mind as one studies the pictures of this exhibition house is the fact that they represent the new average in American living. Yesterday's luxury items, such as television sets, are today's standard necessities.

Although the appliances shown on this page are not included in the cost of this $12,500 house, they are certainly becoming part of the equipment expected in the American home. To the left is a laundry-storage area with a fully automatic washer-and-dryer.

For a list of construction materials and furnishings see page 115

One aspect of American life that is illustrated by these two views of the kitchen below is this: In practically no time at all, the most advanced technological tools of efficient homemaking are made available to the common consumer at a cost that he can afford and in a style that would credit the homes of the far wealthier.

The American explosion in living has penetrated every part of the house: kitchen, living room, bedroom, garden. It has meant an expansion in two directions: More people have more money to buy more things, and more and more people want the best. In the article below, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's editor comments on its full significance.

HOW HIGH IS UP?

By ELIZABETH GORDON, Editor

How high is up? This has always been considered an impossible question. Actually it is not. Up is as high as we want to make it. Our standard of living is up as high as we wish to take it. That's the heart of the story of the exhibits traveling the world to show the world "Main Street, U.S.A."

Since these rooms will be displayed at International Trade Fairs, let's talk trade-talk, and let's talk it directly to industry in America, particularly to those who are concerned with the home—its design, its furniture, its products.

These exhibits, set up by government and business, are aimed at presenting people abroad with a three-dimensional picture of what their own future could be like. They offer a vision of what is truly possible since it is now available. What then, we ask, is the aim of industry for America? Do all its members realize that they are aiming at a moving target and that to hit it, they must lead it? That they are producing for a consumer whose rate of climb is so fast that, if they set their sights on last year's demands, they'll miss their market by at least two years or more?

From the vantage point of my position at HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, I am more convinced than ever that we are entering a period of expansion, so without precedent, that our old, cautious, statistical methods and attitudes can be a hindrance, for statistics are based, of necessity, on the past. The people themselves have a vision of their future which is far beyond the vision of America we are presenting abroad; it is far more exciting and elevated than the vision many segments of industry have of the same future. These latter still suffer from the tendency of grading their products down, of emphasizing the minimum, of giving less to more people, which has never been a permanent part of our history or our performance.

As a matter of fact, never have so many wanted so much, and of such good quality. Everything we see about the common man indicates he is not common. He doesn't want to live a common life, as we pointed out previously. And only recently has there been a serious study of his expanding taste and ambition, spearheaded by four books: Fortune's U.S.A.—The Permanent Revolution, The Big Change by Frederick Lewis Allen, The Next America by Lyman Bryson, and Creating an Industrial Civilization, edited by Eugene Staley.

What is this "big change" that wise observers are studying? What is happening at the American mid-century? It has been called "The American Explosion" by Fenton B. Turck, who describes it in these words in the Scientific Monthly:

"Once in a great while the tempo of progress quickens. A society explodes in a flood of new ideas, new tastes, new standards. A fresh and exciting age emerges, marked by changed attitudes, changed customs, changed goals—and alive with expanded opportunities for those who first recognize the new sign-posts and have the courage to follow them. . . .

"The statistics of this change are all around us—and are exciting in themselves. But even more (Please turn to page 110)

Do you know about that new summer convenience

TENSION SCREENS?

For windows, porches or cabanas, this new method of screening saves work and storage space, preserves the full view

This year when you screen windows or porches for summer comfort, you can use aluminum or fiber glass screening in the new tension method. Instead of being tacked to a bulky frame, the screening is slipped into slim aluminum bars at top and bottom, with the sides left free. The top bar is hooked to the top of the window casing, the bottom bar to the window sill. This actually stretches the screening, producing a tension which holds it neatly taut. With side frames eliminated, no part of the view from the window is sacrificed. Tension screens are wonderfully convenient: they can be put up from indoors, mounted either inside or outside the window as you prefer, and rolled into small packages for winter storage.

Tension screens cost less than you usually pay for old-style screens with frames. They are available at most hardware and department stores in all standard window sizes—odd sizes are easy to cut. In sizing a tension screen, be sure to measure full width and length of window trim holding present framed screen.

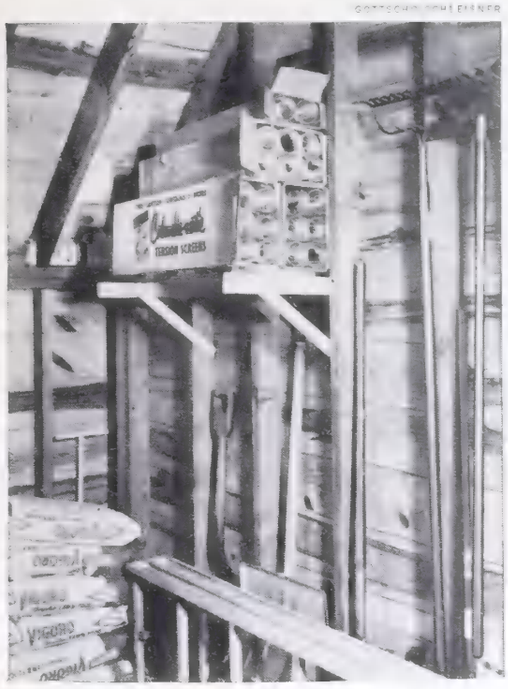
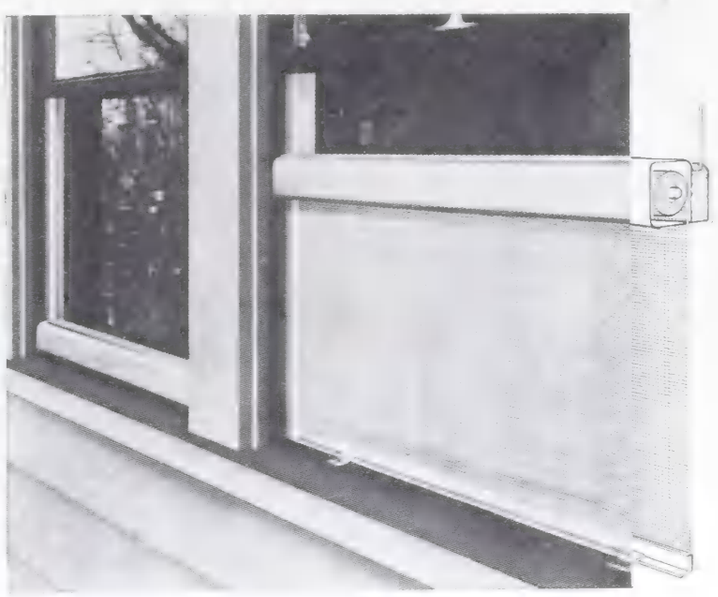
Allows for panoramic screening

Screening a porch like this at the Arthur Bond home (upper left) used to involve cluttering the view with a series of small frames. Now such an opening can have a single, frameless tension screen (since screening is woven only 6 feet wide, here tightening clips would be screwed on vertical posts instead of top and bottom, the usual position illustrated in the smaller photographs). Notice that screening, although hung outside, goes on from indoors. It rolls easily, won't "sail away" in a wind while you try to attach it the way a big framed screen tends to do.





Eliminate need for heavy framing

Wonderfully light and transparent effects are possible now because inherent strength of screening under tension supplies the rigidity that formerly came from bulky big posts. Delicate aluminum frame of this new screen house is somewhat shaky until tension screens are locked into place, then whole house becomes amazingly strong (a 35-mile wind whistled through our newly erected house just before we made this photograph). Two people can erect whole house in 30 minutes. Everything slips back into original packing cartons for easy winter storage.

Roll up for space-saving winter storage

Here are 20 full-length window screens rolled for storage in the cartons they came in (ends of cartons left open only to show screens). These are aluminum; fiber glass kinds roll even smaller.

Can be permanently attached roll screens

"Screen-o-matic" shown here, remains outside house, unrolls automatically as window goes up, rewinds out of sight as window is closed. Another version, Pella "Rolscreen" attaches inside at top of window (good for casements, double-hung windows and also to enclose porches). In operation these screens are attached to clips at each side of the sill.

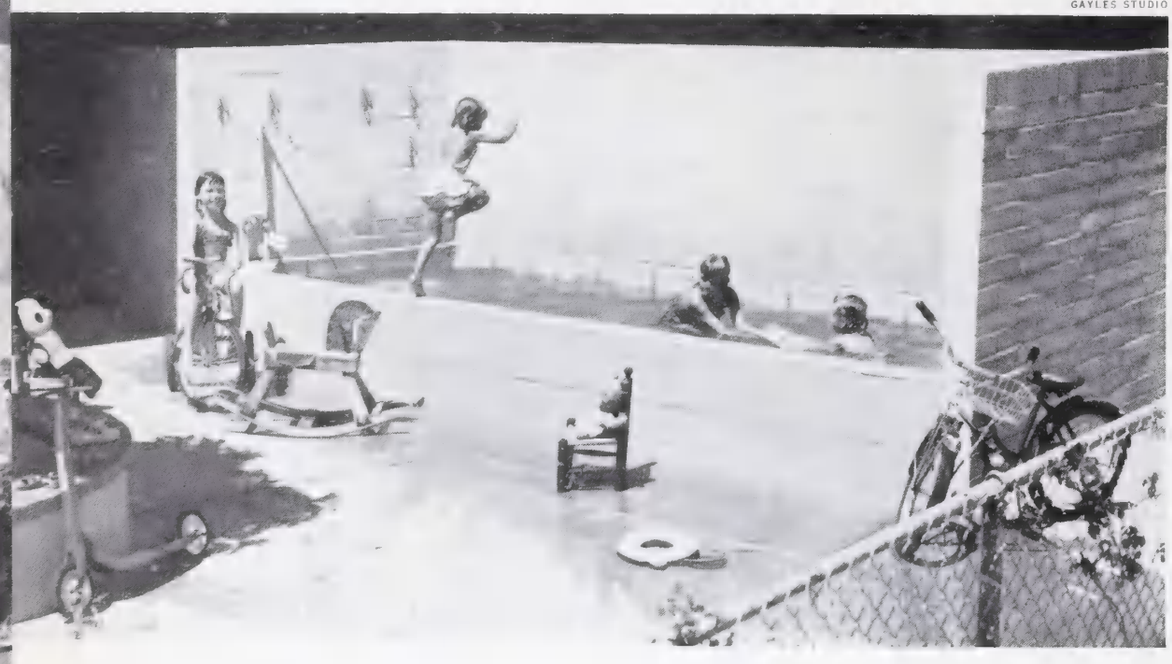
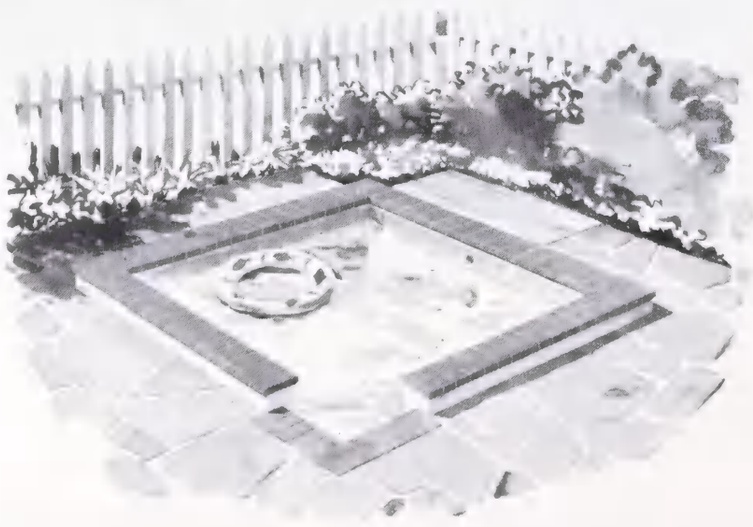
Pools to get you wet don't cost a mint

Put a cool little oasis in your own back yard. Children can splash happily in plastic wading pond, and even adults can paddle a bit in a junior-sized pool built in your garden for as little as $100



If you've toyed with the seductive notion of building a swimming pool, but can't cope with problems of cost and space, consider the merits of a junior-sized plunge.

Any small, level plot has room for a plastic or canvas wading pool. New ones are comfortable, easy to store and set up. Properly used, they won't damage the lawn grasses.



Even a permanent or semi-permanent children's pool can be as elaborate or as simple as you choose. Those shown here, designed and built by young fathers, cost from $100 to $526. If you install a small pool, plan to use it later for some decorative garden effect, such as a planting bed or reflecting pool. Keep in mind the relation between it and the rest of the garden: an awkward expanse of water detracts from a garden's beauty.

Now some caution: Building costs and problems vary widely. In some areas you must consider possible frost damage and soil conditions, such as excessive clay content. (Presence of clay rules out just digging a hole and using the soil as one side of the form for the concrete wall: concrete must be separated from clay by a gravel fill.) Where pools are common, equipment such as pumps and filters may be easier to find. And be sure to get some good advice from a local pool expert before you start digging up your back yard!

GAYLES STUDIO

An outdoor bathtub is a pleasant feature of this play yard, which is planned for future use as a service yard. Hot and cold water faucets make showers and shampoos an outdoor delight. Children can paddle around happily and safely in the tank when it is full. Mother hangs wet clothes on a line stretched from hooks on the wall when children aren't using tank. Pull the plug and water drains under paving. Drain is channeled to the tree.

Decorative 6-foot-square pool, built for a 5-year-old girl, is a refreshing plunge for adults on hot days. A. C. Putnam plans to use it as a garden reflecting pool after his daughter grows up. Underwater lighting was installed during construction. Costs were about $250. Construction details of this pool, page 125.

A wonderful summer retreat for two small boys—and all their friends—is this 16′ by 6′ pool of durable poured-concrete construction built by Elmer Curry. It is 39″ deep, raised 24″ above grade. The pool is filled with a hose and emptied by a small pump. Water is chlorinated, changed every two weeks. Costs were about $100. Details of this pool, page 126.

If you build a dunking pool, plan to make it useful when the children have grown up. This pool, at the home of Philip B. Fouke Jr., is 3½′ deep inside, permitting youngsters to swim, adults to splash. The brick wall, 18″ above the patio floor, is an ideal seat or ledge for trays and drinks. In later years the pool can be converted to an attractive planting bed.

ALPIN-DUDLEY STUDIO

Water cascades from rustic wading pool into the large pool, is then recirculated through a filter into the wading pool. Smaller pool is safe for toddlers.

Pools to get you wet don't cost a mint

A real swimming pool, large enough for the whole family to enjoy, was built by the owner in this garden for $526

If you know how to handle solid construction materials, you may want to install an adult-sized pool. The Roy Wilson Jr., family of Santa Paula, Calif., which includes four daughters from ten months to ten years built a pool the girls can use through their teens.

An oval tank was designed to fit the terrain. The deep end was set low on a natural slope and rock fill placed to support sides of the pool and form a deck around it. The shallow end was put higher on the slope. A waterfall was created by piping water to enter the pool in a cascade from a small rustic wading pond. Smaller children splash safely in this pond while the larger ones paddle around below.

Water circulation and sanitation is handled by a ½ h.p. pump and a surplus Navy filtration unit. (This is the kind of equipment which may be scarce and more expensive in other localities.) Pump and filter are set behind a split redwood fence which encloses the pool on two sides for privacy.

Total construction costs to date for this pool are $526.48, including excavation help, $72; pre-mixed concrete, $164.48; filter, $40; pump, $90; plastering, $90; paint, $70. Maintenance costs are about $5 per month during the season, mostly for chlorine and diatomaceous earth used in the water filter.

Construction detail shows how oval excavation was lined with reinforced wire mesh. Pre-mixed concrete was formed into a 4" slab. The deck and steps were poured in forms over rock fill. A professional plasterer was hired to finish the surface.

"Good rum cools the heat..."

There is an old saying in New England that "Good rum cools the heat and heats the cold: wets the dry and dries the wet!"

By POPPY CANNON

What's new under this summer's sun is rum—the finest rums that have ever been made, more delicate, more subtle, lighter in body yet most exquisitely flavored and served in new ways as straight as can be, on the rocks, in highballs, with soda, tonic water, perhaps a little lime or lemon or bitters but no fuss, few frills to mar or blur its basic excellence.

Rum is our historic American drink. It is in a very real sense our own, our native spirit, even though an ancestor known as arak was distilled, not from molasses, but from sugar cane in China, 800 years before the Christian Era.

The "spirit" made from molasses is directly associated with the discovery of America by Columbus, who brought sugar cane from the Canary Islands on his second trip and set foot on what is now the United States when he landed at that "rich port" which he named Puerto Rico.

Some savants believe that Ponce de Leon, whom Columbus appointed as first governor of the Island, did not discover the Fountain of Youth among the artesian springs of St. Augustine. They think he brought to Florida in the hold of his ship certain "liquors of life." These he made of mountain waters and a sunny distillate that came from the sugar cane fields sloping away from his hacienda. Walls of the hacienda still stand draped in crepe myrtle, ringed by feathery slim wands of bamboo trees and the heavy polished green of mangoes.

In the course of centuries, rum has traveled far afield and taken on many different hues and aspects, becoming sometimes blonde as Rhine wine in certain parts of Cuba, growing darker and heavier in the Barbados and Jamaica and almost black, thick and sweetly aromatic in the ancient land of Demerara, now called British Guiana.

Rums of Puerto Rico. Rum has now come full circle back to its homeland in Puerto Rico. This year almost 70% of all rums in the United States come from there. Several other island rums have moved wholly or in part to Puerto Rico. Take Myers's for instance. While their famous heavy-dark Jamaica rum is still made in Jamaica, as it has been for the past 75 years and will continue to be, Myers has brought out a new rum—very dry, very pale typically Puerto Rican. The same holds true for the Bacardi company who still make their traditional rum in Cuba but are now also making a Puerto Rican Bacardi which, incidentally, represents 90% of their sales on the mainland. A generation ago Government House was one of the great rums native to the Virgin Islands, now it's happily acclimated in Puerto Rico and is no longer made in St. Croix.

Within the last few years the islanders have awakened to heady possibilities. Connoisseurs began some years back to say to each other that there are three places in the world where the earth, the air, the water and hereditary skills of men conspire to produce certain matchless liquors. These are the vineyards of Cognac for brandy, the peat-lands of Scotland for Scotch, and the mountain rivers and sugar cane fields of Puerto Rico for rum.

But the rums of Puerto Rico have an added advantage, a backing unmatched, as far as I know, in all the world's history. Every bottle of Puerto Rican rum made to sell is strictly quality controlled by the Puerto Rican Government which has also set up under its Economic Development Administration a rum pilot plant with a small-scale distillery. Here every aspect of rum manu- (Please turn to page 106) facture—raw materials, sugar cane, molasses, yeast, water, distilling methods, blending and bottling are carefully studied. Every rum maker in Puerto Rico, no matter how mighty or how small, has access to this group of experts engaged primarily in fundamental research but ready to provide answers to all sorts of specific problems.

Science, it's wonderful! But the crux of the matter, at the rum pilot plant or around your own ice bucket, is flavor.

A Blithe and Versatile Spirit

Many Americans still have a disdainful attitude toward rum, which dates back to the days of World War II when other spirits were scarce and you took rum because you couldn't have anything else.

But a light dry rum is the most versatile of all distilled spirits. It is at one and the same time a neat drink, a blithe mixer, a "blazing" and a cooking spirit. As S. S. Field remarks in his delightful American Drink Book (Farrar, Straus & Young), "No other liquor can be used in so many ways without making itself positively hateful . . . in the drinks it is strong, with food unobtrusive as a cooking wine, and in a brandy glass it speaks with authority and a seasoned composure." He is referring, of course, to the light dry brandy-like rums of Puerto Rico rather than the heavy pungent "rummy" rums, which are chiefly used as flavoring agents.

Color is not an infallible indication of dryness in rums. Puerto Rican rums, for instance, are marketed under gold and white labels, and often the color depends merely upon the addition of some gilding ingredient.

What is important in the evolution of a fine rum is not only the sugar cane and the molasses, made as a by-product after the sugar has been crystallized, but also the yeast used in the fermentation of the molasses.

Then, of course, the water! At the Don Q distillery in Ponce, which lies across several mountain ranges to the southwest of San Juan, water is piped from the Inabond River 24 miles away. It is purified by chlorination and afterward filtered through sand and carbon to remove any trace of chlorine flavor.

The type of sugar cane, the time of harvest, the method of crushing, the three crystallizations and centrifuging of the molasses are all important. And the yeast used in the fermenting of the molasses is crucial.

All Puerto Rican rums are pure straight rums, for there is a law which prohibits the blending of rums with neutral spirits or grain alcohol. All Puerto Rican rums are also aged, since there is a law, cozily termed the Mature Spirits Act, prohibiting the bottling of any rum less than three years old or its use in blending.

While Federal Regulations require that straight whiskey must be distilled at less than 160 proof, rums run as high as, but not exceeding, 189. What's more, Puerto Rican rums are aged before blending and aged after blending. The union is mellow, spirited, but without harshness.

No Confessions

Fine rums, from whatever area, are as individual as fine wines and their makers as individualistic as great vintners. Behind the nuances are secrets which are precious legacies passed on from one generation to another.

But the mystery of mysteries lies in the final flavoring, those infinitesimal additions which give each rum its separate identity. Here no one tells anything.

However, you can come by the secrets of judging a fine rum. We are concentrating now only upon the light, dry drinking rums—not the darker black strap mixing or flavoring rums, which are in a class by themselves.

How to Judge

First, you must pour a little rum into a clear glass and hold it up to a strong light to judge its color and particularly its clarity and sparkle. Then you will, if you follow the experts, rub a bit of it into the palms of your hands and cup your hands in front of your nose to sniff the fragrance. It is amazing how quickly any raw, sharp, alcoholic fumes will assail you. Afterward you must take a swallow. It is not enough, as in wine, to roll the liquor around your mouth. For it is most important that the rum should be "smooth going down your throat." And then you must wait at least two or three minutes, for poor rum "makes a bad impression on the stomach." To be agreeable a rum must "hit you right." A fine rum "gives a good glow" to your whole system.

Finally, you must be sensitive to any after-impressions. There must be nothing strange or rough, coarse, metallic, or astringent.

Which Is Best?

When you ask which rum is best of all, each connoisseur has a different answer. On the island itself there are at least two first-place contenders that are not exported, since both are what might be termed highly individual spirits made in small quantities by people who do not wish "to go into production." These are Ron Superieur and the rum known as Barralita.

No one but a precious snob need yearn for the unexported Superieur when they can buy at any fine shop in the United States Don Q (Gold Label), distributed by Schieffelin, or the Boca Chica of "21" Brands, which is made in the same great distillery owned by the charming baronial Serralles clan.

The Bacardi (Gold Label), now made in Puerto Rico, is a worthy recipient of much admiration and so are Ronrico rums, which are all four years old. And there are glowing Renfield's Riondo; Merito; Bruegal and Carioca. Christopher Columbus, an elegant ash-blonde, and the honey-hued drinking Myers's Gold Label, quite a contrast to the heavy Myers's "Planter's Punch" rum of Jamaica.

Fashion Is Not Spinach

Now that rums have become fine enough to stand on their own, we are witnessing at this very moment a great change in the nature of rum drinks. No longer in vogue is a "lot of spinach" or "fruit salad," elaborate mixtures and garnishes.

More often than not, rum goes on the rocks companioned by nothing more than a dash of Trinidad's world renowned Angostura bitters and or a twist of lemon, orange or lime peel.

Rum highballs or shortballs generally call for white label Puerto Rican rum with ice, "branch water," soda or ginger ale.

Rum and tonic is as cool and comforting and somewhat more unusual than gin and tonic. A slice of lemon or lime adds the perfume of the peel and a pattern to delight the eye.

Despite our current love for the neat drink, the world would be a poor place and summer an impoverished season if we were to deny our American heritage of mixed rum drinks—if we were to forget the venerable Rum Sour, its cousin the Rum Swizzle, its kinsman the Collins, the Daiquiri and the minty Northside cocktail.

Colonial Rum Sour

Without the influence of rum, it has been said, there might have been no Declaration of Independence, for the original bone of contention between Mother England and her American colonies was not entirely the issue of equality for all men but rather the protection of rum profits which had been threatened in 1733 by the "iniquitous" Molasses Act. This act prohibited the importation of that basic essential to rum from any except the British Islands, where Crown taxes made it much more expensive than that of the French islands.

Certainly a great deal of unofficial eloquence and oratory must have been nurtured by "this simple punch . . . the oldest-known mixed drink in the New World." It originated in the Spanish West Indies ". . . where triple-distilled rum dripped into a giant conch shell, lemons and limes grew wild beside the potstill. . . ." And so, perhaps, not wild but rampant, did the pineapple which provides its classic garnish.

A traditional rum sour for one calls for the juice of ½ lemon, ½ teaspoon sugar, 1½ ounces (that's a jigger or 3 tablespoons) Puerto Rican Rum (Gold Label). Shake well with cracked ice, strain into a chilled sour-glass and garnish with half of an orange slice, a pineapple stick, a maraschino cherry, maybe. You know of course, that you can now buy pineapple sticks in jars and glasses.

Rum Sour, 1955

Pity our poor forebears. Lemons were scarce, expensive and had to be squeezed by hand. Now we have the quick-frozen lemonade concentrate which for a rum sour you can use right from the tin. Add 1 tablespoon lemonade concentrate to a jigger of rum. Forget the sugar, shake with ice and serve with the requisite garnish.

Rum Swizzle

A swizzle is simply a sour sometimes made individually in a highball glass but more appropriately churned up in a glass or metal pitcher with a swizzle stick until it attains a foamy look and frosts the pitcher well. In the West Indies where the drink originated, swizzle sticks are made only of one certain kind of wood which is supposed to impart an aromatic flavor to the drink. You will be given one of these swizzle sticks when you go to visit the Angostura bitters bar in Port-au-Spain, Trinidad.

Meanwhile, however, you can be content with a swizzler of bamboo, plastic or silver with or without short blades or fingers attached to the shaft. It's fun to do your swizzling with the proper gesture, holding the end of the wand between the palms of your two hands almost in an attitude of prayer and then rotating the swizzle stick by sliding your hands back and forth. According to strict tradition only crushed or shaved ice is appropriate for the swizzle, but, since it is chilling and diluting rather than foaming that is important, ice cubes de nature are used more and more frequently. The half-inch ice cubes are ideal.

To swizzle for six faster than fast: Fill a pitcher half to two-thirds full of ice. Add 6 tablespoons (half of a 6-ounce tin) of quick-frozen limeade concentrate. Lemonade concentrate will do, but it is not quite so authentic. Then into the pitcher go 12 ounces (1½ cups) of rum (Gold or White Label) and 6 dashes of Angostura bitters. Swizzle till well frosted. Do not strain but serve complete with ice and garnish with sprigs of mint or a bit of cucumber peel. Even though you use the concentrate, toss a halved, slightly squeezed lime into the pitcher.

Rum Cocktails

All over the West Indies there are various versions of the rum cocktail, but basically they are all the same—a combination of white or gold rum, lime juice, a touch of sweetening. Probably the most popular all over the world is the daiquiri, always made from a very light, white and dry rum. Classic proportions for two cocktails are the juice of 1 lime (2 tablespoons), 1 teaspoon powdered sugar, 3 ounces (2 jiggers) (White Label) rum. Shake well with cracked ice and strain into a well-chilled cocktail glass. Often the glass has a frosty sugared rim. To achieve this professional touch simply dampen the rim of the glass with lemon or lime juice and dip into a saucer in which there is a half-inch of sugar.

Once again the quick-frozen concentrates provide blissful ease and uniformity. Instead of limes and sugar, for two drinks use 2 tablespoons limeade concentrate, undiluted of course.

Variations are endless: In Jamaica and Haiti, gold rums are used instead of white and sometimes at Ocho Rios in Jamaica we had rum cocktails served with a dash of hot red pepper—certainly not enough to recognize but just enough to give a singing depth to the drink. Many connoisseurs pour rum or sherry into a bottle filled with tiny, fiery, bird peppers and use just a drop of the liquid in their rum cocktails. Well worth trying!

Often honey is used instead of sugar and sometimes grenadine which is a syrup of pomegranates. These last are often called Presidente cocktails, and I have had them served most dramatically with a scatter of pomegranate seeds—to make you dream of Persephone.

As for frozen daiquiris my personal instructions are: Don't bother! They are so cold that you simply can't taste anything, certainly not the flavor of fine rum.

Northside and Juleps

The Northside cocktail, however, is a different matter and deserves to be much more widely known. This is simply a rum cocktail made in the usual manner but most appropriately with Gold Label rum and fresh mint leaves or a dash of Mint-it. Instead of a shaker use the electric blender and be sure to break your ice cubes into several pieces or you may ruin your blades. Garnish each cocktail with a sprig of fresh mint.

A Northside will make you think of mint juleps and, as a matter of fact, there are some who say that the rum julep is even more venerable and deserving of esteem than the classic bourbon variety. You be the judge! While we're on the subject, haven't you heard that there is a whole school of Kentucky colonels who insist that no bourbon julep can be called complete unless it floats a teaspoonful of golden rum on top?

To Close the Show

In the elegant Eighties, the gourmets of this country and England, were very fond of various cobblers, a most popular beverage "with ladies as well as with gentlemen . . . a very refreshing drink for old and young."

A Rum Cobbler makes a delightful ending to a distinguished summertime dinner. Like a frappé, the cobbler is generally served in a sherry glass or a champagne saucer filled with finely crushed or shaved ice and sipped through a short straw. Fill the glass with ice shavings. Add a teaspoonful of coffee liqueur—Kahlua of Mexico is excellent—then a jigger of the very best, most brandy-like Gold Label rum. Churn with a spoon until frost begins to appear on the outside of the glass, insert the short straw and decorate with a sliver of crystallized ginger or fresh mint.

Instead of the coffee liqueur you might use a spoonful of Falernum which for the first time in generations is now available in these United States in fine food shops like Vendome as well as in liquor stores. This elixir from the island of Barbados mingles the flavor of sun-dried almonds slightly intoxicated with rum, cloves, fresh ginger root, crushed limes and raw, moist brown sugar.

Rum for Eating

Not only as a beverage but in your cooking the brandy-like rums of Puerto Rico are almost miraculous. They have a way of enhancing and strengthening all sorts of flavors; like brandy they seem to blend, mellow and amalgamate. Here are just a few treasures to start you on your way.

A can of Underwood or Campbell's black bean soup is a fine thing. You have no idea how extraordinary until you've tried it this way: Combine 1 can black bean soup with 1 can undiluted consommé, add 1 tablespoon sherry or madeira and 1 tablespoon rum. Heat thoroughly, but do not boil, and serve from a tureen with a tray of garnishes which should include chopped yolks of hard-cooked eggs and the chopped whites surrounding them, chopped parsley and lemon slices.

Canned lentil soup is greatly improved also with the addition of a tablespoon of rum to each can of soup. Pass along with the soup a flaming garnish of sausages prepared like so: Cut Swift's Brown 'n Serve sausages into three pieces and brown lightly, then pour on ¼ cup soya sauce and simmer for a couple of minutes. Add ¼ cup warmed Puerto Rican rum and ignite. Serve from the chafing dish. These flaming sausages, as you might imagine, make a glamorous appetizer too.

Real Boston Cream Pie

This recipe approximates in taste the original Boston Cream Pie which is not a pie at all, but a richly filled layer cake. The method, however, couldn't be more different, for this one is made with an instant pudding to hold together layers of rich yellow cake made from the most instant of the new mixes. You must try this dessert very soon if only to give yourself an opportunity to get acquainted with this latest Swans Down triumph. Swiftest, easiest, most dependable, this is without doubt the cake mix to use in order to convert a really fine cook who has always been anti-mixes. (Maybe that's you?)

Make up according to package directions adding 1 cup water and 2 whole eggs. Or for an even richer cake quite like Savoy, add 3 whole eggs, ¾ cup water, and 1 tablespoon Gold Label rum all at once to a package of Swans Down new Instant Yellow Cake Mix. Beat 3 minutes. Bake in 2 nine-inch pans. Cool.

For the filling: Use 1 package Jell-O Instant Vanilla Pudding Mix, whipped up with 1 cup coffee cream and 1 cup milk. Beat one minute with a rotary beater, then stir in 2 tablespoons rum and ¼ cup Raffetto's Nesselro mixture or marrons. Use marrons that come in pieces in syrup. (Much less expensive and every bit as flavorsome!) Allow the pudding to set a few minutes, then pile between the cooled layers of cake. Dust the top of the cake with powdered sugar sifted through a paper doily if you want to be particularly festive. Some people prefer a very thin water icing. Try Q-T Instant Frosting made with half water and half rum. Makes 12 portions.

distances are very great. The steep cliffside roads run high in the air, looping around intricate indentations and ravines. The silvery olive groves which line them sometimes seem to fall away into the sea below, until you feel you are not driving on a road at all, but sailing into the sky. On this kind of road you drive from Palma to Valldemosa, via Deyá.

Deyá, where the British poet and novelist Robert Graves has lived and worked fruitfully for many years, is a town of great personableness, although you do not guess it from its flat-surfaced, noncommittal exterior as you drive through. About a mile out of town, when you look back at it across a canyon and see it almost in cross section, you become aware of the way its houses seem literally to have grown out of the earth. Their handmade stone walls, like primitive mosaics, are as tawny as the soil. At Valldemosa you can visit the Carthusian monastery and see the rather elaborately turned out cells where Georges Sand and Chopin spent the winter of 1838.

A regularly scheduled added attraction at Valldemosa is a program of Majorcan folk dances, which bear no resemblance to the gypsy Flamenco we used to call Spanish dancing before we learned better. A group of pink-cheeked country girls and boys dance to the music of pipes and castanets, the girls in their characteristic lace "helmets" and the boys whirling around in Saracenic pantaloons. We thought we'd never seen anything more charming and dignified, but discovered later that we shouldn't have enjoyed it at all, because the local American expatriates consider the performance commercial and touristy!

A STRAIGHT cross-country road from Palma takes you 70 miles through the heart of the country to the pine forest, blue-bay-and-beach resort of Formentor. The Hotel Formentor on the Bay of Pollensa would be our idea of the ultimate luxury on any American's European itinerary—a quiet, elegant last port to collapse in before returning home, a place to recuperate from the usual race of sightseeing and schedule-keeping.

If local color is more your dish, the near-by fishing village of Puerto de Pollensa might be your alternative retreat—or Puerto de Soller on the west coast, or Porto-Cristo on the east coast. Porto-Cristo, about 38 miles from Palma, is the stopping-off place for the Caves of the Dragon (Cuevas del Drach), which you have to see to believe, even if you couldn't care less for caves. At one point the cave becomes a subterranean amphitheater with a Stygian lake as its stage. You can sit and watch and listen while a lighted boat bearing a concert of violinists floats gradually out of the blackness into view, then slowly out of sight again. The Grieg program we heard was the same kind of "tourist" show that the Valldemosa dancers put on—sweet, restrained, simple and honest.

The Perelló Hotel in Porto-Cristo, rated a modest 3 in the official Spanish hotel guide, but offers particularly good meals, with the emphasis on sea food.

FOOD in Majorca (as in all of Spain) is of two types: tourist fare, the cuisine au beurre which uses butter to please foreigners who may not cotton to the native Majorcan cook-it-in-olive-oil tradition, and turns out to be the usual watered-down version of French cookery that afflicts de luxe hotels all over Europe; and the good, unpretentious native dishes that elude most travelers unless they are willing to search them out or have entrée into private homes. All beef is fine.

Majorca is famous for excellent thick soups of almost endless variety; for a dish of sardines, herring and vegetables called esclefada; for requesón blanco, a sweet dish of baked curds; for a fragrant pear jelly, peras de Mallorca; and for a delicate sweet bread known as l'ensaimada, all of which you're more likely to find in an out-of-the-way inn than in a fancy hotel. The flavor of aceite, or olive oil, grows on you, and there's even a legend current in the Balearic Islands that mayonnaise, the queen of oil dressings, originated in the town of Mahón on Majorca's sister island of Menorca.

Manacor, on the road from Palma to Porto-Cristo, is famous for its artificial pearls and in a shop called Perlas de Manacor you can pick and choose from a tremendous stock of pearl jewelry, all reasonably priced. The best buys in our opinion were the rather elaborate collars, all strung by hand. We also invested successfully in a batch of pearl hatpins.

Palma is the place to do any major shopping. A Majorcan spe-

Water Clings and Cleans!

from a faucet with Spring-Flo Aerator

Water is transformed by a faucet with Spring-Flo. Comes from the tap in a higher-velocity bubbly stream that clings and spreads, instead of splashing! The bubbly stream dissolves and mixes soaps and detergents more thoroughly. Makes suds aplenty—washes cleaner, faster! Spring-Flo's clinging water spreads into the hard-to-get-at crevices—rinses more efficiently!

LOOKS, TASTES BETTER

Millions of tiny air bubbles completely aerate, replenish lost oxygen. Trap clouding gases, off-tastes, odors, then flow and vanish—leaving water crystal-spring clear, mountain-stream fresh!

Leading faucets are Spring-Flo equipped. Ask your plumber!

cialty is the characteristic blue-green glass which seems to be used for everything from graceful branched chandeliers and balustrades to tableware and can be blown to your order. A wine flask called a porrón, which spouts wine into the mouth of the drinker (but only after some practice) is a typical Majorcan souvenir. So are the tall slender tubular glasses in wrought-iron holders from which Spaniards offer sherry to their guests. Much of this glass is brittle, however, and will need much more careful wrapping than the usual to get it home intact. You can see a good collection of glass at the Galerias Costa in Palma.

WROUGHT iron is also a local specialty and here again you can order anything made to your specifications from a garden gate to an ash tray, and the workmanship makes it worth while to bring dimensions with you and have your order sent home by slow freight. For iron try Claudio Casas, 55 Teatro Balear, opposite the Church of San Miguel.

Embroidery, especially the appliqué variety, is good in Majorca although you may find the most exquisite work done on common cotton when you'd prefer linen. Majorcan lace is not especially delicate but it is well made. For embroideries, try Nell at 88 Borne; Mirador at 37 Calle Palacio; and Las Monjas at 15 Calle Monjas.

The hero of Majorca is Jaime I, or as we lovingly think of him, Hymie Preemaro, conqueror of the Arabs in 1229 and the man for whom our hotel was named. The Jaime I, very handily situated in town, impressed us first of all because its mattresses were stuffed with chopped cork and as comfortable as eiderdown. Then there was the impressive matter of the two identical pushbells that dangled on wires over the bed. One put out the light and the other called the maid with an authoritative alarm that rang in the hall. At bedtime things were pretty lively as guests tried to turn out the lights. Our room had a handsome view of the tawny-gold sandstone cathedral. And once while it was still dark before dawn we were awakened by a distant singing procession trailing through the streets on the way to Mass and we watched the east brighten and the spires take shape against the pearly sky.

Majorca has been a favorite resort of Europeans and particularly of the British almost since memory began, so for a town of 150,000, Palma has an unbelievable number of hotels and pensions of every type of quality and price. Luxury hotels—substantially grand, dependably conservative, etc.—are the Mediterraneo Gran Hotel, the Maricel, and the new Hotel Bahía Palace which we've never seen but hear is mighty glamorous, air conditioned, and equipped with its own swimming pool.

These are all on the sea, but one doesn't bathe in the bay in Palma, but instead goes off to such lovely beaches as Palma Nova, Santa Ponsa, Camp de Mar, or El Arenal, all from 10 to 20 kilometers away.

First-rate class A hotels where we know we'd be happy to stay are the Victoria, Alhambra, Royal-Alvina, and Principe Alfonso.

From Spain you can fly to Palma from Madrid, Barcelona, Valencia, Saragossa, Bilbao, via Iberian Airlines or Aviaco. From London, British European Airways flies directly to Palma, as Air France does from Paris. Air Algerie and Aviaco fly directly from Marseilles.

By sea you can reach Palma from Barcelona, Valencia and Alicante, via ships of the Compania Trasmediterranea, which can also arrange to carry your car. A French steamship line, Navigation Mixte, is starting a service between Marseilles and Palma this summer. Reservations may be made through the French Line, 610 Fifth Ave., New York.

AS FOR getting to Majorca from the United States, the Italian Line, 39 Broadway, New York, has a few ships which stop at Palma, but generally your best bet is one of the Italian Line's or American Export Lines' ships to Barcelona.

Airlines flying from the United States to Spain are Iberian Airlines, Trans-World Airlines and Pan American Airways.

As an American citizen you need no visa—your passport alone is sufficient to get you into Spain. Be prepared to make out a declaration of your money and to keep track of how much you spend in order to report this as you leave Spain.

By all means take up your Majorcan adventure with your travel agent before you leave the United States, because it is a popular place and requires reservations in advance.

For more background information write to the Spanish State Tourist Department Office, 485 Madison Avenue, New York.

significant, and less easily recognized, is the new pattern that has emerged—the intricate set of tangibles and intangibles that make today's Americans different, as people, as consumers, as participants in an age of new-world maturity.

"In this pattern can be found the sharp difference between this and any other golden age in recorded history. It is neither the product nor the property of any particular class. The average individual American not only had a full share in setting off the fuse, but he shares fully the advantages and opportunities that the American Explosion has left in its wake."

Mr. Turck, in his excellent article, goes on to report that the customs, attitudes and habits of today's American have changed even more drastically than the state of his pocketbook. For instance, he writes, "today's workingman and woman have discovered that graceful living is far from inconsistent with productive labor. Homeowners spent three times as much for home decorations in 1948 as they did in 1939. In constant dollars, furniture and furnishing store customers paid out 200 per cent more in 1951 than they did in 1937. The quality of wallpaper design, of draperies and upholstery, of the very pictures on the walls, in today's modest homes trumpets a revolution in American taste."

About these last points, I can add chapter and verse. For six years HOUSE BEAUTIFUL has been asking the leading manufacturers of home furnishings soft goods to show us their best sellers, the top three best sellers for each year. We have collected actual samples of them and have hung them on the walls of a special room, set aside for that purpose. We can study them grouped by year, by industry, by company and by product. They are eloquent proof of the little-recognized fact

Design For Modern Home Entrance by The Architects Collaborative

"WHAT A WEALTH OF COLOR AND SERVICE CERAMIC TILE GIVES...INSIDE AND OUT."

Walter Gropius

For The Architects Collaborative

Architect Walter Gropius and his TAC colleagues captured the beauty and practical nature of ceramic tile in this forward looking home entrance and patio. Making the most of their material, they compel ceramic tile to contribute the maximum in design and service.

Large ceramic tile units march across the patio into the entrance foyer and dining area beyond . . . the gay tiled foyer wall brings the whole scene into focus . . . the earth-toned tile sidewall on the right extends to the kitchen in the rear . . . while smaller tile units surface the sparkling patio pool in the left foreground.

All the floor and wall surfaces are ceramic tile—they will never need strenuous cleaning, waxing, painting or replacement. Did you know that ceramic tile can give you such colorful, lifetime service? Keep tile in mind when remodeling or building your home.

IMPORTANT: When building or remodeling, ask your clay tile contractor about the new adhesive method for installing ceramic tile. It may save you money. Be sure to see the wide range of sparkling ceramic tile colors, too!

Get clay tile remodeling and new construction ideas from colorful, new brochure "Ideas Unlimited" plus a folder on ideas used in the Gropius design. Both for 10¢. at the taste of the "common con-mer" is far better than is ordi-arily credited. There is not a dog" among these best sellers, and e majority of them are very fine deed. Few are just "average" or adequate" designs among all those hich represent three billion dol-rs' worth of sales.

WE HAVE had even more con-vincing proof of the American xplosion. The last four months of 954, we set up two exhibitions for e two biggest Fairs in America: e Los Angeles County Fair and e State Fair of Texas. The officials both fairs asked us to produce e very best we at HOUSE BEAUTI-L were capable of, the best in ste, in progress, in soundness, the ost representative way of life pos-ble with all the riches at our mmand in this mid-20th Century eriod of American life.

They did not ask us to grade wn, to condescend, to pander to iat is commonly called "popular ste." In Los Angeles we created rooms, some very sophisticated, l way above average, all above iat department stores now con-der feasible to do in the way of odel rooms. We called that show The Arts of Daily Living" (see OUSE BEAUTIFUL, October 1954, nuary and March 1955), staged as a museum would, with dignity d restraint. It pulled crowds that ualed the crowds at the race-ack, heretofore always the biggest traction at the Los Angeles Fair; 0,000 visited it in 17 days.

But the real story was not in the mber of visitors, but in the look the people's faces and what they id to each other. The faces were spired, transfixed with a better ion of what they saw could be d for themselves.

I can best explain their reaction remarks from two visitors. One other picked up her five- or six-ar-old child (who couldn't pos-bly have seen anything in the cked crush around her) and said, want you to look carefully, dear, r you may never again see any-ing so beautiful."

Another quite different reaction me from two young men in their iddle or late twenties, clearly un-arried, wearing sport jackets, etc. ey both stopped dead as they me around the corner and saw e room. One said, "Oh, brother!" ey stood, as though rooted, for out five minutes. They had no ords with which to talk about this thing they were looking at. But there was no doubt they liked it, for when they finally moved on the one who had not uttered a sound said, "Yeah, brother!"

The State Fair of Texas was a similar story. We built our 1955 Pace Setter for the Fair (see HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, February and March 1955), and they billed it as a feature attraction along with daredevil riders and a musical comedy, "The King and I." These Fair officials ranked a $100,000 house in their category as a real draw for mass attendance. And, as in Los Angeles, the people were hushed, pensive, sort of reverent you might say, even though they had been waiting in lines to get in for as long as an hour in the broiling sun.

As in the Los Angeles show—a quarter of a million dollar affair—we lost not one thing, even though the house was loaded with valuable accessories and even though the lines moved through the middle of rooms where anyone could have picked up things with no more than the dipping of one knee. Again, as in Los Angeles, the hostesses and cleaning maids were caught up in a kind of esthetic ecstasy at being associated with something which so many thousands of people found so wonderful. So many couldn't get into the Texas house that the Fair had to keep it open 10 days after the Fair closed. And it was reopened, for the third time, for another three weeks' run, to coincide with our publication date.

WHAT does all this add up to? This: The American market is an expanding moving market. And the way to hit that moving target is by aiming ahead of it. In hunting we call it taking a lead on a soaring bird. In piloting we call it flying at least five to thirty minutes ahead of where you are now.

The American market is moving in two directions: that's what makes leading it a problem and a challenge. It's moving just by expanding—more people have more money to buy more things—and it's moving upward culturally, so fast it is making the old conception of class vs. mass as antiquated as the parlor. More and more people want the best. So, the manufacturer who plans to give them what they bought last year is going to be left behind this year. He's static. They are not.

Tracy Kitchens are beautiful, functional, and versatile. Now, the new Pic-A-Dor cabinets are supplied with doors that can be painted to match any kitchen color scheme. The do-it-yourself family can make its own doors.

Tracy kitchen cabinets feature beauty and convenience—important considerations in any modern kitchen. Just as important is the question of durability. Tracy makes sure of the durability of its cabinets with the "Granodine" phosphate treatment that locks paint to steel. Result—the exceptionally beautiful paint finishes that are typical of Tracy Kitchens are on to stay, and the steel underneath is protected from the blight of rust. "Granodine" anchors the finish. It's your assurance of lasting beauty for kitchen cabinets and other home appliances.

People visiting the $12,500 house exhibited at the International Trade Fairs abroad will be most interested in its efficient, economical and full automatic heating system, for the chances are they have never seen its equal in any of their own houses, no matter how modern or luxurious.

Charming curtains made of dress fabric lend decorative note to the bathroom in this $12,500 house. Such curtains made in straight panels without pleats are easy to wash. Fieldcrest towels carry out color scheme of house. Compact streamlined scale by Brearley takes minimum of floor space.

shrimp soup, and add one ¼ can of milk or cream and ¼ of the soup can filled with white wine. ½ clove garlic put through the press and a little freshly grated nutmeg. This makes about 2 cups of sauce.

Leg of Mutton Sultana

Place in the blender at low speed one egg yolk. ⅓ cup cubed calf's liver measured after skin, tubes and nerves have been removed. ¾ cup cubed fat from beef kidneys. 3 stalks parsley. 2 green onions cut into inch pieces. ½ teaspoon salt. ¼ teaspoon pepper. 12 juniper berries. Blend at low speed until perfectly smooth: then turn the blender to high speed so that the mixture becomes very fine.

Have your butcher skin a leg of mutton or a good-size leg of lamb. Paint it generously with melted butter, rub the mixture from the blender all over it, wrap in three sheets of well-buttered wax paper (or use 2 sheets of regular aluminum foil or one sheet of freezer foil—P. C.). Fold the sheets over the meat, pinching them together so that they will be as airtight as possible. Tie or twist the ends securely. Allow to stand at room temperature two hours before putting in the oven. When the meat has been in the oven ¼ hour add ½ cup hot water to the pan.

While the meat is roasting prepare this sauce. Pour into a saucepan 3 cups good dry white wine, 3 cups beef bouillon, add 1 carrot, 1 parsnip and 1 clove garlic. Simmer uncovered 1 hour until reduced by half. Blend 1 tablespoon butter with 1 tablespoon flour and add to sauce. Cook 5 minutes and strain. Serve in sauce boat. Send mutton to table in its papers. When opening them be careful not to lose any of the juice.

Chocolate Whip

This is a very old but quickly prepared French dessert. Place in the blender at lowest speed the yolks of 4 eggs, ¼ pound melted chocolate, ½ cup heavy cream and ½ cup confectioners sugar. After two or three minutes, add the whites of 4 eggs. In another two or three minutes the mixture should be quite light. Remove from blender and place in a serving bowl in the refrigerator for at least 4 hours. (Generally we do not consider using the blender for egg whites or cream, but in this case it gives just the right consistency—P. C.).

Serve with 1½ cups whipped cream to which 2 tablespoons confectioners sugar and 2 tablespoons cointreau or white curaçoa have been added while whipping.

Crab Bisque

Clean the crab thoroughly by scrubbing with a stiff brush and rinsing frequently in running water. Be certain that all dirt and sand are removed. Prepare a court bouillon with 3 sliced carrots, 1 sliced onion, ½ head celery, ½ teaspoon sea salt, 5 whole peppercorns, 1 bay leaf and a twig of thyme. Place these in an enameled pot over medium heat with 2 tablespoons butter, a pinch of sugar, and once again a bay leaf and twig of thyme. Stir with a wooden spoon until this turns golden, then add 1 cup of chicken bouillon, 1 cup of dry white wine, 1 liqueur glass of cognac, ½ pound lean ham cut in small pieces and enough water to cover the crab —about 4 cups for a medium-size crab. When this boils put the crab in the pot, cover and boil for 20 minutes. Remove from pot and drain. Strain the court bouillon. Put the vegetables and ham aside, crack the crab and remove all the meat from the body and the claws. Put the crab meat and the ham and vegetables in the blender along with the strained bouillon and 2 cups boiled rice. Blend first at low speed, then at high speed until smooth and very fine. Then place in a saucepan and add 1 cup heavy cream. Put over medium heat and when about to boil add 2 tablespoons butter cut in small pieces. Do not allow to boil and do not stir but tip in all directions. Serve with small unbuttered croutons.

Stuffed Breast of Veal

This is not, as will be observed at a glance, ordinary stuffed veal.

Cook for 10 minutes in as little water as possible ½ cup chopped onions. Drain and put aside. Soak 1 cup crumbled bread, crusts removed, in hot milk to cover. Squeeze dry and put aside. Place in blender at low speed ½ pound of calf's liver from which tubes and nerves have been removed before weighing and ¼ pound beef fat from the kidneys. This should be cubed. When perfectly smooth add the soaked bread, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Blend 2 to 4 minutes longer. Heat 4 tablespoons butter in a pan and when it bubbles, add the mixture. When

New easy way to prepare foods for entertaining

You can make dozens of delicious dishes easier, faster, better with an Osterizer, the original liquefier-blender. Easier because it does lots of chores for you. Faster because it cuts down cooking time. Better because it brings out a bright new flavor in foods, a fresh full flavor that is truly delightful. Look at some of the party foods you can make with an Osterizer:

Makes Fancy Hors d'Oeuvre Spreads. So smooth and flavorful, you'd think a caterer had done it—yet so easy. Liver, anchovy, avocado, olive spreads.

Blends Creamy Smooth Cheese Dips. Any flavor combination desired. Add onion: it vanishes, but flavor's throughout. A trick: economical cottage cheese blends smooth as cream cheese in the Osterizer.

Homemade Mayonnaise—No Cooking. Other salad dressings, too. Hollandaise, barbecue sauce—even horseradish! See how the Osterizer opens at both ends for easy emptying . . . easy cleaning.

Makes Pie Fillings without Pre-Cooking. Chiffons, custards, pumpkin. Chops nuts and fruits, grates lemon and orange rind for cookies and cake. Grates vegetables, makes instant gelatin for molded salads.

Fresh-Grinds Coffee Beans. As fine or coarse as you need. Note that the Osterizer base fits standard canning jars, any size. This multiplies use of Osterizer, is wonderful for food to be stored.

it commences to brown, remove from heat, add 1 egg and mix.

Place on a table the breast of veal from which you have had your butcher remove the bones, open out and flatten. Spread the stuffing evenly on it leaving a small margin on all sides. Roll the breast and tie it so that none of the stuffing will escape but not too tight because it will expand in the heat of cooking. Put 4 tablespoons butter in an iron pot. When it bubbles reduce heat and place meat in the pot. Lightly brown on all sides. Then add ½ teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon paprika. Cover the pot and simmer for 2 hours. If it is necessary while the meat is cooking add ½ cup veal bouillon. After 2 hours add 1 pound thinly sliced mushrooms and any bit of stuffing that may have remained over. Cover the pot and cook further for 15 minutes. Then add 1 cup heavy cream, do not allow to boil, do not stir, but tip the pot in all directions. Remove from pot, place on serving dish after strings have been removed, pour the sauce and mushrooms around the meat; serve hot.

With the miracle-working blender preparation of this next recipe is cut in half.

Stuffed Duck

To commence with the stuffing: Place in the blender at lowest speed 2 eggs, ½ cup heavy cream, ¼ cup cubed beef fat from the kidney, ¼ pound cubed mushrooms, 2 diced green onions, ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, a pinch of cayenne and a pinch of nutmeg. Blend first at low speed until smooth and then at high speed until very fine.

Now for the duck: Remove the wings and legs, cutting into the skin as little as possible, and put them aside. You will now bone the duck. To do this cut the skin down the back and with the aid of a small sharp knife, loosen the skin from the meat, rolling it gently back without piercing it. Go easy the first time you skin a fowl. The cook who taught me did it as easily as he skinned a rabbit or an eel. When it has been accomplished, remove all the meat from the bones, slice the filets and cut the rest of the meat as nicely as possible; put aside. Place the skin flat on the table, place the wings and legs in their proper places and sew the skin around them. Neatly arrange the filets and meat on the skin leaving a margin on all four sides. Then spread the stuffing on the meat. Sew the skin down the back and at both ends. You now have a boned stuffed duck ready to be braised.

In a heavy enameled pot with a tight fitting cover or a Dutch oven, melt 4 tablespoons butter. Over medium flame heat the duck on all sides but do not brown. Cover and lower flame. After 15 minutes add 1 cup beef bouillon. Heat 2 tablespoons cognac and pour it lighted over the duck. In 50 minutes the duck should be cooked. Serve without cutting the strings. Carve in slices commencing at either end. The wings and legs are placed on a slice. With the duck serve a thinned purée of chestnuts, easily made in your blender by adding a little white wine to the cooked chestnuts. (Or use a canned purée of chestnuts from France thinned with equal parts of meat or chicken broth and white wine—P. C.).

After this deluxe cooking let us get down to brass tacks. What does the blender do daily to save time and effort? If placed near the refrigerator it makes a number of salad dressings and desserts that require last-minute mixing. They remain at the proper temperature while the blender does the work.

Currant or Raspberry Slip-and-Go-Easy

Put in the refrigerator 1 hour before serving 1 cup raspberry or currant jelly, 1 cup cream cheese, the whites of 3 eggs, as well as the bowl from which the dessert is to be served. Five minutes before serving time put the jelly and cream cheese in the blender at lowest speed. In 1 minute add 2 tablespoons heavy cream and 2 tablespoons of the very best Kirsch. In 1 minute more add the whites of 3 eggs. In another minute or two remove from blender to chilled serving bowl.

A Caesar Salad Dressing

This must be mixed at the last moment, so use your blender.

Put into it, in advance of the meal being served, the juice of 2 lemons, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon mustard, ½ teaspoon paprika and a pinch of cayenne. Just before serving time, start the blending at lowest speed and pour in 1 cup olive oil in which a clove of garlic has been soaking for 12 or more hours. When thoroughly mixed add 2 eggs which are still hot from having been cooked 1 minute. Blend 1 or 2 mintes more; remove dressing from blender and toss lightly into a bowl of chilled romaine. Sprinkle with ½ cup grated Parmesan cheese and ¾ cup of tiny lightly-browned croutons. Serve at once.

An economical and tasty meat dish which the blender will make leaving nothing more than the measurements for you to do is:

Meat Loaf in My Fashion

This is more like a paté than the usual meat loaf. It is exceedingly fine and smooth in texture.

Place in a bowl 1 cup bread which has been soaked in white wine to cover and then squeezed dry, ½ pound cubed calf's liver, ½ pound cubed lean veal, 1 cup cubed lean pork, 1 diced onion, 2 shallots, 1 clove garlic, ½ pound cubed raw mushrooms, 1 teaspoon celery salt, 1 teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon mace, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, the zest of ½ of a medium-size orange, ¼ teaspoon powdered bay leaf, ¼ teaspoon powdered thyme, ½ teaspoon powdered basil. Blend 1 or 2 cupfuls at a time. To the last batch after it is quite smooth, add 2 eggs and blend another minute or two. Mix everything together well in the bowl. Butter very generously a fireproof earthenware dish, place the mixture in it forming into a loaf with a knife frequently dipped into melted butter. Then spread over it 6 tablespoons melted butter, covering the sides as well as the top. Bake in 450° F. oven. After ¼ hour pour into the dish around the loaf ½ cup dry white wine and 1 cup beef bouillon. Baste every ¼ hour. After the meat has been in the oven ¾ hour, remove. It can now be served as it is or served cold, but it is delicious covered with:

Mashed Potatoes

Boil 1 pound peeled and quartered potatoes in salted water for about ½ hour depending upon the size and kind of potatoes. Then remove from heat and drain. Place in the blender along with 1 cup heavy cream ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, a good pinch of nutmeg. As soon as smooth remove from blender and spread over meat. Sprinkle ¾ cup of grated Parmesan cheese over the mashed potatoes. Dab with melted butter and place in a moderate oven 350° F. to brown.

owder, was first introduced to New Orleans waterfront markets by the Choctaw Indians!

But no matter how complicated nd impressively gourmet Creole ookery may sound, let me assure ou it is no more mysterious than he purchase of a few special con-iments. Nowadays these are no arther away than your nearest rocery store, for even the famous ilé is now bottled and available ationwide. Once you try flavoring vith filé and Creole seasoning pow-ler and that substitute for ab-inthe, Herbsaint (my, those Cre-oles really lived it up!), you will ee why their dishes are so out-tanding. These seasonings give a nost distinctive flavor to fowl, fish, nd lamb, and nothing is quite like hem for pepping up a dull soup r a sauce or even a left-over eftover.

In fact, if you want to give a linner party, as gay and festive as ny that ever happened in the ieux Carré, plan a Creole party a la Stanton. (A la Stanton, be-ause it's easy; I'm a stickler for ase.) Naturally we take our cue rom New Orleans.

Since pecans are native to that egion, we will use pecans in some ay. If you have a pet pecan pie ecipe, by all means produce it, ut I prefer to start my party with ecans as hors d'oeuvres. You have eard of Oysters Rockefeller and robably would never dream of at-empting this dish in your own itchen, but just wait! I will show ou how to have the same tanta-izing flavor—and by using easy-o-manage packaged foods. I grant ou that the appropriate equip-nent—large plates, rock salt and yster shells plus a large oven—is eyond most kitchens, but to sim-plify this dreamy dish and retain ll its wonderful flavor, I have evolved a soup with the same in-gredients, using frozen spinach and bottled oysters as the basic in-gredients, and the electric blender as my slavey.

Probably the creator of Oysters Rockefeller will turn in his grave at this "desecration" of his creation, but it is a great soup, if I do say so myself, so good that I am sure he would have enjoyed it. It will be the first course. Chicken with saffron rice and a tossed salad with French dressing filé will come next. And for dessert a creamy, dreamy "Crème Brûlée," the most glamorous of Creole confections.

Now I know that the idea of turning out a Crème Brûlée terrifies most amateurs and even a couple of chefs of my acquaintance who produce them magnificently, but there is a trick to getting them out easily and successfully which I will tell you about later on in the article.

The wonderful thing about this dinner is that each dish is unusual, yet so easy to prepare. The chicken is much more delicious if prepared the day before and allowed to mellow. (This is right up my alley for now you know that I like to get everything done as far ahead as possible so that I can have a good time at my own party.) The salad dressing should be made a day or two in advance, for the same reason—to allow the subtle flavors to blend. The soup is whizzed in the blender and just heated. The Crème Brûlée must be made ahead of time to get thoroughly chilled. It can be made a couple of days ahead, but it is better to make it the day before. (The perfectionists will swoon, but they probably have been afraid to make it ahead of time because they follow the recipe to the letter.)

As long as we are giving a New Orleans dinner, let's go all the way and serve a drink of the region known as the Sazerac cocktail. It is a glorified Old Fashioned, frequently made with bourbon, but I prefer rye whiskey. Say right straight out to your guests, "We're having Sazeracs." Then if anyone wants something different, let him speak up, but let's hope he's smart enough not to.

The original Sazerac formula is a deep, dark secret, owned by the Sazerac Company, Inc., of New Orleans. It may be bought by the bottle in some liquor stores, but if it is not available, you can make a delightful approximation using my recipe below. Have the drinks all brewed and ready and the party is off to a smooth start. As in many alcoholic drinks, ginger ale can be substituted for the whiskey and makes a delicious concoction.

The menu and shopping list for our glamour party will be:

You will quickly realize that my Creole recipes are adaptations, not the authentic letter-of-the-law variety. They are far too uncomplicated. But they do capture the spirit, the essence, and most important, the flavor of Creole. I can't urge you too strongly to delve into the various seasonings of Creole cookery, for a whole new world will be opened to your culinary talents. You, your family and friends will experience a completely new set of tastes in your new dishes. The flavors are not as hot as in so many tropical dishes but of such savory distinction that they will intrigue everyone.

When you read Creole recipes, adapt them to your own way of doing things. Apply the methods and seasonings to packaged foods and frozen foods and you'll save time and labor. You'll be creating your own dishes with little or no fuss and feathers.

Stanton-Type Sazerac

The Sazerac is as controversial a drink as the Mint Julep, because every host of the region has his

STRUCTURAL PANELS

Today, everybody's talking about RESOLITE, the beautiful shatter-proof panel of translucent resins, reinforced with Fiberglas! What else lets through plenty of light, has the structural strength of metal, yet weighs only 8 ounces per square foot? What else has the pleasing colors and tints, yet will not mildew, rot or rust in any weather extreme?

Nothing fills the bill like RESOLITE! Proven for years the most effective and durable material for industrial skylighting, Resolite is fast becoming the most popular and desirable covering for terrace, breezeway and carport. And for interior partitions and enclosures, too!

One more reason why Resolite deserves and gets this fast-growing popularity is that it's so easy to use. You need no special tools or skill to install Resolite. If you can saw and drive nails you can install these versatile panels, whose attractive corrugated patterns give them such strength and rigidity.

RESOLITE is the easy way to modernize and glamorize your home —inside and outside. Write for literature today—use the handy coupon.

own pet way of brewing it and each thinks his is the best. Here is my version; I think it's delicious. Proportions are for 1 drink.

1 small lump of sugar
Dash of Angostura Bitters
1 tablespoon water
2 ounces Rye or Bourbon
1 scant tablespoon Herbsaint
Lemon peel
Ice

Put sugar, water and bitters in each glass, mash with muddler until sugar is dissolved. This can be done ahead of time. Just before serving, add whiskey, Herbsaint and stir well. Fill each Old-Fashioned glass with ice. Rub lemon peel around the rim of the glass (this is important), and then twist peel, drop it into the glass and serve.

Pecans Worcestershire

2 cups large pecans, preferably unsalted
⅓ cup Worcestershire Sauce (Lea & Perrins)
1 thick pat of butter
2 dashes Tabasco sauce
Salt

Melt butter in stainless steel mixing bowl so you won't have an extra pan to wash. Add Worcestershire sauce and Tabasco and mix well. Remove from fire and add pecans. Stir and mix for at least five minutes so that each nut meat is well coated with the sauce and all the sauce is absorbed. It really takes longer than you think.

Line a cooky sheet with paper towels, pour the pecans out and spread evenly. Place in a 300° F. oven and crisp for 15 to 20 minutes. As I have an electric oven, I heat the oven, put the pecans in, and turn off the heat at once. For the last five minutes you have to watch them very carefully as they will burn easily, so check often. After they are crisp, pour them out on clean paper towels and salt well. Allow to cool thoroughly and then store in airtight containers. I usually do several batches at a time, for they keep well and I always have something to nibble on when guests drop in. You can double the recipe, but do not triple it. It's best to make a new batch.

Olives Creole
(My own recipe)

Buy the largest pitted olives you can find. I get both black and green ones for color variation. You can also give the same treatment to small canned onions. These olives keep for weeks in the refrigerator in a covered container. I usually keep one of the olive bottles and store them in that. A few hours before serving set olives in the kitchen so the oil will melt.

1 cup Widow's Mite vinegar (Creole Spiced Salad Dressing Mix, 1001 Nolan Drive, Glendale 22, Mo.)
1 cup good olive oil
2 large cloves of garlic, cut in half so you can remove them before serving
1 teaspoon Colman's mustard

Mix ingredients. Drain and rinse the olives under cold water. Put them in the container for storage and add the oil mixture, which should more than cover the olives. Cover the container well and store in the refrigerator until you are ready to use them.

Oyster Soup Rockefeller

2 12-ounce jars of oysters
1 package frozen spinach
2 shallots or two green onions, tops and all
1 can chicken broth (14½ ounces) (chicken concentrate will do)
2 scant cups of rich creamy milk or half-and-half
¼ teaspoon anise seed (Spice Islands), ground in mortar
1 teaspoon M.S.G. (Spice Islands) (monosodium glutamate)
2 dashes hot sauce (Evangeline Hot Sauce by Bulliards)
¼ teaspoon salt

Take spinach out of the freezer on the morning of your party and put in the refrigerator. Pick up the oysters at the market. Their liquor should be a clear milky white. If it is dark, do not buy them for the oysters are too old. Remove the muscle of the oyster, which toughens in cooking. (We eat the muscle on crackers for lunch.) Whizz the oysters in the electric blender and store them in their original glass jars in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Ten minutes before you are ready to serve the soup, take out the spinach and, if it is still a little frozen, slice it into the blender. Add chicken broth and all the seasonings. Whizz only until well mixed, for you want bits and pieces of spinach, not a purée. Put in the top of the double boiler, add creamy milk and heat. When soup is thoroughly hot, add oysters and serve. Do not cook. If you want this to be extra special, put soup in bowls that can be run under the broiler, put a dollop of whipped cream on each serving, and brown. Serve at once. Serves 8.

Chicken Creole

4 packages of frozen chicken (I use pheasant chicken)
2 cans stewed tomatoes, #2 size (Del Monte)
1 teaspoon Creole Seasoning Powder (made by New Orleans Import Company)
Olive oil

I get frozen fowl so that I do not have to clean it. Pheasant chicken is a small-boned hybrid, but you might use Cornish Game, or all white meat or any fowl you may wish to serve. Brown fowl in a pan, using as little oil as possible. Then carefully lay the pieces in a casserole. I do the breasts first so they will go on the bottom, then second joints, wings and legs last. The most prized pieces should be on the bottom to get the full benefit of the sauce.

If you should purchase all chicken breasts, be sure to get some necks to make some chicken broth. If you get the whole fowl, try putting all the white meat in one casserole and all the dark meat in another. This system works like a charm at my parties, for the guests do not have to "dig in" to find the piece they wish. If you do this, however, be sure to check your oven to see if it can take the two chicken casseroles and still leave room enough for the rice casserole.

After browning the fowl, open the two cans of Del Monte stewed tomatoes. If you cannot find this particular brand in your store, get any brand that has celery, onions and peppers in it. Blend the tomatoes in the blender and add the Creole seasoning. Drain off excess fat in the browning pan. Add blended tomatoes to the pan to get all the chicken essence, swirl around and pour over casseroles. Cover casseroles and put in a 300° F. oven for an hour, or until chicken is tender. Set aside to cool and then store in the refrigerator overnight.

Meanwhile boil the backs, necks, ends of wings, the hearts and gizzards with carrots, onions, parsley, and celery to make some broth. Cook for an hour, cool and place in the refrigerator.

In the late afternoon on the day of your party, take the chicken casseroles and the chicken soup out of the refrigerator. Skim or lift off all the fat. About two hours before your guests are expected, put the casseroles in the oven at low heat and heat just long enough to pour off the sauce. When the sauce is pourable, pour it into a Pyrex pitcher for ease of measurement. Allow 6 soda crackers as thickening for each cup of liquid. Put the sauce plus the crackers in the blender and whizz until the crackers are completely blended with the sauce. While it is whizzing, add two more teaspoons of the Creole seasoning powder and Evangeline hot sauce. Taste and add salt and pepper if you desire. Pour sauce over carefully arranged chicken. Put in 300° F. oven and allow 45 minutes for heating. This recipe serves 8.

Saffron Rice

2 cups of rice (Uncle Ben's)
¾ of a ¼ pound stick of butter
4 cups of bubbling hot, well-seasoned chicken stock
Pinch of saffron

The secret of this rice dish is to have everything hot. Have a covered casserole in the oven. Have the chicken broth, strained, skimmed and simmering. Melt butter in the frying pan. When it is bubbling, add the saffron, mix well, and add rice. (I use the kind that says on the box "Do not wash." No unnecessary labor for me!) Stir with a wooden spoon until the rice is hot, hot, hot. The rice will be hot to the touch and it takes longer than you think, about five minutes. The rice dish should be prepared about 45 minutes before serving, so plan accordingly. After rice is hot, put it into the hot, hot casserole and cover with the hot soup stock. Cover casserole and put in 300° F. oven for half an hour. When it has cooked this long, stir well and return to the oven for 15 minutes.

Incidentally, I use this basic rice dish for all my parties. If you are having lamb, use lamb soup stock in place of the chicken stock. If you are having fish, use a fish brew or clam broth. For variation, I often add a half cup of chopped vegetables during the last 15 minutes of cooking. A wonderful addition is a half cup of chopped parsley, chives, carrots and celery and all kinds of nuts.

Salad

For a salad for eight, allow three to five heads of lettuce and try to get different varieties for color and texture interest. Wash lettuce leaf by leaf a day or two before using. Make your mind a blank, turn up the radio and start in. I wash the lettuce from the leaf part down to the stem, using my thumb to remove all excess grit. Soaking lettuce will not float out the good earth, and it certainly does not help the flavor of the lettuce. If the lettuce is not crispy fresh, just get the variety that is. You cannot revive tired lettuce and have it taste like anything. Shake out excess water. Put in a tea towel and then go outside (unless you want to give your kitchen a shower) and whirl lettuce around your head so as to get it dry. Store in the damp tea towel in a nylon bag in the refrigerator.

French Dressing Filé

1 shallot or 1 green onion
½ teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon Java cracked pepper
¼ teaspoon Beau Monde seasoning
¼ teaspoon gumbo filé
¼ teaspoon Creole seasoning
¼ teaspoon M.S.G.
1 teaspoon Pernod
½ cup white vinegar
1½ cups good olive oil
A few anise seeds

Mash shallot or onion in your mortar with the pestle. Add sugar, then all dry ingredients and anise seeds, and mash well. Add vinegar, mix and let stand for a while. Pour vinegar brew into Pyrex pitcher and add Pernod and oil slowly, stirring vigorously. Store in bottle until ready to use. This can be made days ahead.

Crème Brûlée

This dream of dreamy desserts is really not difficult to do if you just watch out for a few little details that make for perfection. First you must have the proper equipment—a good double boiler. I have not been successful using a stainless steel one because it does not seem to provide the kind of heat this dessert requires. You will also need a strainer (I use two), two Pyrex pitchers and the container for the dessert. If you are going to do the true New Orleans Brûlée, you will need a container that can go into the oven. For this I use a Desco Ware shallow oval baker. But if you follow my "Stantonized" Brûlée recipe (Oh, it is so easy!), then you can put the Crème in a lovely bowl, or, as I prefer, in individual dishes.

The timing is most important. It took me only ten minutes to prepare the Crème from carton to refrigerator, but I had everything all set to go. (If the telephone rings, do not answer it. Once you have started this dessert, you have to see it through.)

3 cups whipping cream
1 2-inch piece vanilla bean
6 egg yolks
6 tablespoons sugar
Dash of salt
Brown sugar

Gently heat cream and vanilla bean in the top of the double boiler. My first tip to you: Do not have water touching the bottom of the double boiler. Put egg yolks into Pyrex pitcher. (When I break the eggs, I have an icebox container ready for the whites and the Pyrex pitcher ready to receive the yolks.) Add the sugar and salt and beat until the eggs are lemon color or until they are light and creamy. Pour heated cream through a strainer into a clean Pyrex pitcher. Rinse and dry top of double boiler. Do not return it to hot water. Wash and dry strainer. Now add hot cream very slowly to beaten egg yolks, stirring constantly. You must pour it slowly so the hot cream will not cook the yolks. Put mixture in the top of the double boiler and place over hot water. Stir constantly with a wooden spoon.

Here is another important tip: Have hot water simmering and stir the cream mixture until it coats the back of the wooden spoon. You can tell when it is getting "done" for the cream will cling rather thickly to the sides of the boiler.

This is the third tip: When the mixture is thickening, turn off heat and stir for another minute or until you "feel" a thickening of the cream. Then you know it will "set." Pour quickly through a sieve into a clean Pyrex pitcher. Place dessert in the refrigerator until ready to use. Some perfectionists think it should be done the morning of the day you are serving it, but I have found it is just as delicious made 24 hours before serving.

For the Brûlée part of this dessert, there are several schools of thought, but I will give you two methods and one I improvised.

If you are going to "burn" the brown sugar authentically (which is a pesky job) you will need to sieve about a scant half-cup of brown sugar. This must be spread evenly over the top of the Crème. Place the container in a pan of crushed ice and you are ready for the oven routine. Have the rack about 10 inches from the broiler heat. I use electric heat and you turn the dial to "broil." Here is another secret which most chefs will hold out on telling you: Brown sugar twice. The technique is to watch the sugar and when it starts to bubble and get brown take it out and cool for five minutes. Turn off the oven while you are coolling the dessert. Return to oven and watch it until you see bubbles all over the top of the dessert. Take out and chill for an hour or two and serve. This burning the sugar is a matter of seconds, so it must be watched. The sugar will be crispy and caramelized.

TO AVOID this fuss, make your caramelized sugar toppings in separate pieces on the morning of your party. You will say "How in the world can you do this?" Here's how. You make a sugar "lid" to fit the container in which you have put the Crème. Actually, I like to serve the Crème Brûlée in individual serving dishes, so I make several little lids. A ramekin is about the right size, for the portions of this rich dessert should be small. It is also easier to serve and the burned sugar is easier to handle in smaller sizes.

For each portion, allow 1 scant to 1 medium tablespoon of brown sugar depending on the size of the plates you use for serving the Crème. Sieve 1 spoon of sugar onto a well buttered cooky sheet, spread out with a spoon or knife to the round size and shape of the ramekin, using the edge of the spoon. A paper pattern cut to fit the disk is a helpful gauge of size. I would not try doing over four at a time for your oven may be of uneven temperature. However, if two get "done" you can take the cooky sheet out, allow it to cool for a minute, then lift up the "done" ones carefully with a spatula and return the others to the oven to heat again. I have reheated some when they were not quite melted and it worked like a charm.

The oven should be of a 350° F. temperature, so heat the sugar, while you are sieving the brown sugar. In shaping the sugar, allow only enough sugar to cover the pan less than a quarter of an inch thick. As one of my friends said, "You should be able to see through perfect Brûlée; it should be paper thin." You can push it into shape with a knife and allow the pan to show in places. Put into the oven, dial the heat to broil and sit and watch it. Don't move. After a minute to two minutes, the sugar is all melted and running together. Turn off the heat in the process if it starts to burn and let it stay in the oven until the sugar runs together. After removing it from the oven, let it cool for a minute, then test it with a spatula. When it can be lifted out, place quickly on wax paper and allow to cool. It gets brittle very fast, so you have to work quickly. When the pan is taken out of the oven it should be placed on a flat surface or the sugar will run. Also when lifting a Brûlée onto the wax paper, if it gets out of shape, pat it down quickly, or it will get brittle and break. These can be made in the morning and set in a dry place until ready to serve.

You can make these burned sugar tops in quantity and freeze them. But you do have to heat them after you take them out of the freezer. I store mine in small foil pie pans separated with wax paper and covered with foil. Take them out the morning of your party and in the late afternoon put them on your cooky sheet and heat them to the bubbling point ten inches under the broiler. This takes practically no time flat, so watch constantly to prevent their burning. Set them aside in a dry place until ready to use. Incidentally, if you have not got them quite the right shape you can sort of mold them by pushing the sugar here and there while it is still warm. But be sure to lift them off the cooky sheet as they cool. Otherwise they will crumble and break and then you are lost.

IF YOU don't want to fuss with the burnt sugar (which is well worth the effort) just mash up some good brittle candy (the kind without peanuts) and just before serving scatter it on top of the Crème. This gives you the crunchy texture that the sugar does, but it gives you a different flavor. It is delicious, nevertheless.

As this is such a rich dessert, you do not need to serve cake or cookies. When serving, to break the sugar, tap lightly with the back of the dessert or serving spoon. Meanwhile, whichever of these three methods you adopt, happy brûléeing!

YOU CAN LEAD A PRIVATE LIFE ON A PUBLIC BEACH

The Benoists' living room can be a cool, shaded retreat from the heat and glare of the beach, or it can be flooded with sunshine, as the owners' whims require. Light- and shade-regulating devices like shutter doors, bamboo blinds and Dutch doors make this flexibility possible.

This gathering place, part living room, part deck, gets glareless sunlight through its plastics roofing. (On pages 58 through 69 you can see 13 other effective installations of this same new material.) Plastics cut down heat and the bamboo blinds permit breezes to circulate.

PLANTS FOR A SEASHORE GARDEN INSURE BEACH PRIVACY

Plants for a seashore garden which will approximate the "privacy planting" described on pages 44 and 45 vary on practically every beach in the country, some thriving more noticeably in one area than in another. For the best results, it is advisable make the backbone of your seashore garden plants that are already growing on the site. Or locate plants that can be easily transplanted from a nearby site to your property.

Photographs of the Benoists' approach to private living at the shore appear on the preceding page.

Below are two cursory lists of plants that like sand, sun and salt air. One is a general list of native shore plants usually found on the West Coast; the other covers the East Coast.

Plants for the West Coast

TREES: Monterey pine, Monterey cypress, Aleppo pine (Pinus halepensis), Black acacia (Acacia melanoxylon)

SHRUBS—ROUGH SCREEN: Acacia armata, Acacia latifolia, Leptospermum laevigatum, Melaleuca ericoides, Pittosporum crassifolium, Rhamnus californica, Tamarix.

OTHER SHRUBS: Artemesias, Saltbush (Atriplex Breweri), Bladder senna, Wild lilac (Ceanothus), Elaeagnus pungens, Pfitzer juniper, Santolina, Baccharis, Teucrium fruticans

COLOR: Echium fastuosum, Statice, Marguerites, Sand verbena, (Abronia), Lupines, Seacliff agave

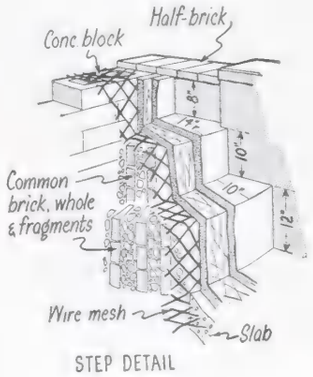
Decorative 6-foot pool, shown on page 98, cost about $250.

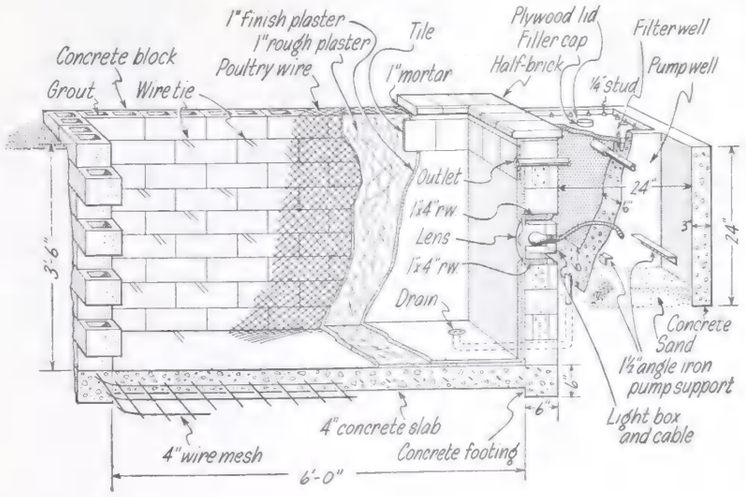
Built by a father for his little girl to swim in, this handsome pool was planned for use as a garden reflecting pool in future years. It was finished with a comfortable flat ledge around the top and a band of blue ceramic tile circling the water's edge. Underwater lighting was installed which will be used later to enhance the beauty of the reflecting pool.

The pool was laid on a 4″ concrete slab mixed 1 part cement to 2 sand to 3 rock. The slab was strengthened with a steel reinforcing mat. The walls were built of 6″ by 4″ by 12″ standard concrete block, set in mortar, with tie wires placed 15″ apart in the courses.



Blocks were set back to recess the corner for the steps, which were roughly formed of whole and broken bricks. An opening was left for the light fixture. Wells for the filter and pump were constructed of poured concrete.

Secured by the ties, ¾″ mesh poultry wire was used to line the pool walls, which were first plastered with a mixture of 1 part waterproof cement to 3 sand, applied rough. The band of 6″ by 6″ aqua-blue tile was grouted to the rough plaster 1″ below the top of the wall and the joints sealed with fine cement. The walls were then finished with 1 part white cement to 2 white sand. The inner edges of split brick which topped the walls were beveled with an emery stone.



A homemade filter was housed in a concrete tank adjacent to the pump well. Water, brought underground, feeds into the pool through an outlet near the top of the wall, circulates through the drain, pump and filter before re-entering the pool through its original outlet. Valves control the system, which operates one to two hours daily during the season.

A 75-watt pyrex glass bulb, enclosed in a light box fastened to the redwood lining of the light well, was wired to a garage switch with a ½″ steel underground cable. The bull's-eye glass lens used for underwater lighting was set into place before the rough plastering of the pool walls.

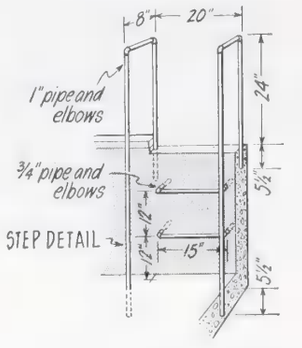
This children's pool, shown on page 99, cost about $100.

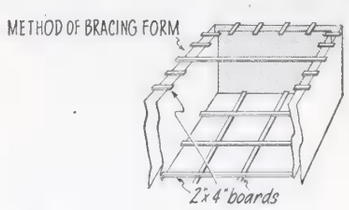
One of the principal problems in building a pool is excavating. The job is easier in some circumstances if the walls are raised above grade. If you choose to work with a shallow excavation, remember that a parapet can detract from the beauty of a garden, and probably will require skillful planting and terracing to make it fit successfully into its surroundings.

This 16′ by 6′ pool of poured-concrete is raised from a shallow pit to 24″ above grade. The bottom of the excavation was lined with 6″ by 6″ 10-gauge wire mesh for the 6″ slab; ⅜″ steel reinforcing rods were tied to the mesh with wire.

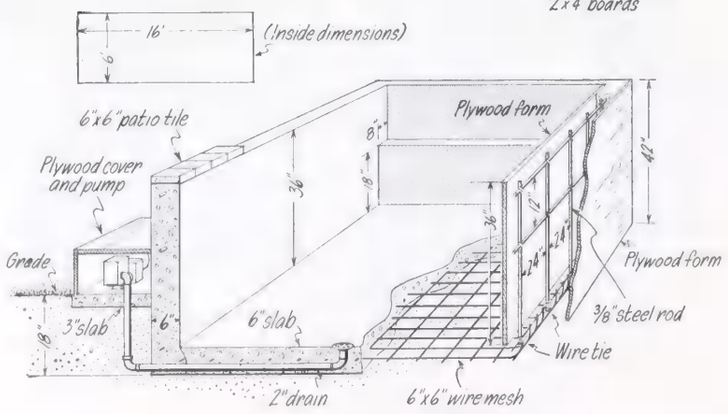
Forms were of salvaged plywood, more economical than new wood. Walls are 6″ thick with an 8″ by 18″ seat at one end; 2″ by 4″ braces kept the forms from buckling and collapsing under the weight of the concrete. Pre-mixed concrete of stiff consistency, was placed from all sides for an even build-up in the forms. The slab bottom was placed next, in more liquid form. The pipe hand-rails and steps were set during the pouring; 2½ cubic yards of concrete were required.



After the forms were removed, rough spots were plastered with 1 part cement and 3 sand, and terra cotta patio tile was grouted to the top of the parapet. The surface was finished with two coats of bonding cement paint and one of rubber base paint.



A brass fitting and plug close the drain and a $5 reconditioned centrifugal pump set on a concrete slab under a plywood cover empties the pool.



The water is chlorinated and changed every two weeks during the season.

As a safety precaution, this pool is covered when not in use by three 2″ by 4″ frames covered with ¼″ hardware cloth.

Everyone who installs a pool should consider safety for children. Various kinds of covers have been devised, but all have the drawback that a child might slip through or under the cover and be trapped. Many owners insist that a sizable pool that is not constantly watched should be protected by fencing for safety.

Plastics Panels

The stylish plastics panel installations shown on pages 57 through 69 call for lightweight, luminous paneling, which is generally available as sheets of polyester resins reinforced with fiber glass.

Major suppliers of the polyester resins which make these panels possible are: the American Cyanamid Co., the Barrett Division of Allied Chemical and Dye Corp., Bakelite Corp., Marco Products Dept. of Celanese Corp. of America, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Naugatuck Chemical Div. of U. S. Rubber Co., Rohm & Haas, Synvar Corp., Glidden Co., Harwick Standard Chemical Co., Reichhold Chemicals and General Electric Co.

Makers of the fiber glass, which not only strengthens the panels but increases their transmission of light, are: Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, and Ferro Corp.

Chief manufacturers of the paneling itself, which is made under many different trade names, are:

poured into an area defined by forms, usually of wood. The concrete is immediately leveled to the height of the side forms with a 2 x 4 or 2 x 6 board, the way a spoonful of sugar might be leveled with a knife. Final finishing of the concrete by troweling takes place only after the concrete has begun to set, or harden.

If the finishing is done with a wood trowel, commonly called a float, a gritty nonskid surface is produced. This is the finish typical of the average sidewalk, driveway or basement floor. Carborundum sprinkled on at floating will yield a surface that sparkles in sunlight and is nonskid when wet.

After wood floating, concrete may be swept with a straw, fiber, or steel broom to produce a rough traction surface. Brooming cuts glare, but it is a finish that can be cleaned only by forceful hosing.

In an opposite vein, after wood floating is complete, the surface may be made very hard, slick and glossy by the use of a steel trowel. It takes up the job of smoothing after the float leaves off. Though this floor is among those easiest to maintain and is ideal for dancing and games, it is slippery, especially when wet, and so is a menace to children and the aged. However, its glare may be cut by dyeing or coloring—a green tint being a good choice for the purpose.

SOME of the most pleasing concrete textures are produced by exposing the crushed stone, pebbles or other aggregates that compose concrete's bulk.

The beauty of an exposed aggregate depends entirely upon the quality of the aggregate. If pebbles or crushed rock are to be used, their careful selection is of the utmost importance. You'll find gravels that are red, rusty, slate-blue, buff, pepper-and-salt, white—with pebbles in countless shapes, sizes and degrees of uniformity.

But don't stop with gravel and crushed gray rock in your consideration of aggregates. Don't overlook crushed black slag, crushed feld-spar, mica-spar, granite screenings, basalt, dolomite, sandstone, marble chips, garnet stone, brick chips and shell.

If some aggregates produce a surface too sharp and rough for walking, grinding machines equipped with carborundum wheels may be used to smooth down the surface. Terrazzo floors, for example, are the result of grinding down concrete floors containing a high percentage of exposed marble chips.

Aggregates vary in their ability to weather and to sustain traffic. Are weathering and traffic problems for you? Then be guided by local practice and experience, modifying it by your own knowledge of your particular situation.

Exposing aggregate is a simple operation. When concrete has set hard enough so that it will support your weight, scrub it down with a fiber brush or broom and water. A stiff hosing is best to carry away fine aggregate and cement paste at the surface and bare the coarse aggregate beneath. A 10% solution of muriatic acid is sometimes helpful as a scrubbing solution. If you use it, wear rubber gloves.

Similar in appearance to exposed aggregate is paving with aggregate applied as topping. Sprinkle the aggregate on freshly floated concrete and press it well into the surface with board or wood trowel. Spread a paste of rich mortar on the concrete and distribute pebbles or other aggregate over it.

In planning an exposed aggregate surface, do not overlook investigating materials native to the area in which you live. If the material is commonplace, applying it in a way that avoids outmoded patterns may rescue it from the humdrum. Plan carefully and be prepared to proceed slowly. Some of the most beautiful pebble walks have been the result of collecting specimens over a period of many years. Pebbles individually selected for size and color, treasured for the future, and then placed individually by hand, produce not just a walk or a pool bottom, but a work of beauty rich with meaning for its creator and for all who see it.

TEXTURE is often a matter of contrast. If you are seeking something more than a standard, strive for the interplay of the smooth and the rough, the plain and the patterned in all their subtle variations. Each texture catches and reflects light in a different way. Pave an area with smooth, perfectly troweled three-foot discs of concrete. Remember, glare is no problem if there is shade. Between the discs pour a rough, crushed rock.

Border a smooth terrace with an edging or rugged texture, defining the inner area like a carpet. A heavily textured border, perhaps cobbles or granite chips, contrasted with the smooth area, will act as a psychological barrier to keep intruding feet away from plantings and flower beds. Use angular stone where walking must be discouraged.

Most important, before proceeding with any type or texture of concrete, make a test block or two. Only a small amount of concrete need be used, just enough to give you a visual sample, but it will help you proceed with confidence. Make your first project a small one. It will be easy for the basic technique is simple. The rest is art.

not me Mom says I fuss less, eat more—play like a little angel, since we added Lennox central air conditioning. I catch fewer colds; raise fewer tantrums. I'm as peppy as my air conditioned airedale. And take it from me—air conditioned parents behave better too!

not me I never grumble about helping with housework. There's so little to do. Our Lennox central air conditioning has an exclusive hammock filter that traps up to 70% of all dust in the air. The dustgard seal keeps unfiltered air from leaking through.

not me As a builder, I know that air conditioning is not a luxury. Why, the home buyer adds just a trifle to his monthly payments by installing Lennox central air conditioning when he builds, but he adds tremendously to the resale value of his home—and to his enjoyment of it.

not you You'll agree when you talk to one of the 5,422 Lennox dealer-experts about the Lennox all-season air conditioning plan. Start with winter or summer air conditioning, add the other later. TO HELP YOU UNDERSTAND MUSIC BETTER AND ENJOY IT MORE

SPONSORED BY THE BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB, this new idea is designed for those who enjoy good music but who are aware, too often, that they do not listen to it with complete understanding and appreciation. There is no doubt about the reason: most of us are not primed about what to listen for. MUSIC-APPRECIATION RECORDS meet this need—for a fuller understanding of music—better than any means ever devised. This form of self-education can be as thorough as the Music Appreciation courses given in many universities.

ON ONE SIDE there is a full performance of a great musical work. The records feature orchestras and soloists of recognized distinction in this country and abroad. You listen to this performance first, or afterward, as you desire, and then . . .

ON THE OTHER SIDE is an illuminating analysis of the music with the themes and other main features of the work played separately with running explanatory comment, so that you can learn what to listen for in order to apppreciate the work fully.

YOU SUBSCRIBE BUT TAKE ONLY THE RECORDS YOU WANT . . . A new MUSIC-APPRECIATION RECORD will be issued—for subscribers only—every month. The announcement about each forthcoming record will be written by the noted composer and music commentator Deems Taylor. After reading this descriptive essay you may take the record or not. You are not obligated to take any specified number of records. And you may stop at any time!

TWO TYPES OF RECORDS AVAILABLE . . . All MUSIC-APPRECIATION RECORDS are high-fidelity, long-playing records of the highest quality—33⅓ R.P.M. on Vinylite. They are of two kinds: first, a so-called Standard Record—a twelve-inch disc—which presents the performance on one side, the analysis on the other. This is sold at $3.60, to subscribers only. The other is an Analysis-Only Record—a ten-inch disc—priced at $2.40. The latter is made available each month for any subscriber who may already have a satisfactory long-playing record of the work being presented. (A small charge is added to the prices above to cover postage and handling.)

TRY A ONE-MONTH SUBSCRIPTION — WITH NO OBLIGATION TO CONTINUE . . . Why not make a simple trial, to see if these records are as pleasurable and as enlightening as you may anticipate? The record you choose will be sent to you at once—at no charge. You may end the subscription immediately after hearing this record, or you may cancel any time thereafter.

PLEASE RETURN ONLY IF YOU HAVE A 33⅓ R.P.M. RECORD PLAYER

Gown designed by Hubert de Givenchy expressly for Cadillac

If there is anything more enjoyable than riding in a Cadillac, it is arriving in a Cadillac. For wherever a lady chooses to travel in the "car of cars," she finds a very special welcome awaiting her. First of all, there is the extra measure of courtesy and respect she is accorded by all whom she encounters. For, stranger though she may be, she is known and recognized everywhere as a member of the world's most distinguished family of motorists. And how wonderful she feels! For no matter how long—or how brief—her stay at the wheel, her Cadillac always leaves her refreshed and alert. Owners tell us that, all in all, it constitutes the perfect climax to each wonderful Cadillac journey. Why not visit your dealer at your very first opportunity—and borrow a 1955 Cadillac—and see for yourself? We wager you'll be looking forward to the day when you can end every journey in a Cadillac car!

This is the story of

sheets of Du Pont Nylon

(and it's a story to invite sweet dreams)

You know Du Pont nylon . . . know its caressing softness in slips and nightgowns . . . its loveliness in stockings . . . its long, long wear in blouses . . . and you certainly know its easy care! Now you can enjoy all of these advantages in lovely sheets that invite sweet, sweet dreams.

Once folks try sheets of Du Pont nylon, either woven or tricot, they won't use any others. Why don't you try them? We think you will say sheets of Du Pont nylon are made to dream on!

Feather-light sheets of Du Pont nylon are easy to handle, a snap to wash because they never become waterlogged, heavy to lift out of the washing machine or tub.

Quick-drying sheets of Du Pont nylon are washed, dried and put back on the beds before lunch. Because they're nylon, they seldom need ironing—another ease-of-care advantage.

Fitted-bottom sheets of Du Pont nylon simplify bedmaking . . . and these sheets stay neat, trim no matter how much a sleeper tosses. They come in white and lovely pastels.

Space-saving sheets of Du Pont nylon, when folded, are as compact as an ordinary pillowcase. Look for sheets of Du Pont nylon in your favorite store next time you shop.*

Beautiful Custom Made Drapes

approx. $1.50 a yard

Now—from Carabao alone—you can get custom made drapes, tailored with all the fine quality features of decorator-made draperies. Yet you pay less than you would for ordinary ready-mades.

- Carabao drapes are custom made to your exact width and length measurements
- Fabric is "tabled" for precision cutting so your drapes will always hang perfectly
- French pleated by hand. We use plastic crinoline to assure perfect headings
- Weights are sewn in the full 3-inch hems to give hanging perfection
- In joining widths of fabric, we cut off the selvages and seam the fabric with an overlock stitch so seam cannot pucker
- Seams are positioned in the pleats so they are completely invisible

Remember—only Carabao gives you these custom-tailored features, plus an unequaled selection of fine quality fabrics.

OUR SIXTH YEAR OF SELLING DIRECT BY MAIL

Our Two-Dollar Dust Cloth ISN'T a Dust Cloth!

Why do we keep calling Conniver a Dust Cloth if it isn't? Well, YOU try to figure out what to call a cloth that does everything Conniver does!

You might come up with "protecto-cloth" and "conditioning cloth" or "polish-protector" or something of that sort, that sounds fairly silly and doesn't make much sense. And if you're anything like we are, you'll finally decide that no two-word name will EVER get across the whole story—and you'd better simply depend upon people to read all the facts and then prove them (at no risk!) in their own homes!

And the facts are simple: Conniver makes it practically impossible for anything to stick to anything else! Yes, that's absolutely true—because Conniver contains more Silicone than we have yet seen in any other cloth!

And Silicone is the miracle-stuff you've read about all over, including Reader's Digest.

Use It On ANY Surface . . .

Wood, glass, metal, porcelain, plastic or leather—whatever it is—a touch with Conniver applies a tough but invisible film of Silicone that shrugs off dust or dirt! The result is that anything wiped with Conniver is afterward beautifully cleaned and polished with just a flick of the cloth. That's because Silicone is one of the finest "release materials" known to science—and Conniver is loaded with it! The Silicone stays in the cloth, too.

Use Conniver on woodwork, furniture, mirrors, porcelain and chrome kitchen appliances, windows—everywhere in your home. It won't hide or discolor any finish, but it will enhance lustre. By the way, regular use of Conniver prevents the formation of both rust and tarnish. Nice to know that, if you own silverware, or if there are guns, golf clubs, garden tools and such around the house.

You clean Conniver just by shaking it. Or, if you prefer, dunk it in a mild detergent solution. It will come up smiling, because the Silicrome is there for keeps!

We Guarantee It—to the Hilt!

We just don't know how to write a stronger Guarantee than the one we've put on Conniver. We say that if Conniver doesn't do everything we promised, we'll instantly refund your money—and you may keep the cloth! There are no strings on this. You are the judge.

Conniver buyers know that every word we've said is true. You will know too—so mail us your order right now.

We sell Conniver in two sizes. The standard 12x18-inch Conniver is $2.00 (or three for $5.00). And the double-size 18x24-inch deluxe Conniver is $3.00 (or three for $8.00). We pay the postage, but we cannot accept C.O.D. orders.

You buy Conniver by mail—only from us in all the country. And we Guarantee that you'll be glad you did!

CUTIE PIES. Darling little pie pans are just the right size for individual servings! And each set of 6 comes with a box of mix that makes just enough crispy crust for the six. Imagine the fun of serving a complete baby pecan pie, or lemon meringue, or juicy blueberry pie to each guest! Sturdy aluminum, 4⅜" wide, set of 6 is $1.95 ppd. Artisan Galleries, 2100 N. Haskell, Dallas 4, Texas.

"KISSIN' WEARS OUT— Cookin' Don't" is the earthy moral of this pin-up trivet. Hang it in the kitchen to remind kissin' kibitzers that smooching with the chef may spoil the stew—but might well substitute for dessert. 8" x 8½", it's cast aluminum and comes in a black finish for $3.25; antique brass finish, $4.25; antique copper finish, $5.25. Ppd. House in the Wildwood, Box 358, Baxter Springs, Kansas.

TRAVEL SCRABBLE. It's pocket-size, and the magnetic tiles cling to the 8" x 8" opened playing board, no matter how bumpy the plane or pitching the sea or breezy the beach! Steel board folds into an 8" x 4" x ¾" box. Ivory plastic tiles have imbedded magnets. Felt carrying case becomes tile bag during play. With 4 racks, $7.95 ppd. Holiday House, 18 Bellevue Theatre Bldg., Upper Montclair, New Jersey.

IT'S THE LOVELIEST LIGHT OF THE YEAR, we think. It has the exotic delicacy of the best Japanese art, yet it's made in the good old USA. The hurricane shade has real leaves and grasses impregnated between sheets of laminated wheat-color grass cloth. Brass-trimmed, wired for electricity, it's 16" high, 5½" in diameter. $15.95 ppd. Ward Phillips Co., Carpentersville, Ill.

NEEDLEPOINT COVERS for your dining-room chairs, side chairs or ottoman have an heirloom look that you'll be delighted with. Loom-woven with a Spring Glory floral design in multicolors on solid black, rose-tan sandalwood or hunter green, they have foam rubber backing. 20" x 20", $3.98; 27" x 30", $5.98 each. Ppd. Elron Products, 225 W. Erie St., Chicago 10, Ill.

TAKE A FRUIT BOAT that's made of palm leaves, and is as handsome a show-off piece as we've seen anywhere. Fill it with fruit, and it will make your mantel, dining-room table, or coffee table look like a magazine illustration. Or fill it with potato chips, popcorn, etc., and take it out on the terrace for cocktails. 27" long. $3.95 ppd. Jeredith Manor, Box 130, Nyack, New York.

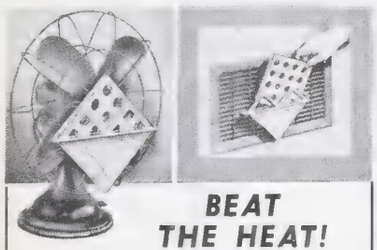
LOOK WHAT I FOUND FOR YOU IN GERMANY'S BLACK FOREST

It's hard to believe—a real cuckoo clock for only $3.95 – delivered to your door direct from Free Europe, postpaid and duty-free. But it's wonderfully true through my unique direct import plan. I wish you could have been with me when I visited the famed clock makers of Germany's Black Forest.

It was like turning the calendar back a hundred years or more. Skilled woodcarvers whose trade has been handed down from father to son for generations, still dress in the legendary lederhosen.

With razor sharp knives they deftly fashion the clock panels in the centuries old traditional designs. Other craftsmen provide the bellows for the clear, flute-like cuckoo voices. Still others install the accurate weight-and pendulum movements.

Wages are low in the Black Forest. And so was the price given me when I placed a large order. But even I, accustomed to the magic American dollars perform abroad, am amazed at this bargain I now offer you.



You'll find this charming timekeeper perfect for your living room, den, alcove, child's room or kitchen. Its quaint design in black walnut antique finish makes it an interesting conversational piece. Its cheery "cuckoo" every quarter hour adds a happy note to your home.

Genuine CUCKOO CLOCK $3.95 Postpaid Duty-Free

Order your Black Forest Cuckoo Clock now. Order them as gifts, too, each shipped direct. (Not more than one addressed to the same person.) Send only $3.95 for each clock. No COD's. Postman collects 15c foreign packet fee which can't be prepaid. Order now on my positive satisfaction-or-money-back guarantee.

BUY OF THE MONTH. We like this wonderful limed oak stand as a what-not for a bathroom. But you may want to use it in the kitchen, hall, bedroom or den. It has two full-size shelves, each 18" x 9", and two 9" x 10" platforms for a radio, clock, ivy or guest towels. It sets up in minutes, is 30" high. $3.95 each; $7.75 for 2! Ppd. Bard's, Dept. 1166, 81 Salem Lane, Evanston, Ill.

LUCKY FUKUSUKE is a god of good fortune. He is also a bank. Centuries ago, a very rich and fat little man with a big head, Fukusuke by name, became a much-beloved figure because of his kindness and generosity. Soon the Japanese people began to pray to him for prosperity and happiness. Finished in brilliant temple colors, 7" high, he's $2.95 ppd. Beverly Baker, Box 135, Darien, Connecticut.

PUT YOUR TEETH IN IT. A ceramic denture dish is a gay overnight parking place for false teeth, and a very practical one, too. The cover is ringed around with air holes, and the 4" bowl is decorated with Mom's, Pop's, Gram's, or Gramp's. It also comes without the personalization. It's a fine night spot for a child's braces, too. $2.95 ppd. Gilbert & Leonard, Northern Blvd., Manhasset, New York.

Sleep? Why sleep . . . when you can be thinking about Those Heavenly Carpets by Lees! You've never seen such colors as I saw in the Lees Carpet Selector! I went to the store with just one idea. One new carpet for our living room. Then three things happened. First, I saw all the wonderful Lees Carpets together. So easy to match, compare and choose. Second, the man told me about the Easy Carpet Payment Plan. For a small down payment you can absolutely fill your house with color and joy — (and I do mean Lees Carpets). Third, I dashed home happy as a deer — to collect swatches, samples, and color cues. No wonder I can't sleep! Tomorrow, darlings, I'm flying straight back to that Lees Selector — to start owning the dream carpets of my life. . .

. . . those heavenly carpets by LEES

HOW TO SOLVE COMMON PROBLEMS IN PAINTING

Haven't you, after frustrating hours of painting, wished a professional painter would explain to you why your picture went wrong and show you how to fix it? Haven't you felt the need to understand the basic painting principles involved, so you'd never make the same mistake again? This kind of professional help is now available.

The faculty of the Famous Artists Schools have analyzed the work of thousands. They've learned that certain problems crop up again and again. And they've organized their findings into a valuable, instructive booklet. Problems such as you yourself might be facing are illustrated in full size. In simple words and straightforward diagrammatic drawings, you are shown how a professional artist solves each problem.

Valuable Booklet Offered FREE

We think you'll agree this booklet contains far more practical help than many books you may have purchased. Yet the Famous Artists Schools will send it to you free to acquaint you with their unique teaching method. There are no strings attached to the offer. The booklet is indeed FREE. To get it—simply mail the coupon below.

KEEPS DUST OFF CLOTHES!

Transparent "Closet-Coverette" Protects Like Garment Bag Yet Clothes Are Easy To Hang or Remove!

At last! No more whisk-brooming . . . no more unsightly shoulder dust to worry about every time you take a garment from the closet. Now you can easily keep clothes clean and fresh-looking while they hang—and without cramming them into clumsy, hard-to-get-at garment bags. Convenient new-type transparent protector simply drops over closet rod like a hood, gently drapes over clothes . . . and you never have to remove it. Heavy, glass-clear plastic keeps dust, soot and lint off your clothes—yet any garment is as easy to see and get at as though uncovered. And you hang or remove things in a jiffy through a handy center vent—without fumbling or groping—without crushing or wrinkling other garments. No zippers to jam or to snag clothes. "Closet-Coverette" saves you money: eliminates need for individual shoulder covers; cuts cleaning bills. Available in 4 sizes to cover 6 to 18 garments.

PLAYING NUNS

Take Me Out to the Ball-Game!

The Eternal Feminine, even in Angelic League Baseball! These three Little Nuns make a particularly appealing group: the demure batter, the angelic umpire, and the pitcher who seems to have been struck with a purely unheavenly impulse just in the act of warming up! Figures are made of finely glazed porcelain, their grey habits touched with black and white, the bat and ball in gold. 5" high. A particularly nice gift for someone you know . . . yourself, for instance!

WIND CHIMES

Remember these old-fashioned Wind Chimes from Grandmother's house? Remember how cool and melodious they would sound when a breath of air set the thin glass chimes tinkling? They'd refresh you more psychologically than a dozen electric fans. Hang a Wind Chime in your window, in an open doorway, on the porch. Listen to its melody which ancient Japanese poets likened to the voice of a loved one. Hand-painted glass pendants are strung on cord which hangs up pagoda fashion.

Extensole NEW MODERN

• Different from ordinary extension dining-tables, the Extensole drop-leaf has no tell-tale split to detract from the beauty of its smooth, cherry top. (Extensole's patented construction). Fully extended it seats up to 10. It's an excellent value at only $145 (90″ length). Other Extensole dining-tables are priced from $69. Ask your dealer to show you this table and other pieces illustrated. New design, new "dry sherry" finish, and bright brass accents make this furniture truly good modern.

Extensole Console dining extension table (above) is only 40x20 closed, extending into a dining table that seats up to 8. Like the other pieces shown, it is Extensole's New Modern in cherry accented with bright brass.

Extensole's Buffet and China harmonizes with the tables, providing valuable storage and adding distinction to your dining area.

Extensole's New Modern Chairs solidly constructed, with foam rubber seats and brass trim.

All these pieces are also available in Extensole's popular blond finish.

Inland's dispenser-cooler for beverages is a worth-while convenience for party use; a convenience also filled with lemonade in the kitchen for the small fry. A large ice cube cylinder keeps beverage contents chilled for hours; a push-button spigot makes for easy dispensing. The 1-gallon capacity affords 20 iced-tea servings, 36 of juices or double Martinis. Made of thick pressed glass; chromed metal trim. $12.95. From Macy's, N.Y.

Ti-Dee Litterbag for autos is supplemented with disposable, moisture-proof liners which you simply discard when filled. A snap clip hangs outer bag from dashboard, a door panel or wherever convenient, affording a receptacle for refuse and paper accumulated en route. Litterbag is sturdily made of vinyl plastic with tweed-like texture in 12 colors. $2.25 with 3 liners; liners are 30 for 90¢. Advance Enterprises, Box 1362, York, Pa.

Tasty Flame strips are hickory wood cut wafer-thin. They're easily broken into wanted lengths to build a firebed; igniting the firebed requires only a match. In a flash you've a hot, savory fire that burns cleanly and reduces to fine ash. You also get hickory-bark "slices" to use as supplementary fuel. A 15-lb. package (strips and bark for 15 fires) costs $3.50. Ideal for beach or hiking use. From Tasty Flame, Box 266, Glen Ridge, N.J.

Bug-Proof paper products are impregnated with a chlordane insecticide that kills roaches, ants, silverfish, flies. The roll paper for lining shelves, drawers, closets, has insecticide action on both sides; paper itself is white, strong, has gloss finish. $1.25 a roll; 15″ x 40′. Bug-Proof garbage bag is a disposable liner for refuse cans treated also to provide insect control. $1.50 for 40. From Page & Biddle, 21 Station Rd., Haverford, Pennsylvania.

The pony express route is quieter with carpet

As any mother knows, a cowboy leads a hard life.

Hard on the ears, hard on the clothes and, very often, hard on the cowboy.

Carpet on the floor goes a long way toward making life easier all around.

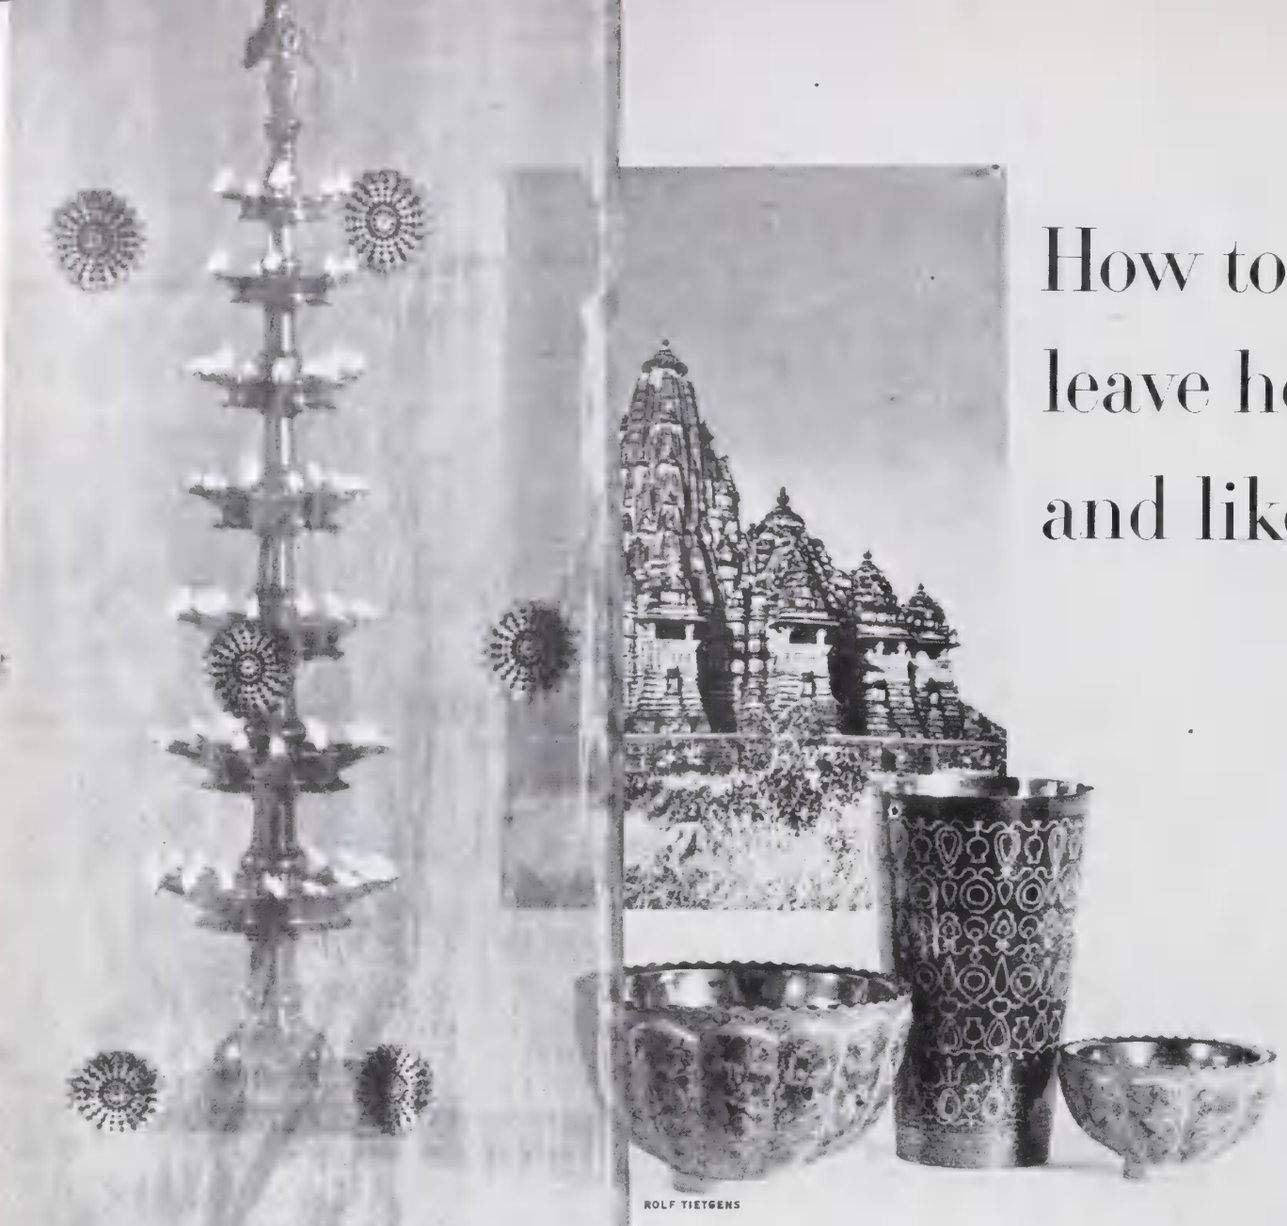
Carpet not only gives warmth and dignity to a room, it is a highly successful investment in comfort, quiet and safety for those you love.

Carpet prevents the slips and skids that often turn a sheriff's posse into just two small boys crying. Carpet swallows noise . . . makes home a quieter, more peaceful place to be.

And keeping carpet clean is easy. Just once around with the vacuum. No scrubbing, rinsing, waxing or polishing.

Carpet gives so much and costs so little – in time, in work and in money. When you move, of course, your lovely, long-wearing carpet goes with you. You haven't invested time and money in floors you leave behind.

Yes, all in all, you can't do better than carpet for more pleasant living – with or without cowboys. And, at today's prices, you can probably afford to do two rooms for what you think one will cost.



When you visit your carpet store, ask about their budget plan. Do it soon.

ROLF TIETGENS

By MARION GOUGH

For almost as long as we can remember, India has been a gleam in our eye. There was a time, during our early adolescent or Kipling period, when all we wanted very much to be was a pukka memsahib —a witty, wise and warm chin-up sort of gel—the wife, naturally, of a Ronald Colman-type diplomat, a ten-goal man and Number 10 Downing Street material, by gad, if ever there was any. And even though it has long since been apparent that such will never be our lot, our heart, like Plasticene in the hands of Amy Woodford-Finden, Louis Bromfield and Rumer Godden, has never really left the Shalimar, the Punjab, the Great Trunk Road. We fervently believe that one day we shall feast our eyes on the all-pink city of Jaipur, see its fabulous enamel jewels made with the rosy dust of powdered rubies. One early dawn on the cool tea terraces of Darjeeling we'll watch Everest emerge from the night, its snows shimmering like opal. We'll listen to temple bells and the song of the bulbul; we'll wear marigolds, (Continued on page 106)

Dates and rates are changeable. Prospective tourists should confirm this information with their travel agents, transportation companies, and hotels.

Sumptuous souvenirs of India—a shimmering sari tissue of silk and gold threads; a traditional lamp that welcomes guests with myriad lights; Kashmiri bowls of papier-mâché; a vase of Banaras brass. In the background, the golden Kandariya Mahadeva Temple in Khajuraho.

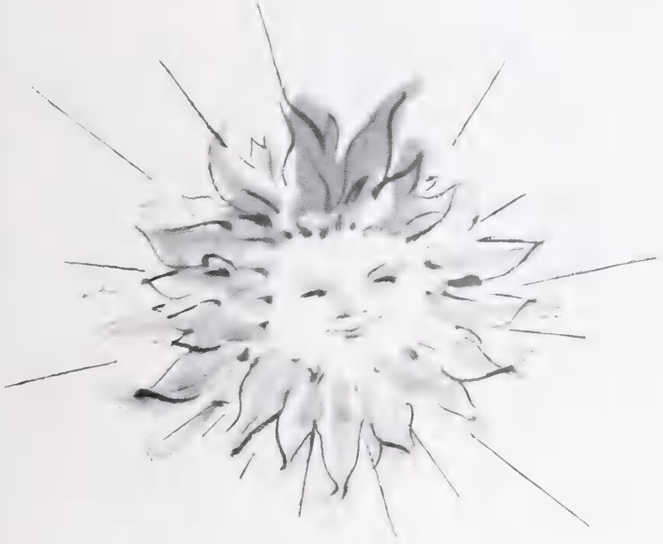
THE EXCITING NEW NOMAD

Twins every family wants

"Gee, Daddy, we just have to have the car today." That plaintive plea isn't always easy to answer, is it? But it needn't be so hard—and here's the easy way to get around it . . .

A pair of dashing Motoramic Chevrolets!

There's the Nomad, for instance, beau ideal in station wagon styling. With ample room in back for any youthful equipment, and seats for six up front, this devil-may-care station wagon is ready for any and all summertime expeditions.



If Mom wants the roomy Nomad for shopping, the girls won't object to wheeling off with the group in the swift, sprightly coupe—low-cost driving at its best. There's something about that bright, low Body by Fisher that means youth and vitality. The whole gang will love you for it.

So bid adieu to those youthful transportation problems. Those two Chevrolets will be the most eye-filling combination in town. And your Chevrolet dealer has both sets of keys. See him soon! . . . Chevrolet Division of General Motors, Detroit 2, Michigan.

Make every day sweet as summer

When we were children, we sought a sweet that would last all day. Now as adults we have found one that lasts all year:

- It is the sweetness of summer savored in winter.
- It is the zest of activity that is relished in passivity.
- It is the fun of fixing your home during the long sunny days for the fun it will give you in the long wintry months.
- It is the pleasure of projects planned in July, executed in August, and enjoyed in September, October, November, December, January, February, March, April and May till next June.

So here are 25 special ideas to summer-spark your imagination with projects that are a pleasure for now and forever.

Do you need a garden shelter?

"Perfect days" are rare, but there is no reason why you can't be comfortable in your garden any time—spring through fall

By DR. JOSEPH E. HOWLAND

Half the fun of gardening comes in sitting around enjoying the sights and sounds and fragrances you helped create. But sitting around is no fun if you are getting blown apart, rained on or scorched by the sun. It's a good garden only if its builder remembers that people, too, need protection. Providing protection isn't such a big job. Nor need it be costly. We show a stylish garden shelter—today's version of the play house—that owes its style to its soaring roof and the dramatic glow of a translucent Vimlite "skin": owes its relatively low-cost to the simple Indian-tepee framing and liberal use of Vimlite (14¢ a square foot).

This shelter was built for weather conditions (Please turn to page 115)

Landscape architect:
John Carmak

Builder:
Huebsch Garden Construction Co.

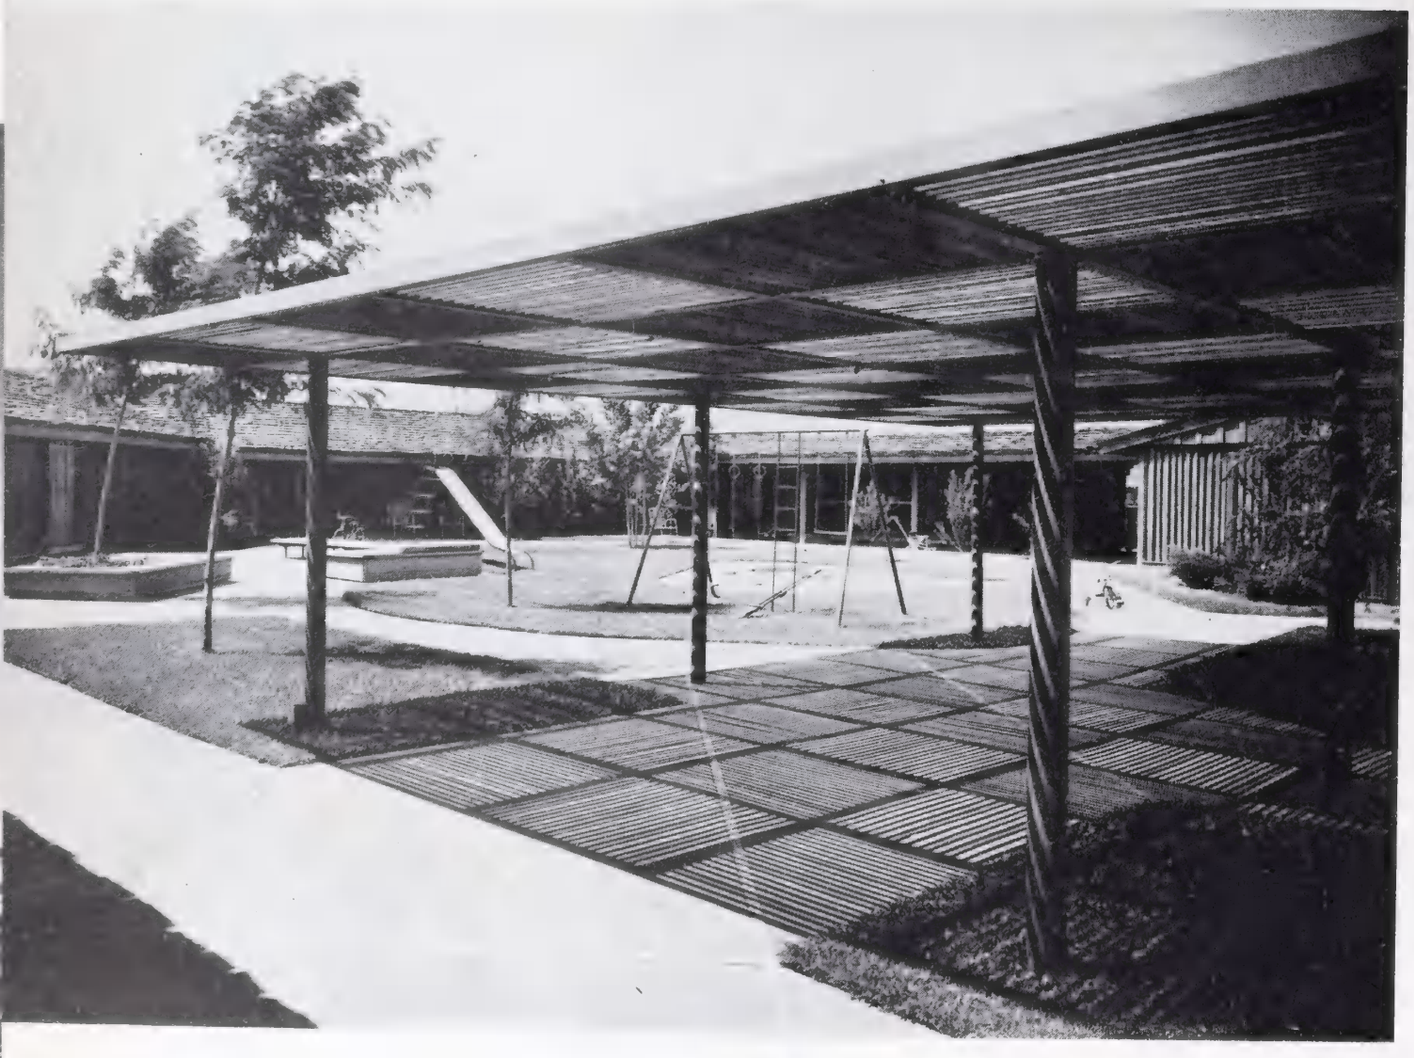
Exhibited at:
San Mateo, Calif., Floral Fiesta

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Above: Indian tepee is easiest form to erect, being self-supporting from its 6′ 2x6 rafters. That it can be handsome is obvious. White triangles here are white canvas. The other triangles and the entire roof are made of Vimlite, a wire-reinforced plastic.

Opposite page: Shelter provides comfortably for 12 people, could be lengthened easily from its present 20 feet to accommodate 18. In rainy climate open end would be partly closed. Where flies and mosquitoes are a problem, use tension screens for doors in the open end.

Right: Elevating shelter on a wooden deck insures against flooding during heavy rains, also gets people high enough so there is no feeling of dampness even when they sit there in slightly chilly spring or fall weather. Sand box in foreground is easy to supervise from shelter.



If your trees are young, your terrace too hot,

if your garden wilts with you in the simmering August sun and you cherish each refreshing, passing breeze, then . . .

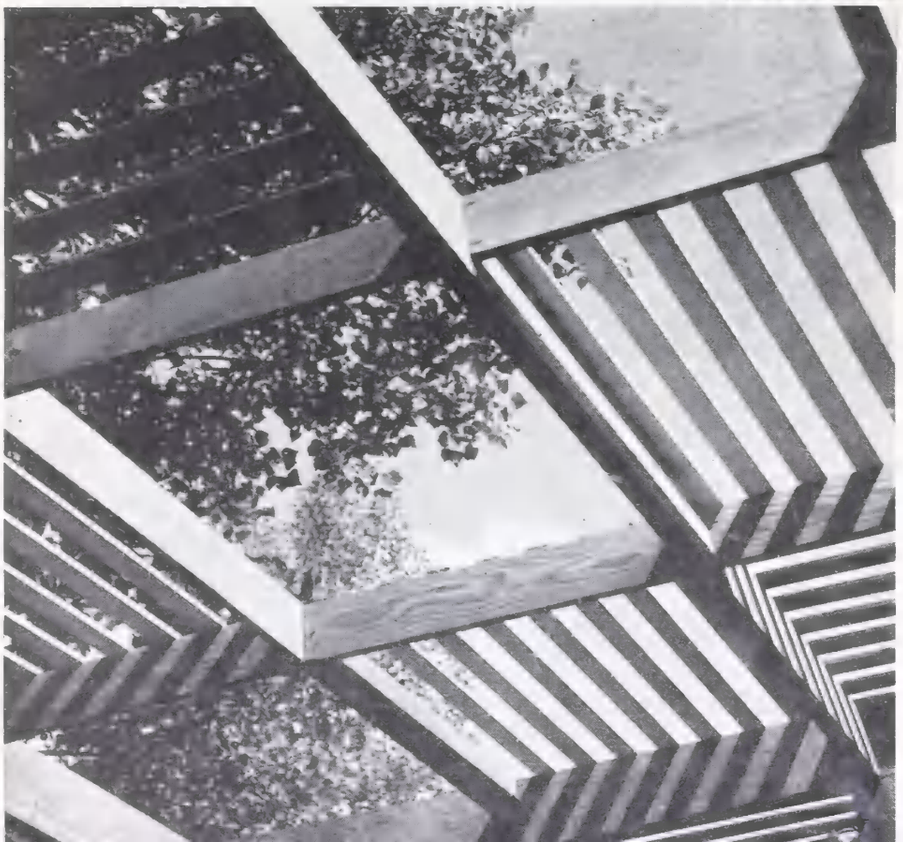
Maybe you need shade — not shelter

By JEAN LAWSON



Where trees grow slowly, light structural shade offers comfort and a sense of protection while a garden is still young. Since children need shade as well as sun to play in, landscape architect Thomas Church designed this gaily painted permanent steel frame with a 1″ x 2″ wood slat canopy for the young daughters of the David Stones. Later, when retarding effects of wind have been overcome, trees will tower above trellis, making area even more intimate.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Invitingly cool and green now, this entrance to the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Lou Maxon was once open to a hot, overpowering expanse of paving and countryside. A sturdy trellis "tied" down with luxuriant wisteria and shrubs reduced entry area to more comfortable human scale. Firm support, important to all structural shade devices, is provided by columns of steel pipe.

PHOTOGRAPH BY PHIL FEIN

You can increase the shade from a low-cost open wood grille by filling in some squares with narrow wood strips. This selective sifting of the sun can be decorative as well as functional, breaking up large terrace areas with shadows on the ground and a play of light and dark against the sky. Wood strip panels can be made removable. Landscape architect E. L. Anderson alternated direction of strips, increasing interest.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Providing shade for tender plants can result in a handsome architectural feature. The use of heavy wood and imaginative inside-out construction contributes to the exceptional beauty of this lath house built for Judge and Mrs. James Agee by architects Anshen and Allen. Roof lath is fastened to the underside of 3″ x 6″ rafters, thus clearly defining the sense of structure. Metal stirrups secure the frame to the concrete foundation. Harry W. Shepherd, landscape architect.

DRAWINGS BY LEAVITT DUDLEY

Supplementary sun protection makes this a cozy corner for plants as well as people. Existing brick wall deflected excessive wind from the sea, but area was still too bright for comfort. Now, with glass strip on windward side and high, airy lath above, patio is ideal place for tender ferns and fuchsias, as well as outdoor entertaining. Garden of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Orr.

Cantilevered roof and plant display shelf could be attached to any existing building. Because roof is angled, viewer tends to look up at plants and beyond. This makes structure seem larger and more impressive than it really is. Contrasting color of shelves and beams also adds importance. Designed by Thomas Church for H. L. Maudsley.

Make decorative knobs and pulls from variety-store items

ROBERT STANTON, Architect

Unusual hardware needn't cost a mint of money. Give your home a custom look by putting your imagination and a few dollars to work for you. A trip to San Francisco's Chinatown and $10 produced the Indian hand-chased candle holders, ash trays, brass bells and dish, Japanese lacquer soup bowls, trivets and cork shown above. The handsome fittings on the opposite page are the finished products derived from these raw materials. If custom-designed, they would cost you twenty times more, but instead, they add elegant touches at a low price. You'll find it exciting to search through variety stores for unique objects and convert them to your own special hardware. Change the pieces around when you redecorate and you'll be amazed at the distinction you can give old furniture and cabinetwork.

A. Ingenious door pull is created by removing three brass cups from Indian candle holder, pushing them into one another and attaching resulting handle to round trivet by means of wooden bracket arm. Leg from trivet caps the screw holding cups and bracket together. Cost: under $5.

B. Single candle holder of brass cost only $1.25 but makes either smart-looking coat hook for a dressing-room wall or knob for a door. Stock maple door pull, stained black, is the button. Screw holes are drilled at top and bottom of the candlestick base to secure it to the wall, door or drawer.

C. Small-scale pulls like this one are easy to make and have a wide variety of uses. Here only three parts are needed: a drip cup from brass candlestick like those described above; an egg-shaped piece of cork for the pull proper, and a long brass screw. Put them all together and the job is done.

D. Ornate and out-size though it is, this massive door pull is as simple to construct as item C. Three lacquer coasters, turned upside down, serve as an escutcheon plate. Pull itself is a hand-chased Indian candy dish, drilled for a screw attachment and topped by leg from a brass trivet.

E. Indian bells of brass, which here make fine, novel fittings for the drawers of a built-in dresser, would add decorative note to almost any kind of cabinet. To hold these "bell pulls" to the drawers, long brass rod is cut into five-inch sections; each is then bent to fit into holes drilled in drawer.

F. Textured green cloth provides an appropriate background for pull with five parts. Base is brass dish, turned upside down and topped by the lacquer cover of coaster box. Round cork atop candlestick drip cup lends finishing touch. Long brass screw holds pieces together for mounting.

Fisherman's Dream

Course texture and simple pattern go hand in hand in this rug which combines both representational and abstract design. Starting and stopping ends were left unclipped to form unusual side fringe which was stitched at the edge to prevent pulling. Rug, hooked of woolen materials with speed hookers, is only 3′ 5″ by 2′ 5″.

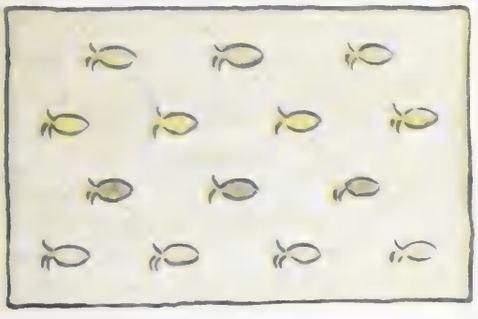
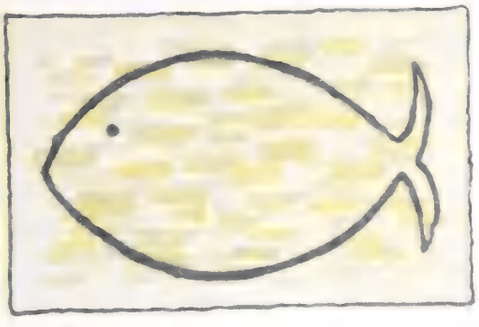
PART 3



Wherever you look you can see possibilities for rug designs—once you realize how patterns evolve

By GEORGE WELLS



Three basic types of pattern for the novice designer to try

Abstract pattern within representational form, a design theory almost as old as man. This design was used for rug on the opposite page.

Repeat pattern, with colors changing from row to row, was used in pre-Columbian South American textiles, ancient Japanese fabrics.

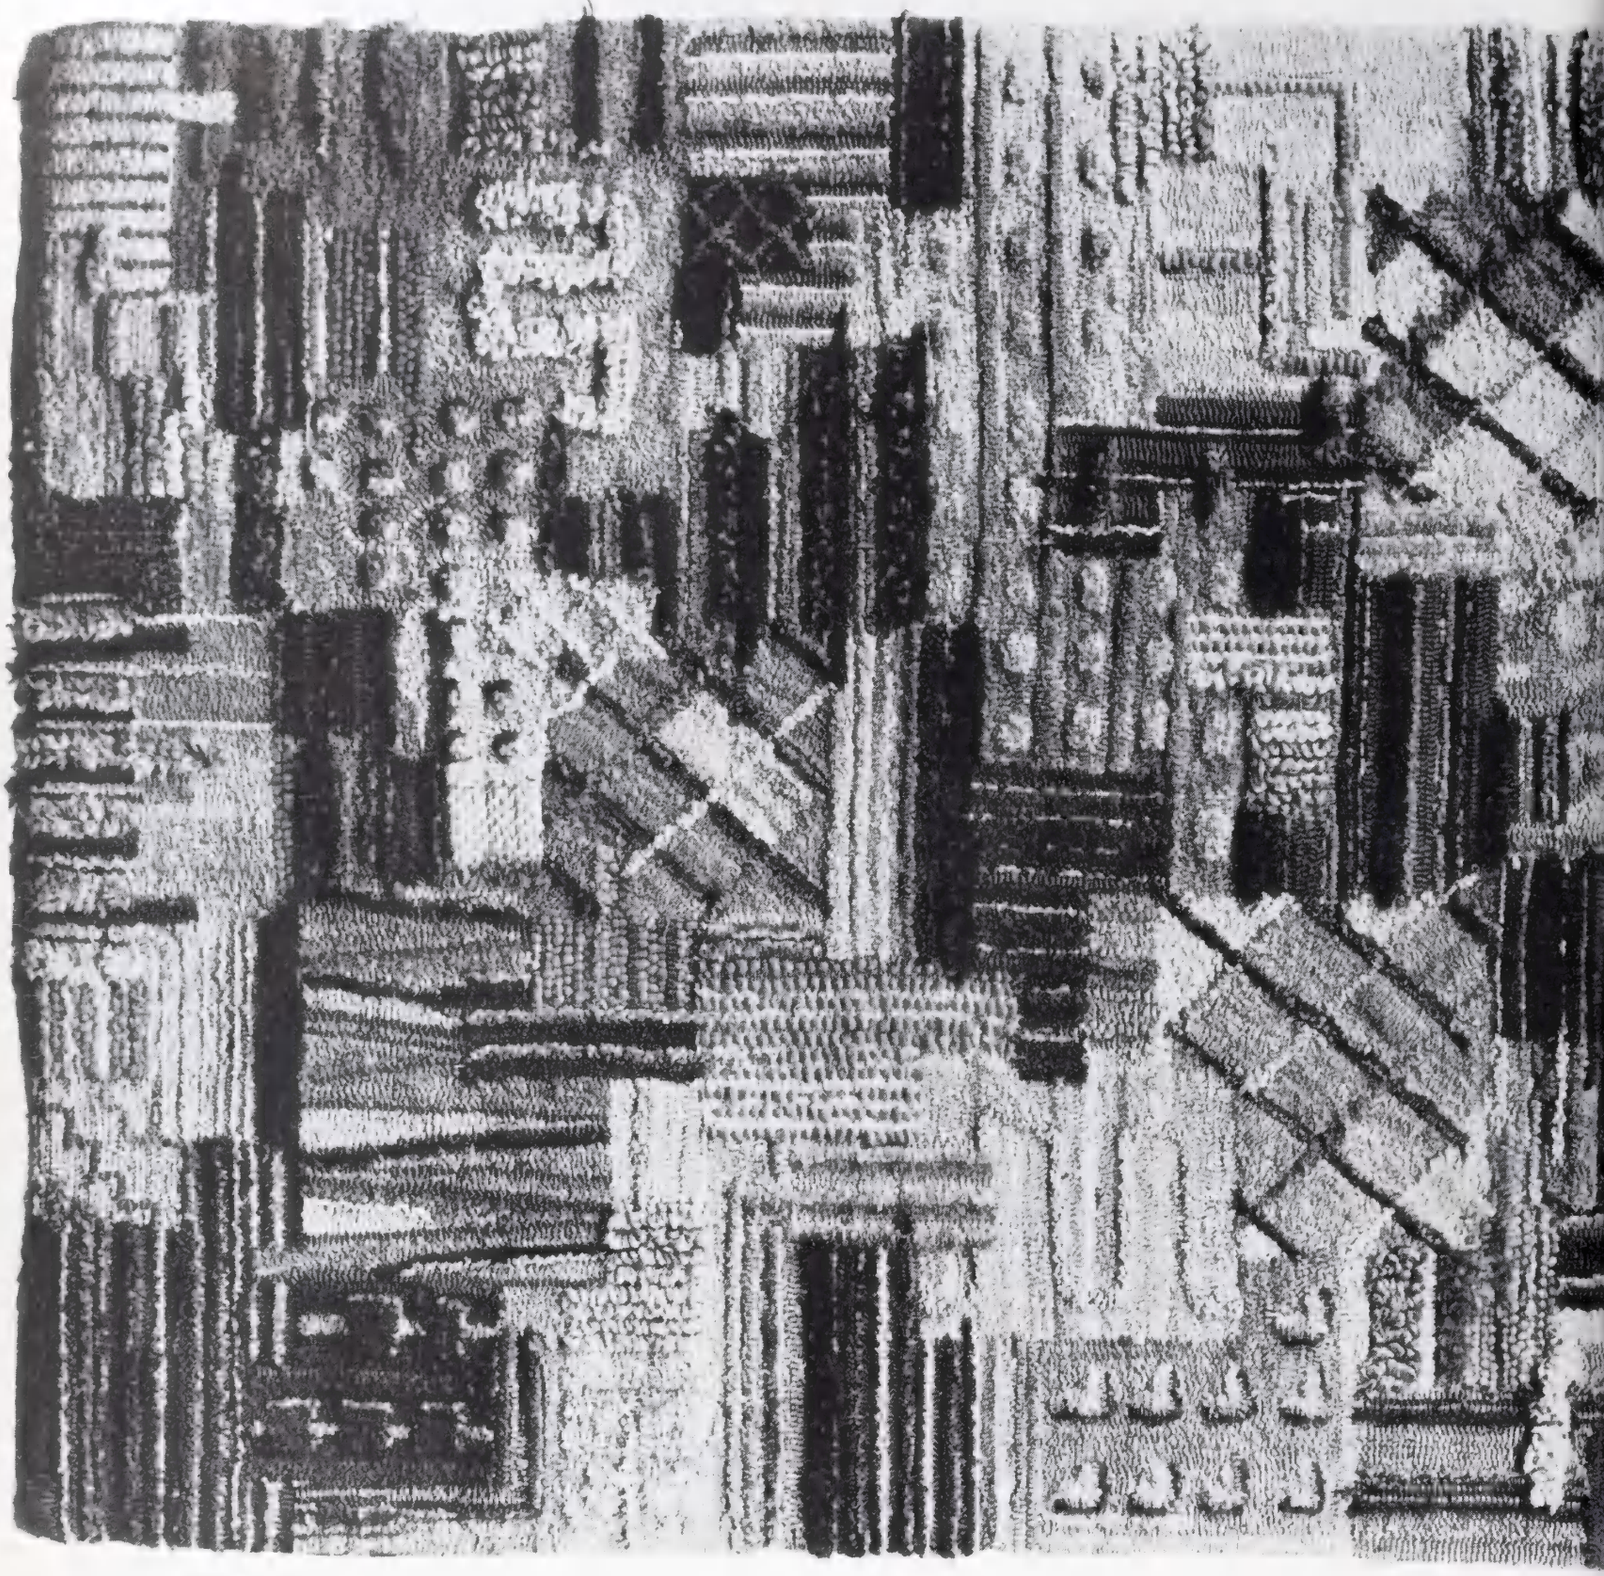
Although you may seldom think about it, you spend a good part of your life as a designer. You make a design every morning when you brush and arrange your hair for the day. When you have placed the colored towels in the bathroom you have made a design of overlapping blocks on each bar. The little slits in the top of a pie crust form a design. A nicely typewritten letter is a complete design, the doodle on your phone pad just a fragment. So while you may never have designed a rug, you can do it.

Professional designers are just like the rest of us. They can't make rug designs until they start to think about rugs and relate all the design they see or have seen to their problem—rug design. The starting point may come from almost anything: a fabric print, a chance shadow, the picture of a worm-eaten leaf in a book on garden pests. Once you start to think hard about rug designs you won't just smell the bacon at breakfast: like a professional, you'll start to notice those irregular stripes and realize what a good striped rug design they could make.

A design is just an arrangement of forms, colors and textures. It can be a plan or sketch, or it can be just a mapping out in the mind. There are only two types of design: Representational, deriving from something that exists, and Abstract, tending away from the realistic or literal. Don't worry about these terms, for as soon as anything is unfamiliar to us it looks Abstract. So think about a design for your rug and don't worry about what kind of design it is, or what people will label it. There are countless ancient designs that look modern, and vice versa.

If you get stuck for an idea, try something as simple as this: Draw a lot of big potatoes. You can draw them in different sizes to form a simple plan for arranging your colors and textures. Potatoes may seem prosaic and the idea representational, but your sketch will look abstract and should give you a rug that will be just as beautiful with a modern sofa as with an old spool bed.



There are two important things you should take into consideration when making your design plan:

Remember that texture will be an integral part of your design—so keep it in mind during your original thinking. If you want a shag rug, stick to a simple pattern, because intricate ones go to pieces when translated into course textures. Smooth, even textures lend themselves naturally to more elaborate designs.

A good idea before you design a rug is to think up as many different possibilities for rug patterns as you can. You'll find it an interesting game once you start. Just be willing to sort over your bright ideas and discard all but the best.

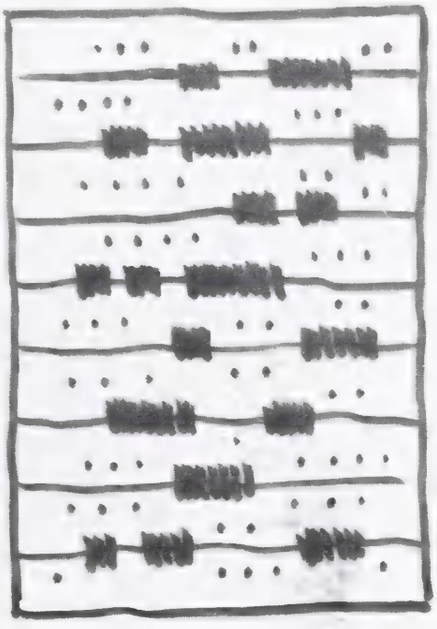
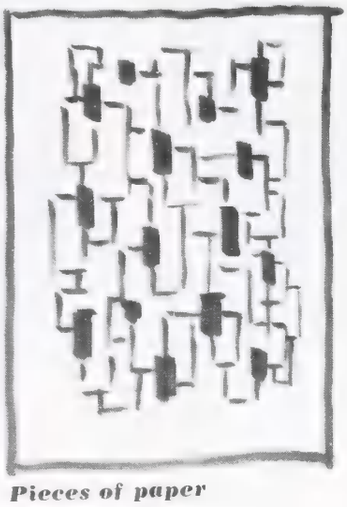
Pastorale

For freshness of concept, excellence of design and mastery of craftsmanship, this rug received a $500 Grand Award in an exhibition sponsored by the American Craftsmen's Educational Council and nine museums. Although reminiscent of an aerial view of cultivated fields, the design has an elusive quality that results from the bleeding of color and texture. The colors are fresh yellow-greens and pale blue for the lightest areas, and olive-green for the darkest. All four methods of making rugs on base fabrics—hooking, knotting, stitching and appliqué—were used in this 4′ 3″ x 5′ 7″ rug (techniques described in our June and July 1955 issues). Variations of textures in the hooked sections result from the use of different weights of yarns and rags, and several kinds of hooking tools.



Familiar objects that make fine abstracts



Abstracts usually lend themselves to varying rug sizes and variations in textures better than picture designs do. In addition to ideas sketched below, here are a few suggestions you might repeat over and over, or elaborate on, or simplify: buttons, bottles, modern buildings, cross-sections of fruits and vegetables, the center or petal of a flower, machine parts, a beautiful mold, highway overpasses, even nuclear fission diagrams.

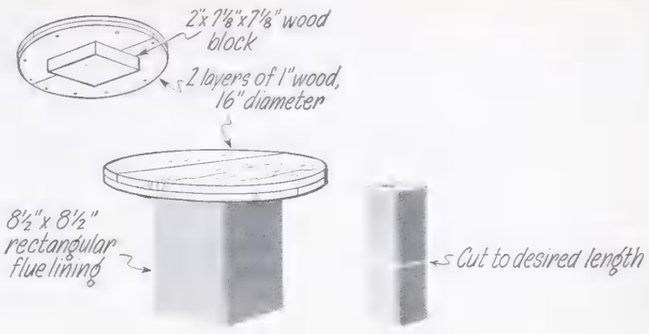
SHOP AT A BUILDING-SUPPLY STORE

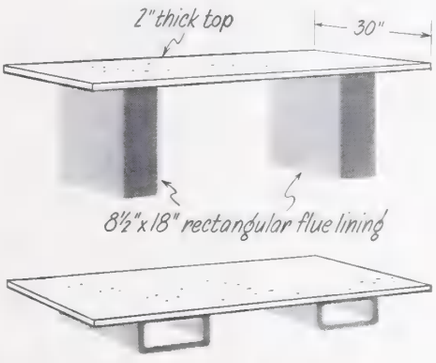
By LEAVITT DUDLEY

Planning to build book shelves in your basement or a barbecue on your lawn? If you face the prospect with flagging spirits, visit a building-supply dealer. You'll leave with the heady feeling of a youngster after a Christmas trip to the toyland of a department store. For it's practically child's play to construct what you want from the many sizes of stock clay tile and concrete or cinder blocks on the market today. For example, combine concrete blocks with boards ready-cut at the lumber yard, and building a book shelf or desk becomes a simple job of assembling stock parts. Most units sell for less than 50 cents. Duplicates really have exact measurements, so they fit together neatly without wobbling or tipping, even though you're a beginner at using them. They may be used indoors or out, painted (house paint indoors, masonry paint outdoors) or left as they are.



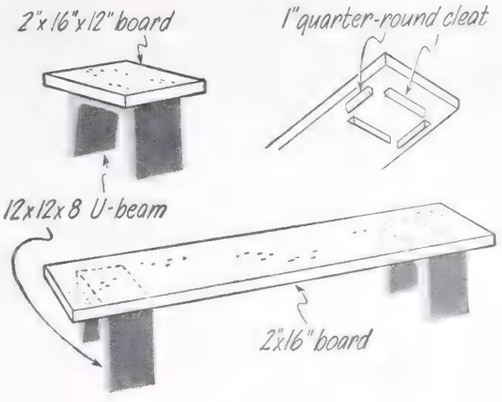
Sturdy base for badminton posts is made from stock closed pilaster blocks. Wood wedges, or an 8″ length of galvanized pipe set in cement grout, make it easy to hold the post solidly. For low posts and light nets, the half size 8 x 8 x 8 block are sufficiently heavy for bases.

Work desk for a basement shop consists of partition tiles and slab door top. Spaces within tiles make fine compartments for storage. Desk is elevated from floor on sufficient 2¼″ concrete slab blocks to adjust height to user, also to protect items in lower spaces from contact with floor.

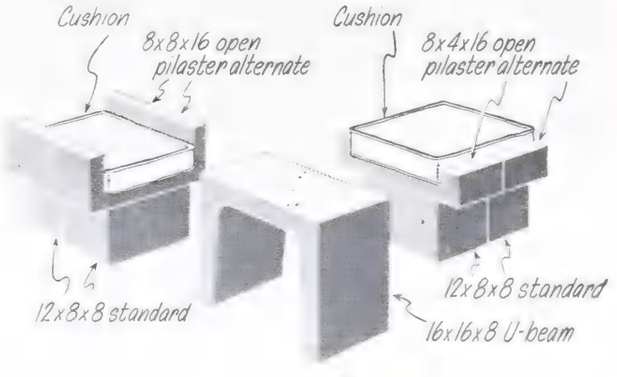


For quickly dressing up plants still in their original containers, try clay chimney pots. They are open at both ends, slip over smaller cans or pots to make handsome planters. Chimney pots are made in red, buff, green, blue and gray. They are made of clay, so they never rust out.

Low stool is made with clay flue tile cut off with a carborundum saw (or broken along a line chipped with a concrete hammer). Wooden top boards are screwed together, with grain of each perpendicular to the other for strength. Blocks prevent seat from slipping off tile.



PHOTOGRAPHED BY DAVID MANNERS IN THE HOME OF WAHL SNYDER, ARCHITECT



To make a table or bench combine two rectangular flue linings and a slab door. Clay flue lining is made in 24″ lengths and a variety of widths. 18″ width (top) is used for table, or (bottom) on its side for bench, coffee table.

To define a porch, deck or terrace, use clay flue linings as planters (right). Generous depth of soil in them makes possible a luxuriant growth and ample moisture reserve so that watering them once a week is sufficient.

Garden seating that can stay out in any weather is made from U-beam blocks and 2″ planking. Small cleats made from quarter-round on bottom of planking (upper right) keep seat from sliding when in use. Benches 6 feet long are practical; those longer need a center support.

Low-cost garden seating of U-beam blocks can be cushioned or not. Stacks neatly for space-saving storage. Cushions may be cradled within top blocks (fine for children), or raised above sidewalls (better for adults). Former uses 8″ pilaster-alternate blocks; latter, 4″ size.

THE DAILY ARTS OF GOOD LIVING

THE MODERN EPICURE

Though you leave home, you can take it with you. Carry along some small part of its comfort to make you feel secure, private and pampered. That feeling of home-away-from-home makes you more appreciative of new surroundings. This is not a new idea. When your grandmother or your great-grandmother went off on the Grand Tour or even a brief holiday, she could never have done without her tea hamper. Now her basket has given way to a flight bag or insulated carrier. Her spirit lamp has been replaced by an electric hot cup or tablets of heat that look like old-fashioned white peppermint lozenges. What you take with you varies, of course, with the situation. So here is a collection of case histories and full data on the ways of wandering epicures traveling by air or by car for long or short trips; alone, by twos, in groups; for pleasure, for profit, on budgets or expense accounts; abroad or in the U. S. A.: (Please turn to page 112)

Equipped with your own flight-bag kitchen, you can taste your way around the world, shop in local markets, discover regional delicacies that rarely appear on hotel menus.

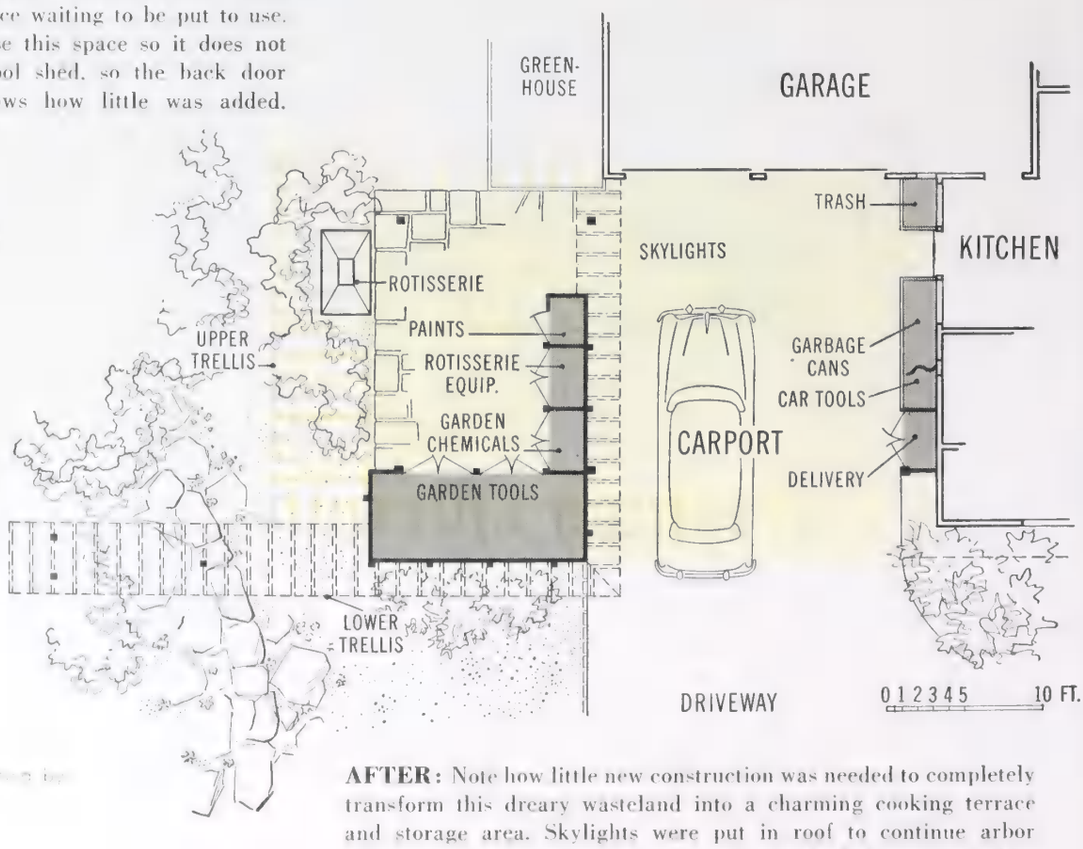
That Mess in the Garage

Here are 14 ways in which people are putting an end to overcrowded garages. They're building storage ports, storage breezeways and storage pavilions. The next 18 pages may help you put your car back where it belongs

By building an arbor-like carport over the driveway they made

A Storage Port



BEFORE: A fairly typical back door with lots of empty space at the garage entrance waiting to be put to use. The challenge: How to use this space so it does not look like Grandfather's tool shed, so the back door area is livable. Plan shows how little was added.

Here you meet a "new breed of cat." On these 18 pages you'll see a new type of structure for storage that is beginning to appear in our better-groomed residential areas. No matter what shape it takes, it has been sired by the necessity of doing something about the overcrowding of our garages, which is pushing our cars right outdoors.

Thanks to the general prosperity since the war, our garages have had to become the keeping room for all the bulky paraphernalia of the good daily life: power mowers, tools, garden furniture, sports equipment, the food freezer, beach umbrellas, portable barbecues, the turkey roaster, picnic baskets, seed flats and flower pots, bags of fertilizer and peat moss. (Why list them? You know your own private mixture.)

On these first six pages you see a particularly fine example of how additional storage space was added to an existing house. By careful designing, several advantageous by-products were achieved. Because these new outdoor storage lockers were made an extension of the house itself, the over-all architectural appearance was vastly improved. (Please turn the page)

AFTER: Note how little new construction was needed to completely transform this dreary wasteland into a charming cooking terrace and storage area. Skylights were put in roof to continue arbor effect and restore to kitchen as much daylight as possible.

1 By roofing the lockers with "Resolite," a rigid plastic building material, light was allowed in from above—making it possible to use all the walls for storage. All plywood doors were faced with pre-finished "Panel-Peg," permitting hanging space even there.

2 By arranging the storage lockers in an L, a little terrace was created around the rotisserie, screened from the driveway, and opening toward a shrub garden. Plastic dome skylights in the roof keep terrace dry but well lighted.

3 From this angle you can see how new construction merges with the old, and how the L of the lockers fades into the hillside—almost as though the house had put out roots to anchor itself into the ground.

4 Another reason this addition seems to marry well to the existing house is that matching siding was used for the exterior surface of the storage lockers. Structural walls and roof decking are Douglas fir plywood throughout.

A sheltered car entrance was gained in addition to the new covered terrace created by the L plan of the lockers. For one of the goals set by the owners was that the roof of the carport-arbor should extend out far enough to wrap around a charcoal rotisserie, so they could do this type of cooking in wet weather, with a completely dry passage from the kitchen door to the rotisserie.

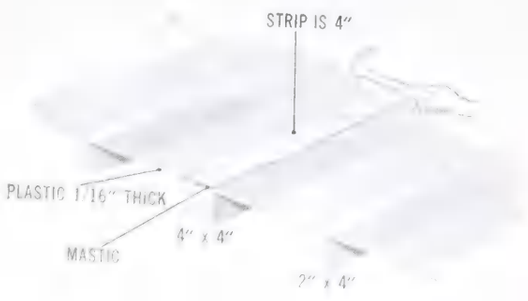
Two cupboards were built on each side of the kitchen door for the garbage can and trash can—operating on a revolving, lazy-susan principle, so they could be opened from the kitchen door or the driveway side. A delivery closet (to receive milk, butter, eggs, laundry and dry cleaning when no one is at home) was included in the cupboards built along the wall of the house. In short, all the things needed beside the kitchen door were designed to be put there, yet they were devised to be equally convenient for the trash collectors and the delivery men who service the house.

This same line of reasoning was used in detailing the service lockers across the driveway from the kitchen door. One big, room-like locker was assigned to gardening: the wheel equipment, hand tools, baskets, sprayers, insecticides, etc. Another was allocated to barbecue equipment, yet another to paints, solvents, cleaners, waxes and cartons of housekeeping supplies which this family buys in quantity to save time and money.

But the unexpected dividend from giving all this minute attention to the solving of mundane matters was the agreeable improvement in the appearance of the whole house. As you can see from the before photograph directly below, this house had a roof line which stepped down rather agreeably until it got to the garage. But then it stopped. As this house is on top of a high hill, it had a tendency to stand out too conspicuously. The addition had a broadening effect. The continuing of the eaves and the cornice into the trellis-like roof, punctuated with curved plastic skylights, settled the house into the hilltop, making it belong to its site. (Please turn the page)

MAYNARD PARKER

BEFORE: This house presented a pleasant enough façade on arrival. But it did not settle into the ground any too well, considering it is on the top of a high hill. Only its tall surrounding trees saved it.



AFTER: The visual effect of the carport and storage lockers considerably changes this façade. Because it looks so much wider now, the house seems much lower. In short, the proportions are changed, and consequently the scale of the parts to the whole is changed. The house also takes on a new importance because it appears larger.

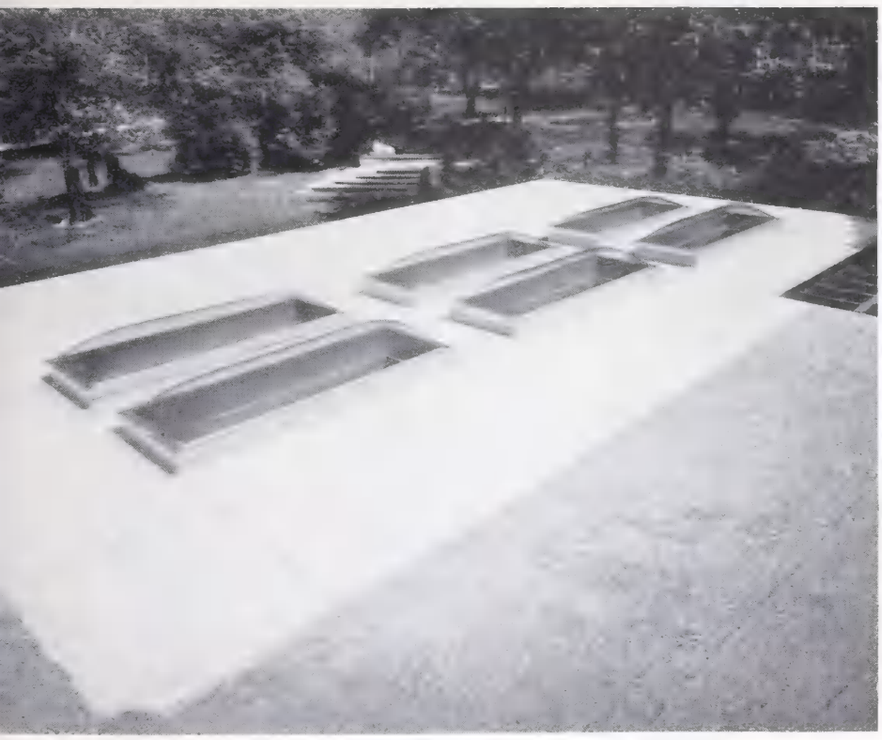
These pictures show you how to make use of all four walls and the floor in building storage lockers without wasting wall space for windows. "Resolite," a rigid plastic panel, roofs the plywood lockers, so that light is allowed in from above and steals no storage space.

Plastic roof panels are laid directly on framing members (see sketch). Joints are covered with 4″ wide strips of plastic panel set in bed of clear mastic. Galvanized nails have neoprene washers to seal holes. Unobtrusive "weep" holes prevent condensation in summer: sun heat keeps lockers dry in winter. "Panel-peg" on doors puts often wanted tools within easy access. Because 4″ x 4″ supporting posts are exposed on the outside of the structure, plywood walls are smooth, uninterrupted by studs, to permit any desired arrangement of shelves and tool storage inside.



Note how a big, massive roof can, in itself, be lightened and made to give light. This one, 40 x 21 feet, had to protect many things from the weather, including a sheltered area for winter-time outdoor cooking. Here complete weather protection was achieved without sacrificing sunlight in the kitchen windows. The solution was six curved plastic skylights, called "Skydomes," made for installation in flat roofs. Set like this, they emphasize the arbor-like quality of this structure which becomes one at its outer edges. Night lighting is built into each skylight opening to create a well lighted, glamorous automobile entry.

AFTER: New roof showing plastic domes, manufactured as complete units with frames. Roofing is "Gaco N-200" a new, air-curing liquid neoprene applied directly over Douglas Fir plywood in three coats with paint roller. Finish coat is "Gaco White Vinyl" to match old roof.

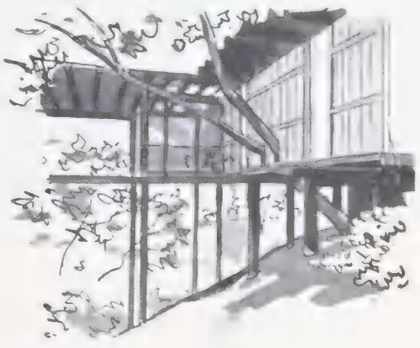
Solutions to that mess in the garage

The Storage Pavilion

As beautiful as a Japanese teahouse, this charming little garden structure is primarily a storage solution for garden and pool equipment

Robert Mosher and Roy Drew, Architects
Mr. and Mrs. Armistead Carter, Owners



Plan shows storage and work space conveniently related to the sitting area and garden, yet out of direct view. Plant ledges along each outer wall double as seats. Note how little space is required when storage units are well planned.

From the garden, this little structure appears as a logical extension of the fine old California redwood house to which it is attached. The scale and ageless quality of the house are skillfully combined with the architectural grammar expressing the character of a garden pavilion. Screen-like plastic filler walls, placed between the supporting posts, add patterns of light. Thus the strong structural sense is retained. Wood panels are faced with copper-sheathed building paper.

Ground upon which the pavilion is built slopes steeply away from the garden and heretofore was unusable. The bold structure capitalized on this unusual site condition. (See sketch below.) Handsome eucalyptus trees dotting the building area were left to grow through the structure, creating an additional sense of "tree house" airiness. This solution brought unity to the already well integrated garden, established a much needed windbreak for the pool and created conveniently located storage and work areas, without disturbing the trees or taking away any of the precious garden spaces. (Please turn the page)

Right: Smooth, round beach stones mark transition from lawn to 3″ x 6″ plank floor. Structural frame of pavilion is planned to allow trees to grow through, leaving room for wind movement. All planting is portable and, in season, is displayed on modular blocks on the plant bench. Redwood light fixtures spotlight downward and permit lines of light to leak sideways, casting pleasant shadows. The coloring is kept to tones of brown-black (structural frame), natural, and oiled redwood (trim), and copper (panels). For another view of this house see July 1955, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, page 60.

Every view in the pavilion is planned to be beautiful. Storage lockers are arranged at a 90° angle to line of site so contents cannot be seen from the sitting area.

The storage elements were planned to accommodate all of the formerly far-flung items of equipment used in the leisurely life around the pool. Also included was a flower arrangement center with its ice box for cut flowers and a low, deep sink for hardening long-stemmed flowers and foliage. Although the principal need here originated from a lack of convenient storage, the results made possible a new, exciting, more comfortable enjoyment of the garden and pool. This can be a lesson for you. When you tackle the job of building a storage structure, explore all the potentialities of the site. Examine not only your storage needs, but look for ways to incorporate the solution into an over-all scheme that will enrich your living and add new comfort and pleasure to the life of your home. (For a list of construction materials see page 120.)

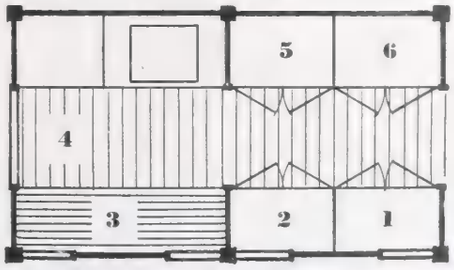
1. Garden implements used in pavilion area include rakes, chemical spray, pruning tools and cart for moving heavy tubbed plants. Numbers of captions correspond to plan opposite.

2. Since the pavilion created a new pleasant dining space in an area heretofore harassed by wind, storage was provided for plates, trays, snack tables, the hibachi, charcoal and gloves.



3. Flower work table is built of 2″ x 3″ boards spaced ⅜″ apart for drainage. Working here Mrs. Carter can see through glass panel to succulent garden below and tennis court beyond.

4. This view to the sitting area shows contrast between soft light filtering through the Alsynite plastic roof and the sparkling shadow light cast by narrowly spaced roof members at far end.

Plan shows relationship between storage elements and flower center. Careful planning accomplished this in 7′6″ x 12′6″. Storage is 2′2″ deep, enough to take all items without waste.

5. Swimming equipment, heretofore scattered all over the house, is now assembled for ready use at the pool. It includes towels, straw hats, beach balls, tubes and floats, swim fins and diving masks, all bulky but neatly stored below, left.

6. Cushions, often forgotten when storage is planned, are provided for with handy slots. Each size is readily reached without disturbing the rest. Hurricane lamps, ash trays and plant containers are stored on top shelves of closet below.

Furniture storage placed close to pool side does away with "long hauls." Handsome cabana demonstrates that a storage house need not look makeshift. Roof is easiest possible to make: sheets of Douglas fir plywood bent into arch.

Garden side—closed and locked. This storage house solves the problem of where to store garden supplies and equipment safely. This is the rear view, designed to be as attractive as its pool-side "face" and accessible to garden.

Only roofed area contains storage, but big "wings" beyond add to effectiveness of the cabana as a wind screen for the pool, also add attractively to the cabana's scale. Folding door, shown closed here, can be pulled out at a right angle to provide additional wind protection by creating a sunpocket. Storage cabana is simple home project; working plans are available without charge from the Douglas Fir Plywood Association, Tacoma 2, Washington.

Garden side opens to disclose hidden asset—a roomy, lockable place engineered for all the garden-storage needs. Note roof: V-cut rafters hold bent plywood, also act as gutters to spill roof water harmlessly away from building.

Pool-side view shows how furniture can be neatly stored in its half of cabana whenever weather conditions require. Space was divided specifically to accommodate furniture.

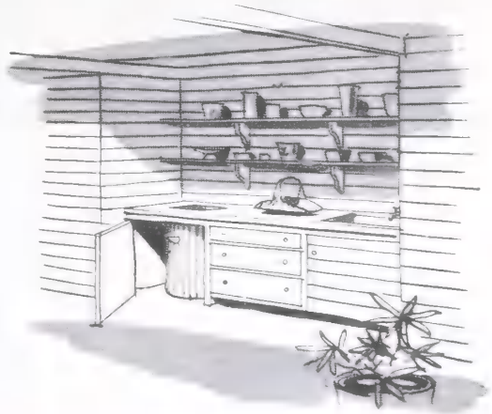
A Storage House in the Garden

This elegant little structure houses every garden need



Designed with simplicity and grace, this little house could be incorporated into almost any garden plan where space permits a detached structure. Its unit construction system permits its size and shape to be altered to meet specific needs. Raised above the ground on piers, it keeps stored items dry in any climate while eliminating the need for permanent concrete work. From the garden, it is an elegant background for plants and casual outdoor living. To the rear, it is a businesslike work center. For suggested materials, see page 120.

COLOR PHOTOGRAPH OPPOSITE BY MARVIN KONER

This storage house has a character all its own

This garden work center, incorporating storage for tools and supplies, potting bench and complete flower arrangement counter (see sketch at right) proves these points: (1) The separate storage house can be scaled down from an existing house to the intimate, informal quality of the garden, adding background beauty and contrast of form, and (2) color can be used to complement the plant material, emphasizing its characteristics regardless of what the main house dictates. Here white and soft yellow blend with tulips and pink horse chestnut. Home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Franck: Thomas Church, landscape architect.

Locker at top of ramp contains bottled water (piped through wall to kitchen counter). General storage is next, with provision for laundry and cleaning deliveries and rain wear. Garbage cans suspended on doors swing out for easy access. Locker doors and partitions are raised above floor for hosing down the ramp.

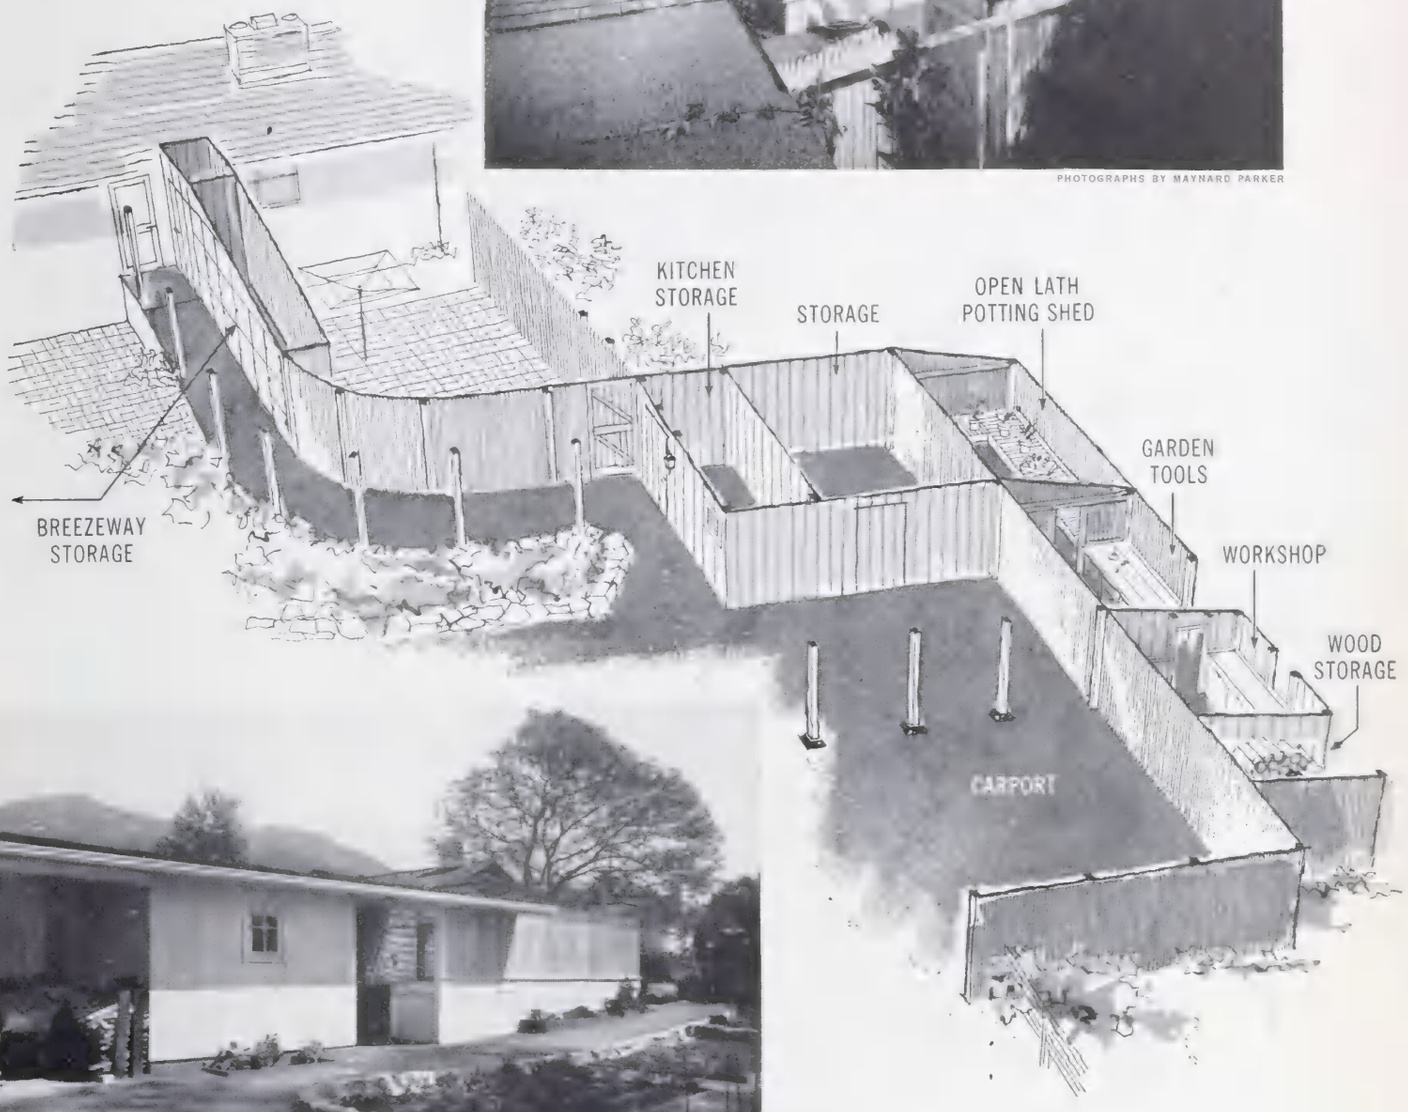
The Storage Breezeway

Proof that order can be brought attractively to nine separate storage needs of an existing house is supplied by this unusual solution. Study it carefully. It combines all of its parts under one continuous roof and successfully solves a difficult problem of levels



From level of carport, the storage breezeway rises easily to meet existing floor at kitchen entrance. Storage lockers, shown closed, can be locked separately

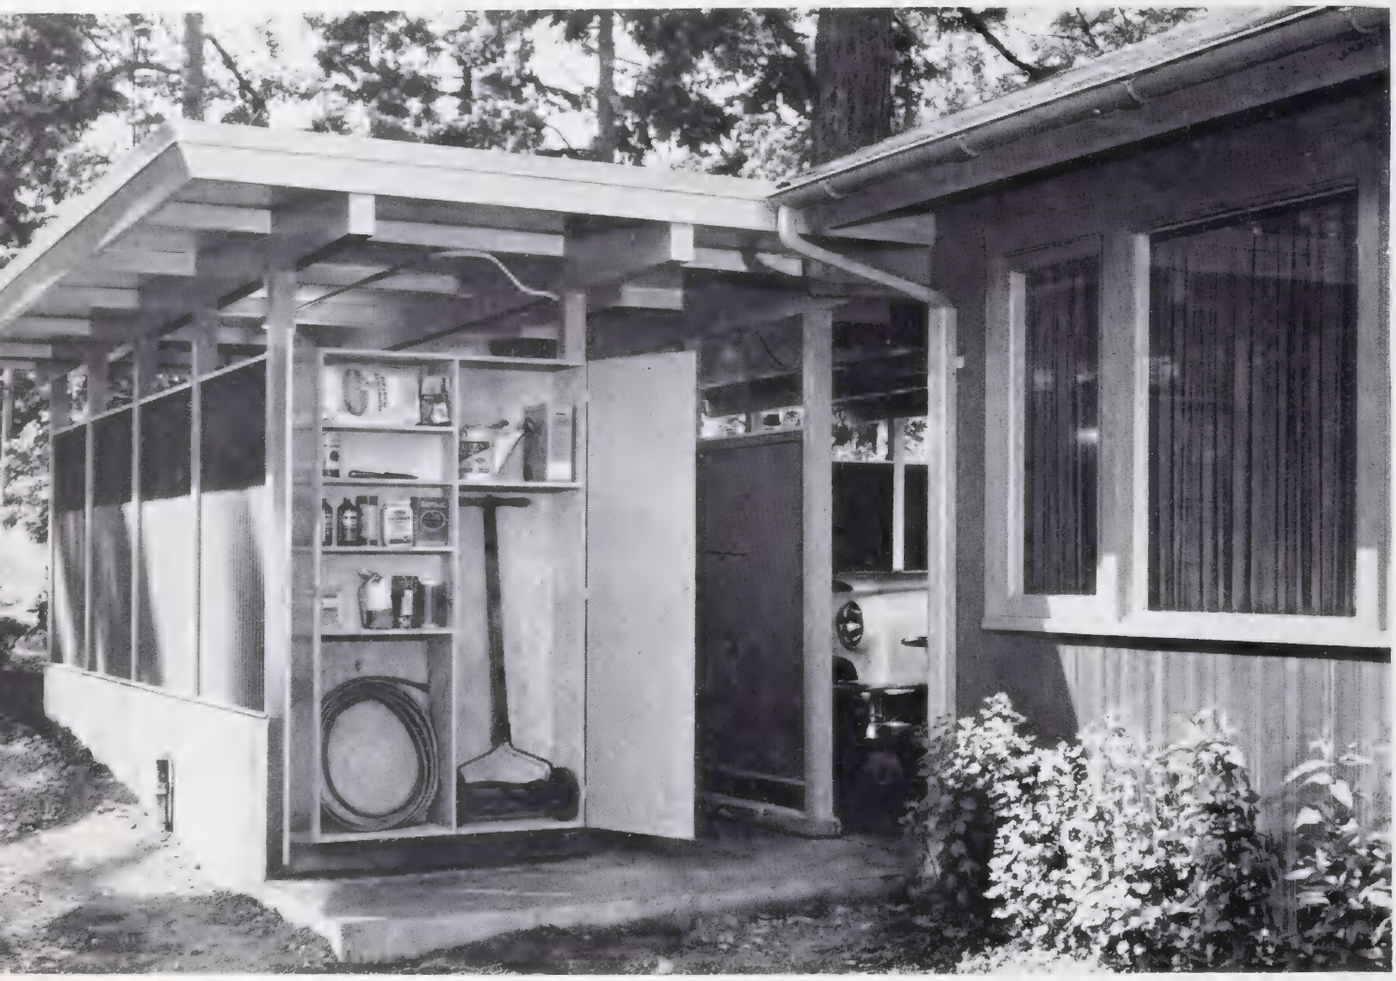
PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Garden side of carport contains wood and garden-tool storage, workshop and lath-potting shed. Although it is flat-roofed, this new wing is nonetheless in complete harmony with the character and scale of the original house.



Spacious area allotted to garden tools makes it easy to roll in heavy motorized equipment. Peat moss, fertilizer and leaf mold bins can be removed from either side, since outer panel is removable. Grape stake siding produces handsome wall texture that takes rough treatment.

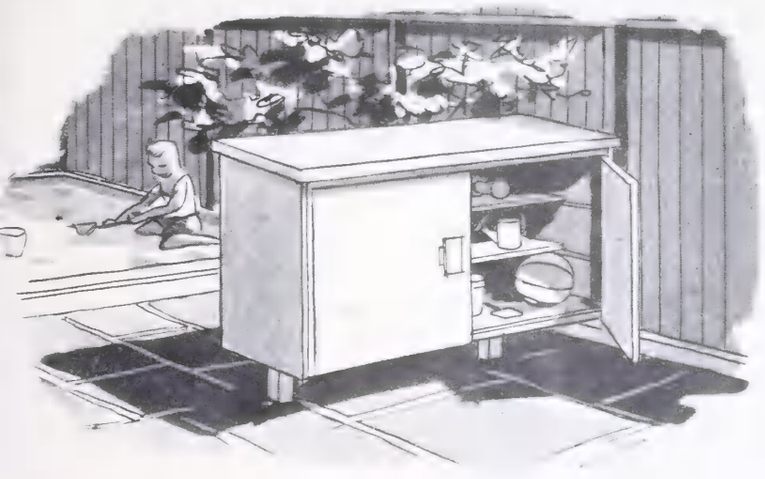
Storage Cabinets at Little Cost

Have you explored the possible places for storage in your garden and terrace?

Here are eight examples of simple plywood cabinets that provide a big pay-off in space

Lockable tool storage outside garage. Many modern garages and carports are just big enough for the car, but often you can slip a sizable closet under the roof without spoiling the looks of the building. As with any outdoor building, use plywood made with waterproof glue. (It's so marked on the edges of the panels.) To build this unit, ask for "Storage Closet" plans. (See box, opposite page.)



Planned storage within garage or carport. This L-shaped storage port is ideal if space exists. It can be free-standing or completely protected from the weather. If you are building a new garage or carport, storage like this—or at least some of its units—can be made to open from both sides, avoiding the necessity of removing the car to get bulky items out. Ask for "Storage X-10" plans.

Potting bench for gardeners. Here's an easy-to-build indoor or outdoor unit that doesn't require much space and concentrates all the miscellany of potting gear, organizing it neatly. There are large storage closets, adequate work surface and roomy bin. Adjustable shelves above can be used for books and chemicals. Ask for "Potting Bench" plans.

Garden storage with hidden dining table. This outdoor built-in could be free-standing, or it could be attached to a fence or garage. Power mower and garden chemicals are locked safely in closet at left. When table swings up it becomes door to the center section; legs slip off easily when pins are removed from hinges. Ask the Douglas Fir Plywood Association for plan "X-9."

Storage locker for toys and garden tools. Small enough to fit unobtrusively into the garden, big enough to meet storage needs realistically, it is 8′ wide by 2′ deep. One compartment is fitted with shelves for toys, other is for bulky playthings. Ask for Garden Cabinet "X-11."

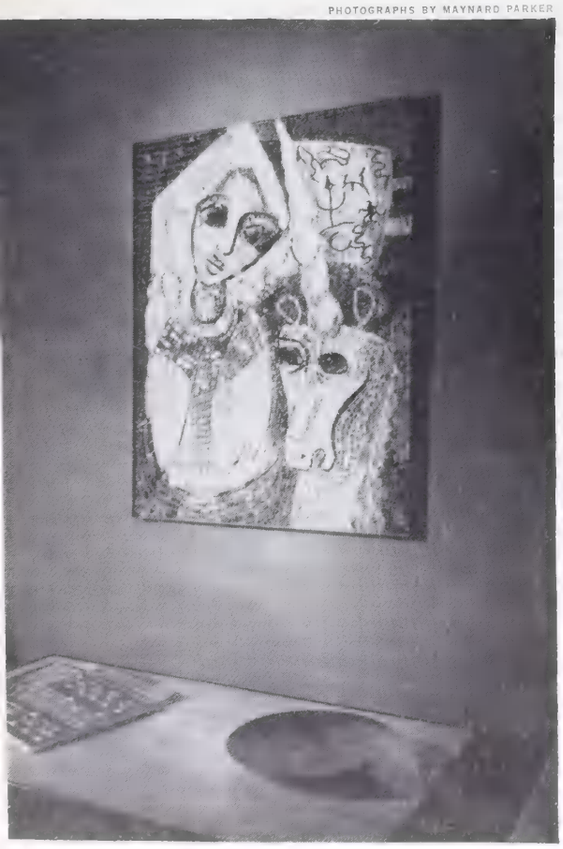
Plans for building the 8 storage units shown here and on pages 95 and 98 may be obtained without charge by writing to Douglas Fir Plywood Association, Tacoma (2), Washington.

The Art and Craft of



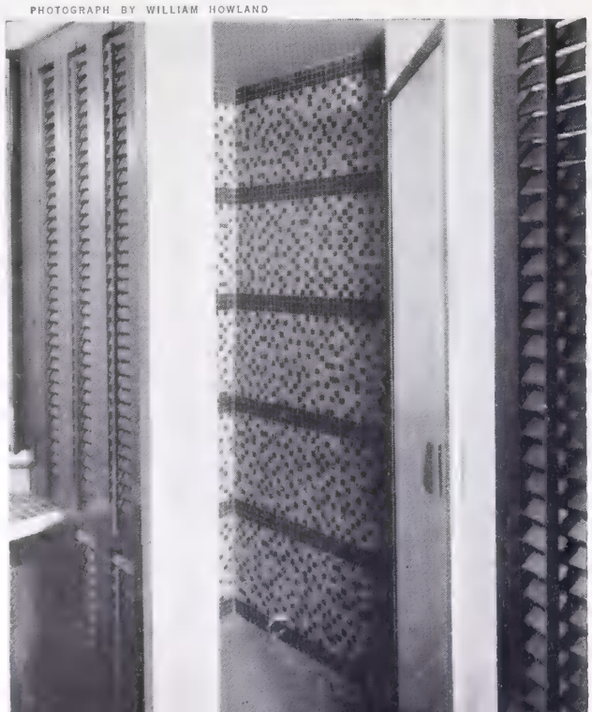
MAKING MOSAICS

By MARY LYON

Mosaics you can make to enrich your home

A counter in kitchen, bath or bar
A floor in kitchen, entry or bath
A fireplace facing
A mantel wall
A bathroom wall
A window sill
A plant shelf
A shower stall
A lavatory splashback
A window seat
A mirror frame

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER



Mosaics run the gamut from pure art, like the plaque above by Louisa Jenkins, to the practical esthetics of a shower stall right. This was designer Donn Sheets's first try at mosaics.

The Art of mosaic—the same fabulous art that paved the atria of Pompeii and bejeweled the walls of Santa Sofia, Ravenna, and a thousand other Byzantine churches—is currently one of the liveliest arts of them all and one of the favorite pursuits of week-end artists.

With it, you can transform bits and pieces of glass and ceramic into a hard, bright, patterned surface as colorful and opulent as a patchwork of gems—and a thousand times more durable. You may go as self-expressive and "pure arts" as your talents will take you, creating pictures in glass and clay tile to hang on walls or to adorn the floors on which you walk. Or you may see the double-barreled advantages in this stony-tough tile-and-cement work which can serve as an enduring, impervious surface—liquor-proof, stainproof, cigarette-proof—at the same time adding colorful, light-catching decoration to the rooms you live or work in.

But, as most entranced amateurs have discovered for themselves, you don't have to be a skilled performer with pencil or paint brush to enjoy the satisfactions of mosaic work. In fact, for four reasons, it's a made-to-order art form for the nervous amateur. One: color-awareness seems to count for more than the gift of drawing a straight line: some of the loveliest mosaics are arrived at simply by the grouping of compatible colors, instead of by the creation of a pattern that has to be drawn. Two: Until the very last moment when you put the tiles into permanent position with adhesive or cement, you are free to rearrange them.

PHOTOGRAPH BY WILLIAM HOWLAND

PHOTOGRAPH BY ROGER STURTEVANT

A mosaic pattern may be made the theme of a room, like the abstract scrolls of Jeanne Reynal's hearth and echoed in the design of the table top.

Mosaic on a counter or pass-through adds elegance to the practical. Pattern here is a mixture of blue and beige.

PHOTOGRAPH BY ULRIC MEISEL

change your mind, make boners, correct them—and no irreparable damage is done. Three: Since the very nature of the materials you're working with discourages delicate, highly detailed drawing, the simplest, boldest, freest patterns (the kind an amateur can cope with) are usually the most successful. Four: In its latest, or 20th-century manifestation, mosaic tends to be as nonconformist as any of the other art media, for this is a time of experiment. Moreover, mosaic is an art form that especially lends itself to different methods, different materials, different purposes. There are basic techniques, of course, but once they are learned, an amateur is as free as an expert to take liberties with them, and as long as what he does works, his product is acceptable.

Traditionally mosaics are made of pieces of glass and ceramic. Their brilliant jewel colors and mirrored golds and silvers, are enough to bring out the artist in any amateur. These amenable little pieces with their smooth gem-like surfaces are a temptation to play with, inviting endless arrangement and rearrangement—the shifting of colors for contrast or the grouping of colors into congenial families. And eventually, as they assume a harmony of pattern and color that is pleasing to you, your design takes shape, you set it in cement, and there it is, your work of art, and rather more lastingly exciting than many another piece of creation, because this time it is indestructibly captured in cement, or a similar long-lived and unbending setting.

And there is so much to be said for an art that lets you design useful objects that belong to your home in character, color and pattern. The mosaic doorstep, the mantel facing, the window sill, the kitchen floor, the terrace wall—imagine these in a mosaic in which you have incorporated your personal symbol, your favorite color, or a design motif that echoes your furnishings. These are refinements that distinguish a house, because they are truly one of a kind, custom-made by you, for you, something no one can duplicate.

Think of the countless places about the house where mosaics can provide such character and still be practical, feasible solutions to common problems, from a hot-plate holder to a mantel wall. For a starter you might try a top for a small end table, or a pair of book-ends, or a sheathing for a lamp base. You can frame a fireplace, line a shower stall, surface a kitchen or bathroom counter. If you live in a mild climate which has no freeze-thaw problem, you are free to bring mosaic outdoors. A half-moon mosaic outside your front door might be your welcome mat. A mosaic lining might color a garden pool, or a paving of concrete blocks inset with mosaic might glorify a garden path.

Mosaics can be as original as you please. Traditionally, its elements are glass and glossy ceramic, smoothly surfaced yet subtly irregular so that they reflect light and, almost like living things, change as the light changes. But you need not stop with the usual. The whole world of material is your oyster, so that any hard surface, bright substance—glass, crockery, shells, coal, marble, mother-of-pearl, quartz, amethyst, metal washers, keys—can supply you with ingredients as well as inspiration. On the pages that follow, we show you what you can do, and how to do it, listing the things you need and where to get them. (Please turn the page)

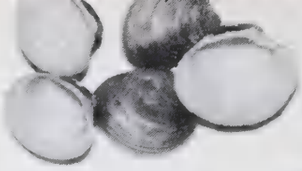
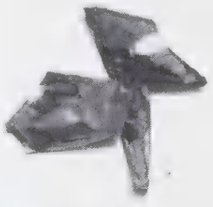
KING-WEESE STUDIOS





Direct method of making a mosaic consists simply of filling in a pattern with tiles and sticking them down with adhesive. Pattern is drawn directly on the wood. Tile clippers (top) snip tesserae into right sizes and shapes. Each piece is buttered with rubber-base adhesive (center) and put into place. Mortar, called grout, is rubbed into spaces between pieces (above).

Almost anything hard and bright is grist for the mosaicist, from precious stones to junk jewelry. The traditional tesserae are little squares of glass and ceramic, usually imported from Italy. The sumptuous-looking gold-faced tiles are the costliest.

CERAMIC TILES

PEBBLES

The Craft of mosaic making, once you have mastered a few basic techniques, is a particularly satisfying one because there is nothing tedious about the process. In fact, since you fill in your designs with relatively large pieces of material (tiles average about $^3/_4$ inch square), it is quickly rewarding, for the work seems to grow before your very eyes. There are two different ways of setting the tiles and other materials into place, each process a relatively simple one. And there is no doubt about it that there is something very satisfying about doing a job that looks harder than it really is.

The purpose of your mosaic determines to a great degree the materials you will need and the method by which you will put them together. A table top, for instance, calls for different treatment from a mosaic floor.

The simplest way of creating a mosaic is called the direct method, and it consists of applying the tiles directly to the surface they are intended to cover. This method is especially recommended for small, lightweight pieces like wall plaques or for covering flat horizontal surfaces like counters, tables or window sills which are not to be subjected to moisture or dampness. The process involves drawing a pattern on waterproofed plywood to determine the arrangement of tiles, buttons, pebbles, or whatever your materials are.

anchoring them down with adhesive, and then filling in the spaces between the little pieces with tile cement (a process called grouting). Tiles are technically known as "tesserae," in the plural, pronounced tesseree. A single tile is called a "tessera," meaning "small square piece." Italian tiles are frequently referred to as "smolte"; a single tile is a "smolto."

The tools and equipment required for any type of mosaic are simple and few and pretty much the same. We describe these specifically on page 102. For the direct method, once (Please turn to page 102)

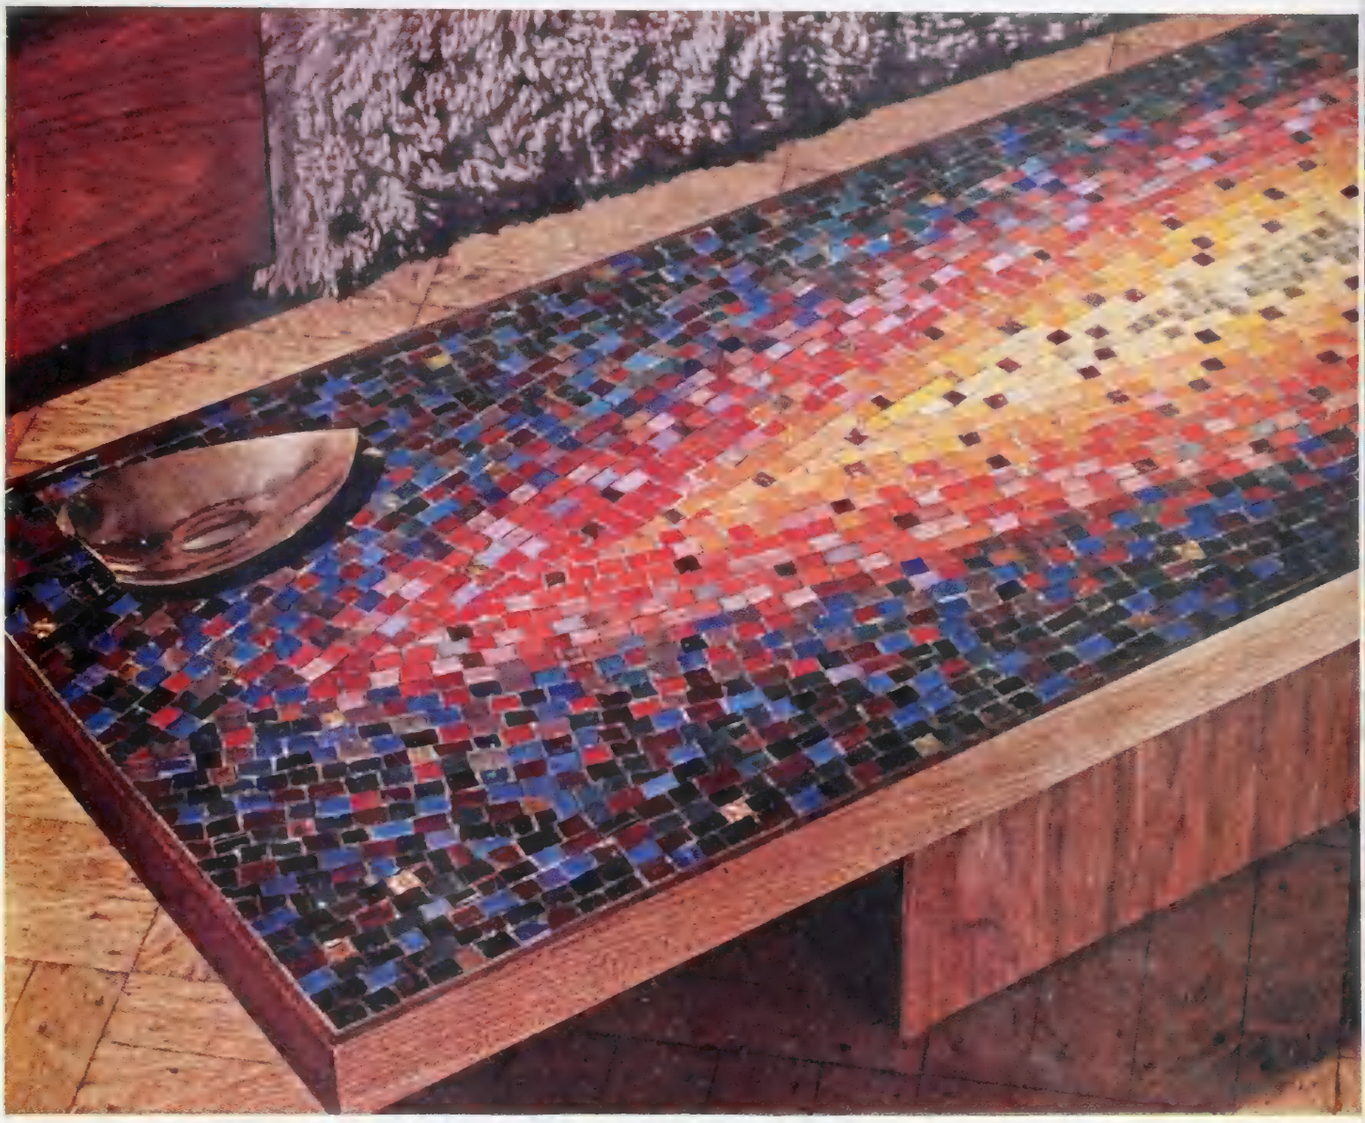
Mexican painter Covarrubias designed and executed this festive mosaic of fruits and leaves as a coffee-table top. Vivid fruits are centered on a pale green ground, done in Venetian vitreous enamel tesserae on a mortar base. The outside edge of the table is bound and framed with a brass band.



Further witness to the variety and adaptability of the alluring materials that may make up a mosaic is this sculptural study in contrasts (above) by Nan Sinton. It is composed of pebbles ranging from pinhead to hen's-egg size in bleached-white to black, through the scale of the grays, purple-blues, dull browns, and accented with clusters of small shells.

Carl Malouf composes his delicate marine fantasia entirely of shells and fragments of shells in their natural colors, adds bits of mother-of-pearl. On plywood base, metal-bound, background is of sand from the seashore stuck fast with paint and glue.

Coffee table (above) designed by Vladimir Kagan of Kagan-Dreyfuss, Inc., fairly glows with incandescent color—gold, silver, yellow, orange, red at the center, darkening through the red range to maroon, purple, royal-blue, black. The piece points up the importance of choosing and placing each color thoughtfully and how, by playing with color, you may create a vibrant, satisfying pattern. It is banded with walnut to match table base.

At right, a low mosaic table 48″ in diameter shows the subtle placing of tesserae so that they fan out in circles. Tiles must be snipped to proper size and shape. Venetian tesserae were used here according to the direct or face-up method: Each piece was "buttered" with a rubber-base adhesive and pressed into place directly on plywood; later, grouted for smoothness. Remove conventional barriers and you often remove an impression of confinement. This room looks extravagantly open and large, but only because the ceiling height has been pushed to its limit. In actuality, the room's dimensions are 14′ x 22′—but its dramatic loftiness makes it appear much larger.

HOW TO SHOP FOR YOUR SECOND HOUSE

Look carefully at this house before you buy your own. It's a fine example of how good planning takes advantage of every cubic foot. Here are openness and space without sacrifice of warmth or sense of shelter

This small house shows how skillful and purposeful planning can create a spacious atmosphere on a limited budget. Starting with the simplest, most economical construction shape—a rectangle—the architects have designed imaginatively and logically for a family's pleasure and convenience.

The basic rectangular form is unaltered, but vertical dimensions, that is, the height of walls and the pitch of ceilings, have been treated so importantly that the whole interior of the house seems amplified. The conventional flat ceiling line which so often in a small house produces the stifling effect of a lid on a box, has given way here to soaring diagonals that produce airy upper spaces in fact, as well as creating the illusion of openness and freedom. House has been wisely zoned, all activities given ample appropriate dimensions.

Barriers have been avoided wherever possible. The living room flows not only into the dining alcove, but upward, to include the bedroom balcony and sustains the feeling of great space.

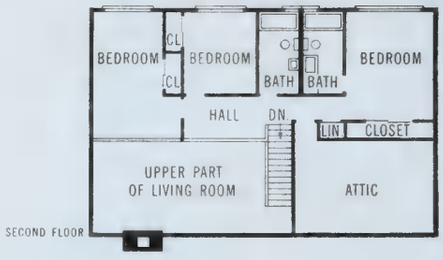
From the front door, one steps into a room far larger and more spacious than expected. The secret lies in the use of vertical space and well-placed window openings. Translucent screens of balcony-bedroom emphasize room's soaring height.



Don't buy a hemmed-in feeling

Plans above show how upper floor of the house opens directly off upper area of living room. By so doing a boxlike appearance and boxed-in effect are avoided in both areas.

The long roofline and massive brick chimney (left, above) reflect the extreme simplicity of construction. The garage is very much a part of the essential structure.

Overhang of second floor on garden side of house (left) adds sense of protection for paved, fenced terrace and adds needed shade to big expanse of glass at dining room and kitchen.

The dining area, with its broad expanse of windows and hospitable-looking divided door, is generously united with the large terrace beyond. But the room, nevertheless, has an identity of its own, for its ceiling height (only a modest eight feet) is an abrupt change from the loftiness of the living room. This makes it seem warmly and pleasantly intimate. The kitchen's clutter and bustle are neither seen nor heard, yet its position, in relation to the dining area, garden-terrace and living room, could not be more convenient. Serving or communicating from it to any part of those areas is only a short step away, for the kitchen is essentially the center of living, as you will realize when you look at the plan.

The second-floor planning employs the same sensible regard for spaciousness and logical order. The bedrooms, in effect, open on two sides. Giving as they do onto the central hall, they share in the great well of light and air of the living room. These bedrooms are not large (9′ x 16′, 9′ x 11′ and 11′ x 14′), yet they do not seem cramped or confined, because they can borrow so easily from the big room below.

This is open planning at its optimum—reaching out in all ways to use all possible areas, even the space that would go ordinarily into an attic. And why not? When so much is to be gained, why not remove this ceiling barrier to which so many of us have become accustomed, as simply and forthrightly as it has been done here?

All the elements of privacy, (Please turn the page)

The balcony level of the house enjoys the openness of the upper part of the living room and provides a pleasant and convenient place for a desk. The hall is an airy, lighted way to the bedrooms along this balcony.

This bedroom overlooks the living room via a half-wall which may be closed for privacy by sliding decorative panels. These screens are translucent. so even when wall is closed this 9′ x 16′ room enjoys a sense of openness. Beds used as sofas make this an extra living room. TV is placed here instead of downstairs.

Cross section shows how simply the hemmed-in feeling is avoided. Horizontal openness is supplemented by vertical openness, from floor to roof. Overhanging second level permits free circulation of air between bedroom balcony and living area below.

Dining section's eight-foot ceiling establishes a desirable separate identity from living room. Floor-to-ceiling windows and Dutch door give extra dimension to room. Easily handled woven wood strip shades control glare.

The kitchen provides plenty of room for efficient arrangement of equipment, appliances and a good-sized breakfast table. Wide windows, a continuation of those in dining room, make this room as airy as any other in house.

In the three bedrooms, windows are as wide as the room for plenty of light, and they are placed high enough to permit furniture arrangement beneath them. Ceiling follows roof pitch, adding decorative value as well as spaciousness to the room.

Don't buy a hemmed-in feeling

so desperately needed in small dwellings today, have been treated with thoroughgoing respect. The living room is placed on the street side of the house, but the openness of the planning permits it to associate gracefully with the quiet of the rear terrace and the enclosed garden. As in the case of the living quarters, the outdoor property has been put to maximum use. And the way in which the interior spaces open onto the outdoor planting indicates the importance of the terrace and garden to the over-all plan.

The price of this house is surprising: It costs, with its equipment, $14,700—exclusive of the land. Surely this is "budget building," yet what it has to offer in spaciousness compares impressively with houses that cost much more.

It's a Chickadee!

By BEATRICE OPPENHEIM FREEMAN

"Do you remember the fretting there used to be about family life dying out in America?", my husband asked the other day.

Yes, I remembered. And I wondered what the worriers would say if they looked in on our household—or thousands like it across the country.

Five of us—a lively six-year-old, three middle-aged adults and an eighty-three-year-old great-grandmother—had just returned from a Sunday afternoon walk together. Despite the differences in our ages, we had shared a happy excitement. My athletic husband had not been bored. No one had been overtaxed. All of us felt bound contentedly together by our mutual enthusiasm.

We five are what the National Audubon Society calls "birders." Our Sunday walks have given each of us, including Maureen, the six-year-old, the fun of competing to spot as many kinds of birds as possible. We had rested quietly near thickets until birds, either unaware of or unabashed by our presence, came within a few yards of us. We had trained binoculars on others too far away to check clearly with the naked eye. Frequently, because we are still novices, we consulted the illustrated handbooks we carried.

Nowadays, all our walks outdoors bring the satisfactions of recognizing familiar bird friends and often of discovering new ones. We know this will be so no matter where we live: country, city or suburb. Experts say that even in localities as uncongenial as New York City, a moderately active birder, strolling about parks and near the waterfront, can spot 150 species in a year.

For the simple reason that we notice them now, more birds than ever seem to be flitting about our growing Long Island village. When we spotted an indigo bunting on our lawn recently, my sister, Ropsy, put it this way: "Do you realize that three years ago we'd never have seen the magnificent creature? Now he seems bright as a neon sign."

Similarly, instead of indistinguishable tweetings we hear increasingly meaningful calls and songs. We don't expect to learn the language of the birds, but we are beginning to catch the difference between the "cheer-up, cheerily" of the robin and the "poor Sam Peabody, Peabody, Peabody" of the white-throated sparrow.

Motor trips always have a destination these days—the marshes, ponds, woods, fields and beaches most favored by birds at each season. Even more fun are expeditions arranged by community bird clubs within driving distance of our home. Invitations like this from New Jersey come to us now:

"Two trips for Snow Geese . . . Captain Clark, a seasoned snow goose pilot, will guide his boat, 'Eagle,' along winding creeks, through a vast bayside (Please turn to page 108)

The Ideal Marriage of People, Places and Things

By JOSEPH A. BARRY

An ideal marriage is a free and natural harmony between free and natural people.

And so it is in the ideal marriage of people, places and things. They come together as if of their own accord, as if each had willed it. Even a book, a chair or a flower seems to be consciously at home in the house of such a marriage.

How quickly this is said. How easily it is written: In an ideal marriage, there is an agreement on principles, freely arrived at. There is no forced submission to fixed rules of conduct and relationship, to rules that have been fashionably decreed and conventionally decided.

But if there are no rules or precepts, there are, happily, principles and their practices. What are they? How, to arrive directly at our subject, can one best achieve a home of beauty and distinction? How, to be most specific, can one best furnish and decorate the places one lives in?

Let's admit right off that remarks about "good taste" are similar to the statements we just made about "ideal marriage." They are like the marriage ceremony itself: wishful and sentimental and sometimes beautiful, but with the real marriage yet to be realized in the daily details of daily life. It is one thing to promise to love, honor and obey; it is another to coddle a perfect egg for breakfast.

Yet there are principles involved in preparing a perfect egg, as there are principles inherent in love and honor. Leaving the latter for another time and place, let us consider the former—the principles of the daily life, particularly the principles of decorating and furnishing.

What are they? How does one achieve them for oneself?

Let's risk the impossible. Let's chance putting the answer in a single straightforward sentence:

You arrive at the principles of good taste by a process of awareness and by the practice of free taste.

Two things, then, come first: awareness and freedom.

The first of these, in turn, is awareness, or the will to awareness, for we must first wish a life of contact with individual, beautiful things before we are ever to hope to have it. If there is no love of beauty or no desire for the experience of beauty, obviously the road is blocked at the very start. Only with a will to awareness can we travel our road to good taste—the goal at its end. And only with a will to awareness can we travel it with clear and confident seeing.

Fortunately, the first step to awareness is the only step necessary. To learn to see one vase is to learn to see all vases, if one really sees it with a fresh, direct reaction to its form and texture, line and color, and eventually to its idea and meaning. But one need not wait for a special occasion or place to take the first step to awareness. One can begin immediately, perhaps by studying the arrangement of elements on this very page: the title, text and picture caption. Or, better, by studying the relationship of the chairs and table across our page, by noting the sympathetic lines of the legs, which are harmonious without being identical and so have a free relationship to each other.

This harmony of chairs and table is far from accidental; it was deliberately sought by the people who possess them. They owned the chairs, to begin with, and then had a table designed and made to go with them. To do this, they had to be fully aware of the chairs—their form, their material, their proportions, their curving legs. They had to see these chairs, these particular chairs, and separate them from all others in their memory. (Continued overleaf)

Thus, awareness means nothing less than disentangling ourselves from the confusion often around us and in us. It is really to see things, to distinguish one thing from another, to remark the similarities and the differences. It is to see and appreciate the line, and color, and shape, and form, and use of an object: to see each feature separately and all together as well.

Only then is it possible to use an object with precision and taste, to relate a chair and a table in perfect, yet free harmony, as in the picture on the preceding page, or in balanced contrast. Only after the door to beauty has been opened by awareness can one enter its world and make it one's own.

However, we cannot make it truly our own unless we accompany our process of awareness with the practice of free taste.

Correct or proper taste is not necessarily good taste. Good taste must be personal if it is to have more than the most superficial of meanings. It is formed by a certain free development, a personal exposure and experience of beauty. It is a growth, an enlargement of understanding and sensibility, a sense of discrimination evolved from a life of contact and comparison, trial and error, trial and triumph, too.

In the practice of free taste, as in the growing process of awareness, there is inevitably a rejection of what was once thought beautiful and there are certainly mistakes in judgment and enthusiasm. But at least there is an exercise of judgment and the enjoyment of enthusiasm. How many of those who cautiously practice correct taste can ever have known the exaltation of free choice and lonely judgment? How many of them, consequently, can be said to possess good taste, if it's merely a form, a manner, a tasteless mannerism? If it is not freely and personally theirs, can it be said to be theirs at all?

There are, of course, many virtues in the forms and even in the manner of tradition, but they must be freely repossessed by successive generations or they become lifeless and devoid of meaning. Good taste, whether contemporary or traditional (if it can be anything but contemporary), must emphatically be personal and exercised as one's own, if ever it is to be one's own.

In the world of the inner self, nothing can be known by hearsay; no authority can substitute for experience; no sensation can be more sublime than to master that experience through thought and reflection.

It is not enough to say that we are in pursuit of good taste. Rather, we must say we are on the way to a home of quality and integrity that is alive and personal, that speaks of us with charm and character, but of ourselves above all. For decorating is an expression of ourselves, of someone else or of convention. Each of these expressions may be in correct or proper taste, but only the expression of ourselves can ever achieve the ultimate in taste, that exquisite discrimination which has resulted from the passionate practice of free taste.

And now we have come to the most difficult but most important part of our discussion. You will recall our effort to put the answer to the puzzling question of taste into a single sentence:

You arrive at the principles of good taste by a process of awareness and by the practice of free taste.

It is clearly time to state what we think these principles are. To put it in more homely terms, what are the characteristics of homes often described as being in fine taste? They are, in our opinion, fundamentally three: 1. Unity in variety. 2. Dominance, 3. Equilibrium.

How do awareness and free taste create homes that have these classic principles of beauty? How do they achieve freshness and originality at the same time? Let us consider each principle in turn:

Unity in variety. Throughout the history of art, this has been the principle considered most essential for the creation of beauty in a painting, in a building or in an individual.

The mind of man, seeking to make order out of chaos and confusion, craves unity everywhere and will call only that thing beautiful which contains it. However, the mind of man is quickly bored by unity when it is mechanically achieved. It must have variety within unity.

There is obviously unity in a suite of furniture, identically matching colors, fabrics, patterns or materials. But where is the variety? Where is the lively relationship that might be called organic unity? What, in mechanical unity, will keep the mind from being drugged with monotony?

Only awareness and free taste, set dancing in the shops of the world, can produce the variety demanded. And only a taste that is free, sensitive and strong will create unity in the variety, make order out of possible chaos. The unity created will have the consistency and individuality of the person involved. It will express his particular awareness, it will have the variety of his personal choice, the strength of his conviction. Everything he likes will find its proper place, united by the character of his taste.

This unity in variety is a free, natural harmony that varies with the individual. It is a har- (Please turn to page 119)

The bathroom illustrated shows an AllianceWare grouping of unusual distinctiveness in rich, warm grey. Four other AllianceWare colors and white provide endless possibilities in charming decorative effects.

● For bathrooms of rich distinctiveness and beauty for years ahead—bathrooms your friends are sure to admire—choose AllianceWare porcelain-on-steel bathtubs and lavatories.

Besides the eye-appealing beauty of line and color of AllianceWare, you'll ever appreciate the safety and convenience features built into these famous fixtures. Every AllianceWare tub has a "grab rail" construction—exclusive with AllianceWare—along the outer rim to make entering and leaving the bath easier and safer. The broad, flat bottom provides a firm footing when showering. Splash as much as you wish—an integral wall guard flange keeps water from seeping between wall and tub. A wide seating rim on all AllianceWare models is another feature designed for bathing convenience. The AllianceWare patented method of installation will keep your tub forever from settling at the floor line or separating from the wall line.

Your choice of color can be blue, green, grey, tan, pink or glistening, gleaming white—to fit any plan of decoration. The porcelain-on-steel finish is lifetime too, yet as easy to clean as a china dish.

But with all its advantages and beauty AllianceWare is not as expensive as you might think. Formed steel construction means lighter weight and a saving of unnecessary metal. AllianceWare in colors is only 10% more than white. So even the most modest building budget can include AllianceWare bathroom fixtures. Yet AllianceWare will beautify the most pretentious home with utmost charm. Tell your architect, builder, or plumbing contractor you prefer AllianceWare.

Some of summer's sweetest gifts

Our Party Editor describes luncheon for a hot summer Sunday, colorfully served on the ocean-viewing terrace you see on this month's cover

"Come for the sunset and some barbecued spareribs." . . . "Bring your swim suit and we'll try out a new kind of hamburger lunch"—this is the kind of invitation I'm likely to issue when the sweet, sweet season of summer sets in. For this casual, lazy, dolce far niente time of year is my dish of tea. It gives me a hundred good excuses to entertain the way I like to do it—with no fuzz-buzz or unnecessary excitement, casually and easily. I let summer itself do part of the work, for it puts on a natural show for the entertainment of my guests. The beautiful sunny outdoors, the view from the terrace, the soft moonlit nights, the dewy scent of green things growing—all these are delightful props to an outdoor party and I like to take advantage of them as long as the season lasts.

Outdoor parties are really so satisfying to organize and so easy to run. What with barbecue grills, rotisseries, smoke ovens and Hibachis, it's such fun to cook and serve all at the same spot outdoors. And if you prepare the food in the kitchen, how wonderful it is nowadays to be able to wheel it out on carts or tables that keep hot things hot and cold things cold.

Most guests say that things taste better in the outdoors. I find that they so often look better, too, because so many of the smartest, gayest table appointments seem to have an affinity with the textures of stone and the colors of foliage and flowers, such as you usually have around you when you serve a meal on a terrace or a sundeck or even in a plain old back yard. And somehow or other I think you can whip up especially interesting, provocative table settings for the outdoors simply because you feel freer to experiment than you usually feel when you're planning an indoor table. You can mix or match just for the fun of it, and this, I have found, frequently produces some of the most dashing effects. You can not only tie in the menu with the table setting, so that the food looks its most enticing, but you can go a step further and make the whole setting blend with the scenery. You can repeat a garden's color scheme in china and glass and linen, or do a table with the ferny green motif of surrounding woods, or create a contrasting splash of color against the blue background of an ocean view.

have the same touch of color! This all enhances the fun, whips up table talk and keeps your imagination working. Our orange and yellow scheme complements the cerulean blue of the water, and the saffron rice dish matches the table. The tablecloth, by the way, is a wonderful rough wool rebozo from Mexico in a brassy golden color.

As the day is a lovely hot sunny one, let us start our luncheon party with minted daiquiris, so cool-looking with the fresh mint whizzed in. Then we'll have a vegetable which is at its peak. I will serve asparagus with mustard sauce (there is that touch of color again!). A paella for the second course—this is a rice and fish dish based on an old Spanish recipe. A tossed green salad with tarragon carrots (color accent), served with sourdough French bread. For dessert, fresh fruit with sherbet or ice cream and Ada's cake and coffee will be a refreshing finish. Whatever fruit is at its peak at the time, is the one to have. Delicious possibilities are apricots with slivered almonds and apricot liqueur and apricot sherbet, peach ice cream with fresh peaches and a peach cordial sauce and almonds, or pineapple sherbet with fresh (frozen) pineapple with kirsch and grated coconut.

We ask our guests for 1:30. I find that on Sunday this is a perfect time, for the men who wish to play golf can do so in the morning. For us it is not so hectic for we do not have to rush so after Sunday school and church.

Don't bother too much about the hors d'oeuvres—a bowl of curried nuts and melon chunks wrapped in Italian ham (paper-thin prosciutto) and a platter of mild cheese with some crisp Tavern pumpernickel crackers should do very nicely.

I keep on hand all sorts of nuts that I have seasoned with various condiments. If stored in glass jars with a tight-fitting cover they will keep for weeks. Use any of your favorite packaged nuts. Walnut halves are excellent; so are peanuts or a mixed assortment. Filberts or hazel nuts (Please turn to page 99)

Garden side

Inside-outside trash-barrel screen is built into fence with lightweight plywood cover that hooks down on garden side (top) so marauding dogs can't get metal cover off trash can itself. Open side of "box" (lower photo) is toward alley. (Use a sliding door to hide it from view if on street side.) All plywood is waterproof type.

and almonds are much better if they are done another way.

Curried Nuts

1 pound walnut halves
2 tablespoons curry
1 tablespoon ginger
2 tablespoons brown sugar
½ cube butter
¼ cup peanut oil (4 tablespoons)
2 teaspoons chutney sauce, added at the last

Over the fire melt butter and oil in a stainless steel mixing bowl, add curry, ginger and brown sugar, and mix until all is melted. Do not brown. Turn off heat, add walnut halves and stir and stir with a wooden spoon until all nut meats are well coated. Add chutney juice, dripping it around the bowl, and mix well. Put nuts on a cookie sheet covered with paper towels and put in an oven which has been heated to 350 degrees, but with the heat turned off. Allow to dry out for about 10 minutes, or until nut meats are crispy. Salt lightly and allow to cool before storing in tightly-covered glass containers.

Nuts are equally good using all peanut oil and no butter. Add enough oil to equal the butter (approximately 2 tablespoons).

Minted Daiquiris

1 tablespoon frozen lime juice for each drink
1 mint leaf for each drink
Bacardi light rum, 2 ounces per drink
Crushed ice

Put frozen lime juice into the electric blender, add mint leaves, rum and crushed ice. Whiz for a few seconds until all is beautifully mixed, and serve in stemmed glasses with a wide bowl, such as saucer champagne glasses. Since these drinks need no preparation ahead, make them as needed.

On your last round of drinks, dash to the kitchen, turn on the heat under the waiting asparagus and under the sauce. Put the buttered French bread into the oven in which your rice casserole is cooking.

The more you have done ahead of time, the happier you will be. Your salad plates should be in the refrigerator. Salad, broken into pieces and in its salad bowl, should be awaiting the salad dressing in the refrigerator. The chopped parsley and chives should be in a covered container in the icebox. The tarragon carrots must be cooked ahead and be well chilled.

At the same time as you start the asparagus, the frozen shrimp should be mixed in with the rice for they take about half-an-hour to cook. Add the herbs and clams the last ten minutes of cooking.

Asparagus with Mustard Sauce

Allow 1 pound per person. This sounds extravagant, and it is, for I use just the last three or four inches of the stalk of asparagus, but it's worth it! Break off stalks at the point of least resistance and store in a covered plastic refrigerator box until the morning of your party. If you wish to serve more of the asparagus, cut off the tough end, peel off the "woody" part and then cook upright in a tall, narrow sauce pan.

However, I use just the "luxury" part of the vegetable and use the remainder of the stalks for soup at another time. Get out your two large frying pans, put a quarter of an inch of water in each pan, and season the water with:

1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon M. S. G. (monosodium glutamate)
⅛ teaspoon Java cracked pepper

Arrange washed asparagus carefully in the pan so that you can lift it out easily. Cook for ten minutes and then see if it is tender. It is far better to have your guests wait for the vegetable, than to have the vegetable wait for the guests. To have a crispy tender vegetable it must be served à point, as the French say.

Mustard Sauce

1 cup whipping cream
1 can Campbell's cream of chicken soup
1 scant teaspoon Colman's mustard
1 tablespoon brown sugar
2 tablespoons Spice Islands tarragon vinegar

Whiz all ingredients in the electric blender for a few seconds and put in a double boiler to wait to be heated. Incidentally, this sauce is delicious cold, with no cooking necessary. I use it with cold asparagus, artichokes and chicken instead of mayonnaise.

Another good and "different" first course would be corn on the cob or string beans.

Paella for 8

2 cups rice (I use the do-not-wash variety, like M. J. B. Long Grain or Uncle Ben's.)
4 cups bubbling hot clam juice (Neptune Clam Nectar, bottled by Southern Distributing Co., San Francisco.)
2 packages of Qwik-Cook shrimp, packed by Qwik-Cook, St. Simons Island, Georgia. These are peeled and de-veined shrimp in a beautiful pack, 8 ounces.
1 can Reese Steamed Puget Sound Clams in the shell, packed in a 1 lb. 3 oz. can by Reese Finer Foods, Inc., Chicago.
½ generous cup chopped parsley
½ generous cup chopped chives
½ teaspoon honey
1 clove garlic run through garlic press (optional)
1 fresh bay leaf or ½ dried bay leaf
1 generous pinch Spice Islands saffron
⅛ pound butter

Put a 3-quart casserole in a 350° F. oven. Have clam juice bubbling hot. I use a 24-ounce bottle of clam juice and the juice from the canned clams. Add honey, garlic and bay leaf to the clam juice. Melt the butter in a large frying pan. Add saffron and stir until all particles are dissolved. Add dry rice and stir constantly until rice is really hot to the touch. It takes several minutes. When rice is hot, remove casserole from the oven, put the rice in it, pour bubbling broth over it, cover and return to the oven. This should cook for about half-an-hour. Then take the shrimp from the freezer, and add to the rice. Return to the oven. Allow to cook for 20 minutes at least.

When you have dished up the asparagus and the guests are finding their places, add the clams and chopped chives and parsley to the rice dish, removing the bay leaf. I always mix the rice with a fork, turning all the contents well, using a light touch to keep the rice fluffy. Return to the oven and it will be ready to serve when your guests have finished a leisurely first course. You do not have to rush for this casserole, but if you find that you will be delayed, turn the heat down to 250° F. the last 15 minutes of cooking.

Tossed Green Salad

Allow one large head of lettuce for four. If lettuce is small, such as butter lettuce, use 1 head for 3. It is more fun to have a variety of lettuces because this adds interest both in texture and color. Red, butter, romaine and curly lettuces are all delicious. I grow all mine and you have no idea how really succulent they are picked from your own garden. The lettuces should be washed, flung dry, and stored in a damp tea cloth in a nylon bag in the refrigerator.

Tarragon Carrots

1 can Campbell's bouillon (no gelatine added)
1 tablespoon dried tarragon
1 small bunch of small tender carrots

Wash fresh crispy carrots carefully. I split the carrot into eighths, then cut it in two-inch lengths for hors d'oeuvres, salad, etc. Put prepared carrots in sauce pan; add beef bouillon and tarragon. Bring to a boil, turn down heat, simmer for three minutes, remove from fire, store in canning jar until ready to use. The bouillon in which the carrots are cooked is delicious as a soup.

Salad Dressing

1 shallot, run through garlic press
½ teaspoon Spice Islands Beau Monde
½ teaspoon M. S. G. (monosodium glutamate)
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
⅛ teaspoon Java cracked pepper
½ cup Spice Islands sweet basil vinegar
1½ scant cups olive oil

Put mashed shallot in a mortar; mix in the sugar and dry ingredients. Mash well with the pestle. Add vinegar. Pour into a Pyrex pitcher for ease of measurement and stir constantly while adding olive oil. Store in an attractive bottle until ready to use.

A chilled white wine should be served with this luncheon. One with a spicy fragrance is better than a delicate one because the paella is rather highly seasoned. With this I particularly enjoy the slightly sweet quality of a Sauvignon Blanc by Cresta Blanca.

Fruit, sherbet and cake are dessert. First select your fruit. Then get the sherbet or ice cream to go with it, allowing 1½ quarts for eight people. Remember almonds and liqueur to complement your fruit. I always keep on hand raspberry, apricot, crème de cacao and kirsch. This makes an afterdinner drink assortment to suit almost any taste, and they are all especially good for flavoring.

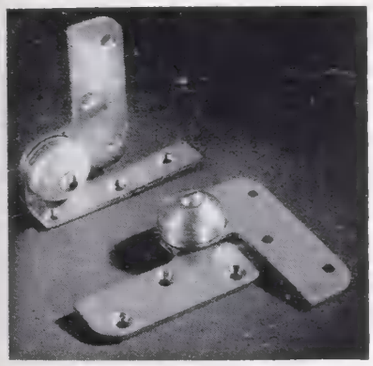
Ada's Chiffon Spice Cake



2¼ cups sifted cake flour
1½ cups sugar
3 teaspoons Calumet baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon Spice Islands cinnamon
½ teaspoon freshly ground nutmeg
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon cloves
1 rounded teaspoon caraway seeds
½ cup salad oil
5 egg yolks, unbeaten
1 cup egg whites
½ teaspoon cream of tartar

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and all of the spices into a large mixing bowl and make a well. Add oil and egg yolks. Beat with a whisk or in an electric mixer at low speed until batter is smooth. Put cream of tartar in with egg whites in a large mixing bowl and beat until they form very stiff peaks. Pour egg yolk mixture very slowly over beaten whites, folding in with whipper or rubber scraper. Turn into an ungreased 10-inch tube pan (angel cake tin) and bake in 325° F. oven for 55 minutes. Turn oven to 350° F. and bake an additional 10 to 15 minutes. Take from oven, invert pan and allow cake to cool in a hanging position as for angel cake. When cool, remove from pan, and dust with powdered sugar.

After coffee you can relax in the sun and enjoy Sunday afternoon with your friends. Such a happy day, and such a pleasant way to bring enjoyment to your guests!

Paraphernalia for making mosaic: Sack of ready-mixed cement, in background, for embedding mosaic; a can of adhesive for "buttering"; mixing bowl; framed plywood base, reinforced with wire mesh to effect a bond between wood and cement. Into this bed the sheet of pasted tesserae is pressed, paper side up. Mallet is used to pound the mosaic in. Next a trowel for smoothing mortar, tile clipper, palette knives, sponge and tweezers, 3 kinds of squeegees for cement and grout.

you have decided on your own design and color scheme, here is what you will need to start your project for covering a horizontal surface:

Plywood or Masonite base, cut to the size of your project (or section thereof)
Sufficient supply of tiles or chips to complete it
A tile cutter, pincers type
Can of adhesive
A spatula or palette knife
Sack of tile cement (or grout)
(For specific resources, please turn to page 106.)

For double insurance against warping, the wood base should be primed on both sides with Thompson's Water Seal or some clear lacquer. (Plywood is recommended as less likely to warp than any other base.)

Your next step is to outline the design on the wood base, labeling the different color areas as you have planned them. Fit the tiles or chips into several of these areas without cementing them; play with them for various effects, and to make sure that your estimate of quantities by color is ample. If you are doing a straightforward random pattern or a simple geometric, you may not have to use the tile cutter. But if you are attempting a round or oval piece, or if elements of your design call for curves, you will need a myriad of fragments to outline and fill in with. These you must make by clipping the standard-size tesserae into appropriate shapes. The tile clipper, a rather fascinating gadget, requires a little practice on your part, but you'll find a tessera splits easily and cleanly if you nip the piece only about $\frac{1}{8}$ inch from its edge, then press the clipper. The clipper will cut bits of glass, china, pottery or any hard flat materials like them. Be sure that all the necessary cutting and shaping are done before you start cementing down the pieces. When you are working with shatterable material such as the Venetian vitreous tesserae be sure to use an eye shield.

Now clear the board and start setting your piece. You may do this by "buttering" each tile or fragment with the adhesive before you place it on the base. Or, you may spread the adhesive with the spatula over small self-contained areas of the design and fill them in while the adhesive is still damp. It is wise to cover no more than three or four inches at a time, since the adhesive will harden in about an hour. It won't be long before you

Reverse method: 1. You paste each fragment face down on the heavy paper to conform with your sketch. When you have completed this process, you ease the sheet, paper side up, into the bed of mortar which you have already prepared. 2. The last stage of the conventional reverse method of making a mosaic is shown here. Having tapped the dampened paper with the mallet, you peel it off to reveal the face of the finished mosaic.

Interesting variation of the reverse method: Instead of laying the sheet of pasted tesserae into a bed of mortar, you may frame the piece of work at the paper stage, pouring mortar into the frame (3) to cover pasted down pieces. Plywood backing (4) is then clamped down and nailed to frame. When set, the entire framework is picked up and turned over. The dampened paper is then removed and the mosaic is scrubbed clean.

Take an exciting step forward with Kent-Coffey

LET your eye wander over this lovely bedroom group by Kent-Coffey. Look at its lines: straightforward, dramatically simple. Here you see modern furniture as it should be, fresh and free and exciting. You see fine details, like the lovely washed copper finish on the drawer pulls. In the slender, up-sweeping posts, you catch a faint suggestion of the Far East, and of the simple Far Eastern pieces that inspired this group. The finishes—Manchu Walnut and Sea Mist Mahogany at right, Manchu Walnut below, and Black Enamel and Sea Mist Mahogany at bottom—are lovely and exciting.

Your dealer can show you other Kent-Coffey groups: beautiful Colonial and French Provincial bedrooms, Traditional mahogany groupings, and striking Modern bedrooms, all made and finished with Kent-Coffey's famous care and craftsmanship. THE ART AND CRAFT OF MAKING MOSAICS can gauge your own speed. The joining, from one session to another, will be less apparent if you contrive to finish a specific design and color area at a sitting. Whenever you stop work, cover the finished areas with a damp cloth for from 12 to 24 hours; this will prevent too fast drying, avert cracks and fissures. Caution: Keep the can of adhesive covered as much of the time as possible, even while you are working.

When the mosaic has set hard, you are ready for the "grouting." For this you mix "tile cement" with water to the consistency of thick cream. (Do not confuse tile cement with base cement or mortar, which we shall talk about later.) Grout comes in white but can be colored any shade with dry pigment before you add the water. Pour this over the entire surface and rub gently with a sponge until all the crevices between pieces are filled. Then remove the excess grout with a wet sponge or squeegee and allow to dry for 24 hours. The powdery residue can be wiped off with a damp sponge. Actually, grouting is optional; many mosaicists prefer the uneven look and textural quality of the slightly separated tesserae. However, it does give a more finished appearance, is smoother and cleaner for a working surface, as on a table top or counter, and undoubtedly will last longer.

Your mosaic can be scrubbed with soap and water for a final cleaning. If particles of hardened adhesive have stuck to the surface, chip them off with a penknife. If this doesn't work, try benzine or (wearing rubber gloves) a 10 per cent solution of hydrochloric acid.

THE finished mosaic calls for a retaining frame either of metal or wood. Any sheet metal man or carpenter can do this for you. If you are planning a vertical installation for a mosaic made thus on a wood base (as for instance, a wall covering over a mantel), you may have to call in a mason or carpenter, depending on whether the wall is wood or masonry.

While new rubber-base adhesives have proved dependable with ceramic tile, they may not provide a strong enough adhesive for vitreous Venetian tesserae or a mosaic of pebbles unless the project is relatively small. To use these heavier materials, it is recommended that you make your mosaic by the reverse method—in a bed of mortar.

For the reverse technique you will need, in addition to the material used in the direct face-up method:

Heavy paper to paste tesserae onto.
Bowl of flour paste.
Chicken wire to nail to wood base as an armature. This permits the mortar to adhere to the wood.
A bowl for mixing mortar.
Trowel or squeegee to smooth it.
Wooden mallet.

The sheet of heavy paper should be cut to the size of your project and your design sketched on it. It is wise to make a second sketch, in reverse, particularly for color reference, since not all tiles or tesserae are the same back and front. You prop this up in front of you as you work.

AGAIN, as in the direct method, you should have your entire supply of tiles or fragments at hand. Paste these onto the paper design face down, using library paste. (Do not glue them.) When you have completed your design, cover a piece of plywood the exact size of your drawing with wire netting, nailing it down. The next step is to frame the board either with a strip of wood or metal, letting the edge of the frame rise about ½ inch above the wood base.

Next, mix mortar with water to a consistency that can be poured. (You can buy mortars already mixed from tile men and masons' suppliers; the usual mixture is one part cement to two parts of fine sand, plus 10 per cent lime to keep it from hardening too fast.) Pour this into the frame and smooth it with a trowel.

Now pick up your sheet of pasted tesserae and ease them, paper side up, into the bed of wet mortar. With the wooden mallet pound the sheet uniformly into the base so that tesserae are flush with the frame. Mortar starts hardening immediately. The paper, moistened by the wet mortar, can soon be removed. The mosaic is then scrubbed clean and covered with damp cloths for from 12 to 24 hours.

The reverse method is preferred by many workers in mosaic, even for horizontal surfaces. It is obligatory for floors, where the stress and strain of foot traffic demand the concrete or mortar base and the wire armature for solid bonding. It is always used for outdoor installations. If you planned a mosaic for the patio or garden, you could make it just as you did for the inside, pasting the design on paper, then applying the pattern in sections. However, a mason must first apply a wire-reinforced scratch coat over the designated area. This is made of one part cement to four parts of fairly coarse sand and is allowed to set for several days. Then the sheets of pasted tesserae are applied, after a quarter-inch coat of mortar has been applied to both the scratch coat and the pasted sheets of your mosaic.

The reverse process is always recommended for the following projects: Indoors: Floors, fireplace facings, kitchen or bathroom counters, wall sections or panels, window sills for plants, recessed spots or niches. Outdoors: Fountains, bird baths, sundials, reflecting pools, garden walls, fence finials.

Equipment and Storage

First essentials are a big worktable and adequate storage space. Glass jars are best for seeing your color assortments at a glance. Bowls of assorted sizes for mixing mortar and grout, and a garbage can with cover for storing cement in bags (should be kept as nearly airtight as possible). Plywood and Masonite can be bought at any lumber yard, cut to the right size.

Tools

Glass or tile cutter, pincer type, "Channelock" #356 is recommended, $2.50 at hardware stores. Trowel, palette knife or spatula, chisel, squeegee, sponge, chicken wire, wooden mallet and other sundries available at hardware stores.

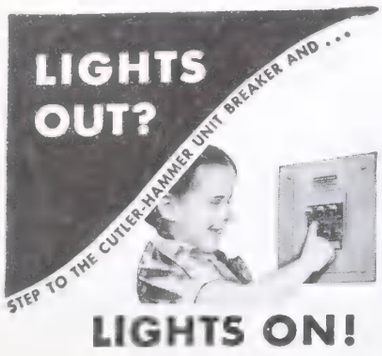
Adhesives

For the direct, or face-up, method of making a mosaic, use a standard ceramic tile cement, preferably one made from GRS rubber, such as Armstrong or MMM brand. (Avoid oleo-resin types of adhesives: These are made for applying plastic rather than ceramic tiles.) Other rubber-base cements which have proved satisfactory in making mosaics are Sure-Bond and Miracle Ceramic Cement. Light Floating Type, available at both paint and hardware stores at about $2 a quart can.

For mosaics that must remain in contact with moisture for long periods as, for example, a garden mural or a pool, use an adhesive that resists the alkaline action of concrete or mortar. Such a product is made by Armstrong, Pioneer Latex and Crossfield Products, among others.

If the chips or tiles of the mosaic have polished under-surfaces, for maximum assurance that none will work loose, wipe each piece with Armstrong Primer J1190, a chemical which converts the natural hydrophilic surface of glass into a hydrophobic one. Unless so treated, the glass slowly adds to itself a microscopic layer of water, separating itself from the adhesive in the process.

There are two basic materials available for embedding mosaic work: One is mortar made from cement mixed with sand and water. The other is oxychloride of magnesium (or magnesite). Magnesite is more expensive than cement and is harder for the amateur to work with. On the other hand, it results in a stronger concretion and can be used in a much thinner layer, making the finished work lighter in weight. Its drawback is that it has less resistance to water than portland cement and therefore should not be used where it would be constantly exposed to water.



Magnesite is distributed by F. E. Schundler, 29-28 41st St., Long Island City, N. Y., who has offices in Joliet, Ill. and Newark, Calif. Also available through Westvaco Mineral Products Division, Chrysler Building East, New York, and through Speiden-Whitfield, 206 West 23rd St., New York, N. Y. The smallest quantity sold is a 75-pound bag which costs $5.00.

Vitreous Enamel Tesserae, Ceramic Tile, Glass, Marble

Bartolucci Arts, Inc., imports vitreous tesserae, "Saivo," from Florence, Italy. They may be bought in New York at Bon Bazar, 228 West Fourth Street; at Palazzo Trading Company, 1055 First Avenue. Bartolucci also sells broken lots of "Saivo" to jobbers and tile men. Among these are Eastern Tile and Marble Co. of Miami, Candon & Son, Long Island City, N. Y., and Los Angeles Tile Jobbers. Saivo tesserae come in approximately 42 colors, in sheets at $1.35 to $4.85 a square foot, according to color. (Red, orange are high.)

Casavan Carrara Marble Company Inc., 2115 83rd Street, North Bergen, New Jersey, can supply marbles in all colors; also imports Casavan-Sarim vitreous tesserae from Venice. These can be bought in New York City at Scharff Trading Corporation, 414 East 75th Street. In approximately 65 colors, these cost from $2.00 a square foot to about $14.00 for the red ($15.00 for the gold, in half sizes). Palazzo Trading Company also sells Casavan-Sarim.

Agency Tile Supply Corp., 336 East 33rd Street, sells both ceramic and vitreous tesserae imported from Italy, in an assortment of about 60 colors. Ceramico Lurano, from Cremona costs from $1 to $3.50 a sheet (sq. ft.); Muranite from Venice costs from $1.50 to $8.00 a square foot.

Leo Popper & Sons, 143-146 Franklin Street, New York, supplies stained glass for windows and for mosaics. This comes in clear glass, opaque, opalescent and stippled, in a wide range of colors at 45 cents to 94 cents a square foot. Mr. Popper also has Flemish "stones," 25 cents to 45 cents a gross in vivid colors such as purple, green, turquoise, plus other specialties for the mosaic worker. He also has an assortment of Venetian tesserae in 12 colors from $2.00 a pound for regular colors to $5.25 for gold.

Mosaic Tile Company, Zanesville, Ohio, manufactures ceramic tile suitable for mosaic in a size three-quarters of an inch square, in both glazed and matte finish, in approximately 30 colors. For color chart and prices, write to the Zanesville factory.

the auspicious golden flower of good fortune; we'll float in a houseboat through a lake of lotus in the Vale of Kashmir. We'll visit the Taj, perhaps by moonlight, and its fabulous, unsung little rival, the Pearl Mosque of Delhi.

BUT "we" are legion, and everyone who longs to go to India dreams a dream of his own. What has lately struck us, however, is that most people are no longer dreaming of India as they used to, in a vain, wistful sort of way. They are going or they are planning to go, if not this year, then next year or the year after. It has never been so close, never more accessible, never more in the cards for more Americans—as close as 38 flying hours away. If you've been collecting dreams for years, here are some practical facts to help you plan.

The perfect time to visit India is from October through February. This is the season. Weather is clement, flowers bloom, festivals crowd the calendar. And the thrifty will note that this is off-season so far as most of the rest of the world is concerned. This means you not only save money in transportation rates but can depend on some good travel bargains in the places you stop en route.

From April through June, though, take to the hills (and there are hill resorts near every large city), for this is summer at its hottest, followed by the monsoons during June and July, the rainy months.

However, if all your life you've dreamed of that houseboat in the Vale of Kashmir, you won't enjoy floating languidly through the willows until April or May, for in the Himalayan heights winter corresponds to our winter and then Kashmir becomes ski country. But come spring, iris and lotus and a million fruit trees bloom on the Dal Lake, where the houseboats drift, and the Shalimar Gardens (that famous pale hand territory which borders the lake) are as enchanting as their romantic name which means "Abode of Love."

To sojourn on a houseboat, go first to Srinagar three hours north of Delhi by Indian Airlines plane or two days away by motorcar over good roads. Here, moored on the Jhelum River which runs along the town, are the luxurious houseboats which you may rent for a few days, a week or a season. Rental, including three or four servants who will shop, cook and do for you elegantly, amounts to about $6 a day. Food is bought from the water peddlers who float their wares to the side of your boat. Singing boatmen and heart-shape paddles propel the shikara or water taxi, Kashmir's velvet-lined, moonstruck answer to the Venetian gondola, which can take you drifting through the willows or over to Srinagar to shop.

BEST shops are on the famous Bund. Best buys: the fabulous shawls of Kashmiri goat wool (cashmere), so soft that, like fine Indian muslin, they can be pulled through a ring; characteristic handwoven cottons in multicolor stripes; exquisite (and unexpected) objects of papier maché, delicately, superbly patterned and lacquered, sometimes lined with brass, like the bowls we show on page 40; and embroidered rugs called gubbas.

Houseboat living is regal, sybaritic, but if you'd like a chance to live literally like a rajah, fulfill your desire at Srinagar's new Palace Hotel, former palace of the Maharajah of Kashmir, scheduled to open this summer.

FOR a taste of the gorgeous pageantry and grandeur that once marked the princely states of old India, Indians themselves urge you to visit the city of Mysore in the south, particularly during the festival of Dussehra and Durga Puj, this year from October 17 through 26. This is where for ten joyous days the Maharajah throws open his sumptuous palace grounds to all, and at night, turns them into a dazzling pavilion of light. Lavish festivities go on night and day; the palace guard parades in full panoply; horses and elephants are caparisoned in gaudy silks and flashing gold; the Maharajah himself rides in a jewel-encrusted howdah; and—this will give you something to think about—trained elephants toss rose petals on the crowd.

In Mysore you can put up at one of those world-famous hotels, the Krishnaraj Sagar, some miles outside of the city overlooking the fabulous fountains and flowery terraces of the Brindavan Gardens which seem to be so glamorous as to defy description. Specialties of Mysore, India's gold state, are carved ivories and wood—teak, rosewood, sandalwood, often in elaborate furniture. Silks here are particularly opulent, beloved of Indian brides, and made in a government-run factory.

YOU could hardly ask for more than Mysore, except, according to the authorities, the experience of India during Divali, the lovely Festival of Lights. It bears a curious relationship to Christmas and Hanukkah with every building, every street, every stream twinkling with millions of little flames, all in honor of Lakshmi, goddess of wealth and gambling. This is the season when debts are paid, the old year's woes forgotten, and everyone dresses up in new clothes.

Try to be in Delhi, India's capital, on January 26 for the celebration of Republic Day. Here, on the sixth anniversary of the republic, they're planning an All-India festival with people from all over this endlessly diversified land converging for a folk-dance festival, cultural pageant and a big military parade. This one day should tell more about the country than you could read in a hundred books. Incidentally, Delhi and New Delhi (pronounced DELL-y) are twin cities. Seat of government was built in 1930 and is called New Delhi. The ancient part of town, full of the atmosphere you associate with the inscrutable east, is called Delhi. Here the shopping traveler's "must," according to the experts, is the famous Chandni Chowk bazaar where antiques abound: jewels, gold, silver, brass and bronze. It is also the place to invest in attar of rose, that romantic perfume of song and story, or in jasmine, lotus or a score of exotic, unfamiliar scents. You should go with a guide or at least someone who knows the ropes and can bargain expertly.

The Government Emporium, a sound non-bargainable operation, is said to present a lavish sampling of arts and crafts, from all over India. Delhi specialties are exquisitely worked ivory and gold-tooled sandals. It is also noted for fine jewelry. Those in the know suggest that you buy jewels only at well-recognized shops and that you discard the notion of buying a handful of rubies or emeralds to have them set at home. You get more for your money buying gems in settings.

A reasonable oriental facsimile of Halloween takes place in northern India during the spring festival of Holi, March 8 and 9. It's a riotous holiday full of pranks, games and goings-on, during which the merry-makers squirt colored water at each other. People wear old clothes during the day, then change at night to new, festive outfits, symbolic of the new season. Proceedings are said to be liveliest in Barsana and Nandgaon, near Mathura.

IF YOU are interested in what we've come to consider typical Indian brass, Banaras is the place to buy it. But Bidar, a town in Hyderabad, gives its name to a most characteristic and exquisite work called Bidri, made by engraving dark metal and then inlaying it with bright wires of gold and silver. Banaras is also famous for its unique sari silk, richly brocaded in gold and silver.

It's nice to know that any shopping problem, to say nothing of the contretemps that sometimes muddle the path of even the best travelers, can usually be resolved with the help of the Indian Government Tourist Office. Representatives are right at hand in Bombay, Delhi, Madras, Calcutta, Srinagar, Agra, Banaras, Bangalore, Aurangabad, Ootacammund, Darjeeling and Simla.

India's official language is Hindi, but English is commonly spoken in the large cities by most people who are at all concerned with travelers and their problems. The monetary unit is the rupee, currently worth about 21 cents.

YOUR travel agent can of course set you straight on ways and means of getting to India, but you may be surprised to discover what a broad choice of transportation you have. Chief airlines flying into Bombay are Trans-World Airlines, British Overseas Airways (BOAC), Air India International and Qantas Empire Airways (Australian). Calcutta is served by Pan American World Airways, Air France, KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, Scandinavian Airlines System, Air India, BOAC and Qantas.

From our West Coast, ships of the American President Lines call at Indian ports; from our East Coast, you can sail via American Export Lines. And of course the traditional British way to get there is via the P & O (Peninsular and Oriental Line) sailing from England. We couldn't begin to count the other sea-going possibilities, but one of the grandest ways to get there is on a round-the-world cruise. Two ships currently scheduled to cruise out of New York the coming season are the Swedish American Line's "Kungsholm," leaving January 7 for 97 days and the Cunard Steamship Line's "Caronia," leaving January 20 for 108 days. Both stop at Bombay.

salt marsh. You may also observe short-eared owls and other species of birds. Bring your lunch and warm clothing. Cost: $2.50."

Birders are eager to spread their love of nature. Their method is education—especially through the far-flung activities of the National Audubon Society. Through its films, illustrated lectures, bird-watching tours, four summer camps, more than a million acres of lovingly maintained sanctuaries and dozens of publications, the society brings nature lore to more than 2,000,000 persons a year. Three hundred clubs for adults and nearly 10,000 Audubon Junior Clubs cooperate in individual communities. We know that almost anywhere we travel in the United States and southern Canada, friendly fellow birders will welcome us.

When bad weather keeps us indoors, we can still follow our hobby—observing the bird feeding station outside the window or listening to magnificent phonograph recordings of bird songs in our living room.

Widening older hobbies, my sister Ropsy is taking still and moving pictures of birds; I, the music-lover, am trying to catch their songs on tape recorder. Great-grandmother Thompson, a crusader for better social service, is seeking to extend nature programs in schools.

All this began one April day less than three years ago, when Ropsy went for a stroll with a friend from Vermont.

The Vermonter pointed to a bird, a little smaller than a robin, scratching in the dead leaves. "See, a towhee, black head and back, red waistcoat, white breast."

"That," Ropsy admitted afterwards, "was the first time I ever really looked at a bird."

When she heard some weeks later of a color moving picture of birds being shown by the National Audubon Society at a New York City public school, she went.

"I've never seen anything more beautiful," she reported to us. "We've been missing something."

Ropsy quickly learned that the first essential for a birder is a handbook of clear pictures and accurate descriptions. She chose Roger Tory Peterson's A Field Guide to the Birds, affectionately known as the "bird watchers' Bible." Its clear silhouettes, color plates and succinct text give untrained observers the keys for recognizing the birds they see.

With her new book, Ropsy began her "life list" at once. The dozen birds she recognized that first day were checked in the list of more than 400 included in her field guide, with the date and place where each had been spotted.

To our surprise, Maureen, then only three, began attaching herself to Ropsy's strolls.

In a local stationery store, I found a manual for Maureen, the Birds volume in the Simon & Schuster $1 Golden Nature series. Its small format and bright prints make it ideal for children.

One day soon after, Maureen came tearing down the hall to my study. "It's a pheasant! It's a pheasant!" She panted in delight. "It's a pheasant, and it's flying right over our house.

The second essential for a birder is binoculars—preferably 6 to 8 power, that is, able to magnify the observed object 6 to 8 times. The front lenses should be 30 to 40 millimeters in diameter to let in enough light. Such binoculars are designated by power and front lens size thus: 6x30, 7x35, so on.

Unfortunately such glasses are expensive—from $40 to $170 new. However, in the advertising columns of the National Audubon Society's bi-monthly "Audubon Magazine," Ropsy found some secondhand pairs offered for $15 to $50. She chose a fine pair at $50.

We thought Maureen ought to have glasses, too, but we had no idea of spending so much. A Japanese pair, bought for 98 cents in a toy store satisfied her completely.

At first my husband and I resisted the fascinations of birding.

But when great-grandmother, Ropsy and Maureen set off on a bird-walk together that day, I tagged along out of curiosity.

"Listen!" Maureen stopped near a dogwood at the edge of the lawn and pointed to a slate-grey bird among the leaves. "Eow, Eow. It's a catbird."

Next time I passed a bookshop, I bought myself a bird guide. Later I explained to my husband, "You'd be surprised how much easier it is to identify birds when you know what to look and listen for."

MAUREEN was sometimes satisfied just to listen. One day Ropsy led us to a dense clump of birch, cedar and dogwood. Though the woodpatch was filled with bird music, Maureen was not quick enough to catch sight of a single songster.

"Tired of this?" Ropsy asked.

"No," she whispered. "I can see them with our ears." No television program has held our little group of five birders more intently than Song Birds of America, a high-fidelity disk, recorded by two Cornell University professors.

I often wish that those who mourned the end of American family life might look into our living room to see Maureen, Great-grandmother Thompson, my husband, my sister and me all listening raptly as the record begins:

"It is spring. The birds of America are in full song. Woods, fields, gardens and shade trees resound with their music. Each species has its characteristic song. Over and over again, it sings the same little musical phrases that anyone with a good ear can learn to recognize."

And then, as each of 24 birds pours out its song in our house, Maureen, who cannot yet read, makes a game of trying to pick out its picture. We others pore over the illustrations, too.

Using pictures collected from magazines and postcards, we do the same with other magnificent recordings, like Cornell University's "American Bird Songs."

WE STARE out of our windows a great deal more often these days. For a pan of water and a simple feeding station well-stocked with sunflower seeds, millet, suet, peanut butter and raisins have guaranteed us a lively scene ever since we set them among the shrubs in an ell of the house. Juncos, chickadees, myrtle warblers, snow buntings, downy woodpeckers and greedy jays turn up regularly in the dead of winter. As the weather warms new visitors arrive.

Our tiny neighbors are by no means as shy as we once thought. Food, water, simple mechanical lures (like the $1.50 Audubon Bird Call) which produces tantalizing squeaks and chirps, all bring them close enough to be observed minutely. Some birds are so "humanly" curious they will hop close if one merely remains quietly among them.

Not that we expect to keep all our attention fixed on birds! Our walks last spring showed us wild flowers more brilliant and varied than we had ever noticed before. For the first time in a score of years, we pulled out a flower guide presented to me as a child. On our walks, we began cutting small wild flower bouquets to be identified at leisure at home. Soon even Maureen was exclaiming over delicate, often-missed flowers like blue-eyed grass.

We are all beginning to see the astonishing beauty and variety of butterflies, insects, stones, shells, leaves—in fact the whole world of nature—animal, mineral and vegetable. And oddly enough all this is strengthening friendships with fellow humans. Like most other birders, we have begun to take some trouble to share our hobby.

To those interested in becoming birders, we suggest writing to the National Audubon Society, 1130 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., for information about bird clubs in their localities and the services of the society to birders.

Neither highbrow nor high tragedy, La Bohème is Puccini's masterpiece nonetheless, for in homespun phrases it speaks perfectly the poetic language of youth

A Friendly Opera

By RICHARD WILLIAMS

Some operas thrill, other operas awe, others offer intellectual stimulus. La Bohème may affect you in one or in all of these ways. In addition, it is probable that the opera will give you a special glow, a special warm feeling. It is a friendly opera. People hold it in a personal affection. They have a soft spot in their hearts for it. Everybody has his own reason for being fond of the work: this or that melody, the story, the characters.

Perhaps La Bohème's chief attraction, however, lies in the fact that it speaks the language of youth. Though the opera is sad and Mimi dies, the sadness is softened not only by much comedy but also by promise, the promise of spring to come again. Mimi sings of the first sun of April and the lovers sing of the season of flowers.

Both the opera and the novel on which it is based are filled with this youthful buoyancy. Murger's novel, Scenes of the Bohemian Life, is autobiographical. He lived in the sort of attic which we see in the first scene of the opera. He was as poor as any of the four friends, who are modeled on the novelist's real-life companions. Puccini's music, to an extent anyway, is also autobiographical. He, too, in the formative years in Milan, had lived an impecunious existence, dodging the landlord and subsisting on bean soup. When he began to work on La Bohème, he was thirty-five years old and was no longer quite so young nor quite so poor.

Puccini was now living in a quiet little house of his own, close by the shores of a quiet lake. In this rêtreat, Torre del Lago, he gathered around him a few cronies, carefree and boisterous fellows, with whom he formed the La Bohème Club. The headquarters of this club were established in an old and broken-down hut lighted by petroleum lamps. There Puccini hung sausages from the ceiling and laid in a good supply of wine bottles.

In such an easy atmosphere did the work grow, sometimes at full speed, more often slowed down by minute changes in the libretto, over every word of which he fussed and fretted. Much of the music was composed at night, with Puccini aiding his inspiration by drinking a "poisonous" mixture of aquavit and sugar. He was in the habit of declaiming aloud the words of the libretto in order to hear the rhythm of the verse.

When he composed the final scene, the scene of Mimi's death, Puccini for once was alone; it was deep in the night. He got up from the piano, stood in the middle of the room and wept. He wept like a lover who had lost his beloved.

I relate these circumstances of the composition in order to trace the mood which served to supply the opera with that charm—and occasional naïveté—which is so salient a characteristic of the work.

La Bohème is Puccini's masterpiece. It is surpassed in dramatic effectiveness by Tosca and in emotional force by the love music in Butterfly. Turandot contains music of more advanced design. Nevertheless, taking it all in all, Bohème is the perfect work from Puccini's pen. This perfection, this cohesiveness, this conviction which it carries are not due to the melodies alone, although the melodies are what give Bohème its popularity. Even when sung badly, and they are almost always sung badly, Rodolfo's narrative, "Che gelida manina" (How cold your hand is!), Mimi's aria, "Mi chiamano Mimi" (They call me Mimi), Musetta's Waltz, as well as the beautiful quartet of leave-taking in the third act, are operatic "pieces" of the highest order.

BUT IN addition to these set numbers, these arias and duets, we find in Bohème's music a consistent beauty of mood and imagery which is able to turn a story, simple and commonplace enough, a story of boy meets girl and boy loses girl, into a work of art. La Bohème is the life of the young Bohemian. You feel that, even if you have never read Murger's novel. And if you have read it, your admiration for the opera increases. Everything comes alive. All the characters are filled with vitality. We have observed previously that Puccini's men are usually not very strong personalities, that Puccini was more interested in his heroines than in his heroes. Bohème is the exception. Nobody is stinted in this opera; the four friends are just as well drawn as Mimi, on whom, of course, our sympathies center.

Puccini's orchestral mastery in La Bohème is a further cause for admiration to the student. No longer, as in the older Italian operas, is the orchestra merely an accompaniment to the aria, no longer does it merely repeat the melodic phrase in a sentimental postlude. The orchestra's role in La Bohème is equally important to that of the singer's.

Particularly beautiful is the introduction to the third act where, with the simplest means, the icy and empty winter day is suggested.

Obviously Bohème is not a work knocking at the door of heaven or hell. It is not high tragedy. The music does not shout (except when the tenor does in defiance of Puccini's wishes); rather it speaks in little phrases, remarks which in spite of all their poetry have a weekday ring to them and, therefore, become close and dear to us.

IT IS one of the curious facts of musical history that this ingratiating opera did not make much of an impression at its first performance in Turin in 1896. This first performance was, according to all contemporary accounts, a superb one. And no wonder, for the conductor who guided the performance was a young man, twenty-eight years old, who had already made people talk about him with astonished admiration. His name was Arturo Toscanini. (Even then an American critic who was present at the performance reported that Toscanini was the only artist the city of New York should be proud to invite to conduct.) Perhaps the public and the critics, after Manon Lescaut, had expected from Puccini an opera on a grander scale. Whatever the reason, it took a few performances before Bohème's success became a certainty.

But that was long ago—over a half century ago. For many years now La Bohème has been ranked among the sure-fire operas. Along with Aïda and La Traviata, it is almost guaranteed to fill an opera house. Because it is so popular, it is used as a singer's vehicle, and they ride it so hard that the carriage has become mud-stained. The cheapness of which Puccini sometimes is accused lies far more in such performances than in the music itself. Fortunately, we have on records a performance by the man who originally conducted the work, and this recording, though now antiquated in sound, shows us what a fine, endearing and friendly work La Bohème really is.

If you are one of those who can't wake up without a cup of coffee at the first eye-blink in the morning . . . If you adore Italian espresso almost any other time but insist upon the good familiar "American" brand for breakfast . . . If you love to kick off your shoes and sip a cheering cup of tea or bouillon after an afternoon at the museums . . . If you want just one fine meal a day and only a snack for supper . . . If you long for your own well-mixed cocktail en route to the country and you're caught in a barless train . . . If you want what you want when you want it, wherever you are, you should find some valuable suggestions in these true stories of "Gourmets on the Go."

CASE HISTORY I
Two Flying Ladies

An Air France bag and fittings have proved a real nerve- and life-saver for two busy women whose travels, whether for business or pleasure, are inclined to be purposeful. The heart of the matter is an electric hot cup with two cord sets. It can be used either in a hotel room or plugged into the cigarette lighter of an automobile. This particular electric hot water heater, the Boilmaster, made by American Electrical Appliance Corp., 1060 Washington Ave., New York 56, N. Y., comes in various models according to the voltage requirements of country or car.

Since base plugs differ in almost every city in the world outside the United States, it's wise to equip yourself with a set of attachments. If you can't find them at a local electric shop, allow yourself a few extra minutes to buy them at the drug store in the Idlewild International Airport in New York.

Other equipment for enjoying life on the fly has been chosen by our ladies after several years of trial and error. They are devoted to a long-handle Spoonomat from Lord George, Ltd., 1270 Broadway, New York, N. Y. This versatile stirrer is also a beater and invaluable for making iced coffee from the instant variety without bothering to dissolve it in hot water first. It's fine, too, for making a smooth, well aerated drink of milk from non-fat dried milk, which incidentally has developed a much finer flavor in the last few months.

Packets which contain enough dry milk to make four cups, are so easy to transport. To keep the powdered milk from sifting out after the package has been opened, our ladies use a polyethylene freezer bag. Individual packets of instant coffee, instant Sanka, dehydrated soups and open cartons of Melba toast or crackers are enclosed separately in these high-visibility bags so that you don't have to rummage to find what you want.

Bitter experience has taught these travelers the pitfalls of gadgety jackknives which break fingernails, bend in a cork, chew at a can and balk murderously on a bottle cap. Instead, they bring from home their most efficient corkscrew —the kind wine stewards use. (This one was bought at Abercrombie & Fitch in New York City.) No longer do they ruin a fine wine with gritty cork, and many's the time they have had a fine supper of crusty French flutes of bread, good cheese and wine. Incidentally Traveling in out-of-the-way places, you never can be certain about the availability of electricity—so take along one or two of these Charlab Pocket Stoves, as small as a penny box of matches, with pellets for heating. A tiny pellet cooks for as long as 20 minutes. Howard Sales Co., Winchester, Tenn.

For a cocktail party "away," the gourmet often on the go or away from home for the night will find the Thermo Travel Bar (Charles H. Greenlee, New York) handy. Light in weight, it has a plastic ice-cube container, plastic glasses; is insulated to protect bottles; has room for cocktail accompaniments.

hey discovered the way to keep he sharp point of the corkscrew rom tearing the bags. They keep a cork on the end of it.

Often included in their traveling kit is the Gilhoolie, a wonder worker at removing bottle caps and screw-type lids or prying tops and anchor caps, and an ever-present help in any struggle with a stubborn bottle of medicine or nail polish. It is excellent, too, for keeping the sparkle in carbonated water, for it reseals beverage bottles in a most professional manner.

A whole wide world of experience has opened up to our travelers now that they go equipped with their own tiny but trustworthy Flex-Roll can opener. It works on exactly the same principle and with the same ease as the best wall type, whipping around tins of all shapes and sizes.

A tiny Lid-Flipper weighing scarcely an ounce acquainted them with grapes and greengage plums in cognac, so juicy and firm that they make most fresh fruits taste tired by comparison. Armed with this first-hand knowledge, our ladies knew enough to pounce upon the plums when they found them at B. Altman's in New York!

In Switzerland they bought delicious apricot and strawberry jam in tubes and found afterwards to their great delight that the same thing can be found at Charles & Co., on Madison Avenue.

Of course, it takes a knife, a fork, a spoon, a cup and at least a bread-and-butter plate to make a hotel room a home. And when they are away, our pair like to have with them their own silverware, called Silver Sculpture, by Reed and Barton. They carry also two exquisitely sheathed sharp knives from the Orient, obtainable through Trader Vic's Food Products in Oakland, California. Two bread-and-butter plates of unbreakable Texas-Ware become saucers or plates. Extremely useful, too, is the Therma-Glass (a two-part plastic mug set) that comes in a variety of attractive color combinations like pink and charcoal. It keeps drinks smoking-hot or frosty-cold with a minimum of ice and in either case protects the fingers.

CASE HISTORY II
Cautious Adventurers

Our favorite globe-trotters are a husband-and-wife team of foreign correspondents who are as likely to turn up in Albany, N. Y., as in Accra or Ankara. In almost every detail their ideas concur with those of the "flying ladies." But they differ on one important point. In addition to electrical equipment, they carry everywhere heat tablets and a lightweight cooking utensil.

"You never can tell about electricity—not even in Connecticut," they say. So they take a Charlab Pocket Stove (shown on page 112) with them. This folds to a size no larger than a match box and holds four tablets, each of which burns 20 minutes and can be snuffed out like a candle and re-used. These can be ordered by mail from Howard Sales Co., Winchester, Tenn.

Heat-Tabs, available at many camp supply shops and hardware stores (Abercrombie & Fitch on Madison Ave., N. Y., for instance), work in a similar manner. A metal container that looks like a cigarette box becomes a stove. It is equipped with a dozen fire-tablets—large ones to burn for 20 minutes, small ones for seven. The whole thing costs about $1.25.

Mr. & Mrs. Globe Trotter also insist upon real coffee—not the instant variety. They carry coffee bags and a tin of exquisite tea, both from Charles. Often at the end of a nerve-tensed day, a bowl of hot cereal is all the supper they want, so they have quick-cooking or instant cereal. One type that they discovered on a camping trip in the Canadian north woods has milk and sugar built in. It is one of a dozen or more varieties of Bernard's Kamp-Pack Foods (559 W. Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.). Put up in foil packages to serve four heartily, Bernard's Kamp-Pack list includes everything from hot chocolate, pancakes and biscuits to soups and barbecued beef.

Neither ulcers nor reducing and salt-free diets have kept this couple from their ceaseless rounds. They have gone armed from time to time with baby foods, dietetic biscuits, Sucaryl in tablet and liquid form (when, as and if ordered by the doctor), and House of Herbs salt-free seasoning, which, unlike most.

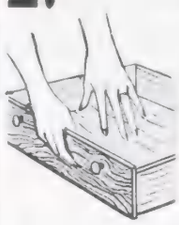
HARDWOOD PLYWOOD



Hardwood Plywood furniture is a better buy . . . by nature. If you want to make sure you'll live happily with the furniture you select, make these simple tests:

1. Look for Beauty

Nothing can match the natural loveliness of Hardwood Plywood. It's texture is soft to touch . . . the ever-varying grain gives one-of-a-kind individuality.

2. Look for STRENGTH

Hardwood Plywood has great dimensional stability which makes it ideal for drawer bottoms, dust stops between drawers—back panels for chests, chairs and mirrors. They're quality features that assure long term economy.

3. Look for LONG LIFE

Hardwood Plywood lasts and lasts, even grows lovelier with age. Unlike paper thin surfaces, Hardwood Plywood has a depth of beauty which means that scratches and mars are easily repaired.

"tastes not bad—not bad at all."

They have even discovered some carbonating capsules known as Lucky Pops that presto-change a glass of water into root beer, orange, lemon-lime cola, wild cherry or grape. Sugar-free, mind you, hence no calories, but fairly dancing with Vitamin C.

CASE HISTORY III
Town Folk in the Dell

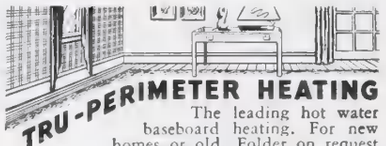
They live in a populous housing development, see the same people at the same houses in the same rotation far too often. So one imaginative hostess provided a change of pace along with a change of scene. She invited a group to cocktails in an "enchanted glade"—actually the woodsy outskirts of her home. The bar in a Charles Greenlee Thermo Travel Case from Bar Mart in N. Y. C. (shown on page 113) provided ice, an excellent Scotch, a very fine gin and Dubonnet Blonde. Drinks were mixed to order: Gibsons, pale and dry as can be, garnished with the required onion; Scotch-on-the-rocks; highballs, and even Tom Collins, made in a flash, with a shake of Lime or Lemon Queen, which is powdered but miraculously fresh to taste. And to nibble along with the drinks: something that not only reminds everyone of old-fashioned cracklins from down South but is, in fact, that old-fashioned delicacy with a smart new label—Filler's Barbecue Bakon or Bake-N-Krisp.

CASE HISTORY IV
Motoring Menus

A young architect with several jobs rather widely separated has developed an interesting technique by which he can lunch on his way. Formerly, he took hot coffee and cold water in a "Car Snac" portable picnic case. Now he uses an electric hot cup that plugs into a cigarette lighter. His favorite has a sturdy bracket to secure it to the dash board and a convenient rack for holding mugs, sugar, cream and instant coffee. He picks up his lunch at the grocery store or upon occasion in a delicatessen—has a great partiality for sliced imported salami, smoked liverwurst, sliced Switzerland cheese or a sharp, well-aged Wisconsin or New York State cheddar. For breads he uses crusty rolls, poppy seed or onion buns, sliced sour rye or pumpernickel. Whole tomatoes keep the meal from tasting too dry. Sometimes he sips tomato juice from a tin through a straw, opening it as he would a can of beer so it doesn't slosh about. Dessert consists of packaged cookies.

CASE HISTORY V
The "Nash" Across the Country

Mr. and Mrs. J. H., Sr., have crossed the United States a dozen times from west to east and from Canada to Mexico. All their traveling has been done in a Nash car, where seats are easily converted into a comfortable bed. Neither has any interest in cooking but both are connoisseurs. Over the years they have compiled their own personal list of fine eating places. They carry a pair of Hamilton's well-insulated thermos bags and jugs in two different patterns and colors—one pair for hot foods and drinks, the other for cold. (See photograph on page 113.) While dining at a favorite spot, they often have their hampers packed with another meal to eat en route. They carry aluminum foil pans of various sizes. And when they stop—usually in the afternoon at a motel to freshen up—they have tins of Scotch Ice re-frozen in the host's refrigerator. Because they have little patience for fussing, they carry the least possible number of accessories: salt and pepper in a non-clog picnic shaker; eating utensils and paper napkins in the glove compartment. This method enables them to dine on the meals of their choice in the most exciting surroundings. Their itinerary is not necessarily dependent upon meal hours. They can buy their dinner, for instance, at 10:00 a.m. or their supper at 2:00 in the afternoon and take it with them to eat at twilight by a majestic waterfall or lake.



Case histories of such gourmet discoveries could be multiplied endlessly. Consider just a few more of the gadgets and other aids now available. For a barbecue on the beach, there now is a battery-powered spit, as well as throw-away kits of charcoal and all manner of portable grills. . . . And you can have your coffee breaks in the morning, lunch-time conferences or afternoon tea right at your desk using one of the dozen fast-working electric units now on the market.

It's wonderful how life picks up when you learn to boil water.

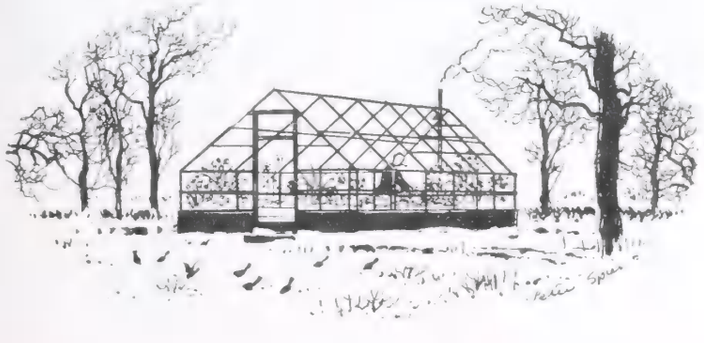
in San Mateo, California. Wind is the big problem, excessive sunshine is a strictly temporary one, so roll-down bamboo mats (page 45) are all that is needed for a solution. In the dry Southwest, burning sun and its glare would be an all-season problem, so the "skin" would likely be canvas for greater light filtering. In the humid southland, both ends would be open for greater air movement. In the rainy Northwest, both ends would be made rain-tight. But everywhere the basic idea will work and make garden living possible on far more days a year.

SHOULD you elevate your shelter on a deck, as here? Yes, if summer rains are heavy. (You don't want to take chances on flooding.) Yes, when chiggers limit the enjoyment of gardens. (You should also connect the shelter with the house by a hard-surface path; thousands of fine Southern gardens aren't bringing their families the enjoyment they could because these discoveries haven't been made.) Yes, if you enjoy being in the garden to hear the rain as it falls and to smell the clean freshness of newly washed leaves when the ground is yet too damp to sit for comfort to human muscles. No, if mosquitoes are bad, unless the decking can be tight so none can come up through it. No, too, if you plan to cook indoors and wheel the meal out to the shelter.



Should it be at right angles to the prevailing breeze, as here? Yes, if wind or driving rain is a problem. No, if breezes are essential for comfort in humid weather. No, if it must be located so that the breeze blows across the garden before reaching it. (You don't want to lose the chance to enjoy the first whiffs of the perfume oils that arise from the garden each day as the sun goes down.)

Must it be white? Not exactly. True, the play house must be predominately white because of the whiteness of the cloth needed to get enough light indoors. But there's ample room for making the play house a colorful addition to the garden. Decorative panels of colored canvas can be added, as the triangles were added to the house we show. The wooden framing members can be as gay in color as you choose. The deck can be done in a bold floor enamel, and certainly the furniture and pillows indoors can introduce new colors. It is a play house, so color is called for. During off-seasons in the garden, this color will be the welcomed "permanent color from the paint can" that every garden needs to keep it fresh.

You may have noticed that there are no doors. In many areas mosquitoes and flies are problems. Where they are a garden nuisance, temporary "doors" are in order—most easily made by using ordinary tension screens (see July, pages 96-97), completely enclosing the openings with these breeze-inviting insect-stoppers.

You probably have already thought about the value of a garden house in keeping the furniture clean—and sittable—that condition which so seldom exists when garden furniture is left exposed to the sun and the rain. Now neither sun nor rain gets to the furniture. Imagine the pleasure of no more hardening or fading of covers. There won't even be much dust reaching them, for that matter, so you can look forward to a new look in things for years longer than ever before.

AS FOR service equipment, certainly you will want running water and a refrigerator, maybe minimum cooking equipment. A generous supply of electric outlets will be handy. If you have Hi-Fi indoors, you will want it wired out to the garden shelter. One of the new, low-cost portable TV sets would be a fine addition for those hot nights when no one wants to go indoors yet, but a favorite program is scheduled.

Underground sprinkler system

First lay tubing on the grass approximately as is needed to get complete coverage from the spray heads. The tubing is flexible—either rubber or plastic—so you will find this is easy. (Previously, underground sprinkler systems used rigid metal pipe.) Tubing will be buried only 4 or 5 inches deep, so it can be installed close to trees without cutting off any tree roots.

Until now, underground lawn sprinklers had always been considered luxury items. They could be installed only by a plumber. They had to be buried deep—and drained completely during freezing weather. The presence of many big rocks and extensive tree roots in the soil usually made installation of an underground lawn sprinkler completely impractical for the majority of homeowners.

This year nearly a dozen concerns offer underground sprinkler kits that overcome all these objections. You install the system yourself. (Some are completely assembled and need only to be buried a few inches deep; others are assembled on the job to fit your needs.) Instead of rigid piping, these kits use flexible rubber or plastic tubing. This flexibility removes the hard work from laying out a system, even makes by-passing boulders easy. There's enough "give" to the tubing and spray head so that neither will burst when freezing weather expands water into ice.

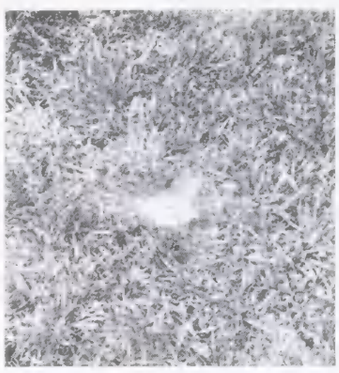
Operating an underground sprinkler system naturally calls for more water volume than needed to operate a single lawn sprinkler. Occasionally houses are built with only ½" piping from the water meter to the sillcock. This supplies only enough water to operate 4 or 5 spray heads—the usual number in one kit. But if you have the more usual ¾" piping, you can connect two kits together and operate all eight or ten spray heads at once. If you happen to be one of those homeowners who has a high water pressure as well as the ¾" piping, you can connect three kits together. For lawns needing an even bigger system, install the units in multiples of three, operating the multiples one at a time until the whole lawn has been watered. It can be done via an electric time clock so that the whole chore becomes entirely automatic in operation.

You may wonder how long the buried tubing will last. Nobody knows from experience, of course, but laboratory testing by the manufacturers indicate "indefinite" life if the tubing isn't nicked or cut by careless digging. There isn't anything to rust out, and there are no moving parts to wear out. (Several manufacturers use "pop-up" sprinkler heads that rise when the water comes on, fall back out of the lawnmower's way when the water is turned off, but there really is no wear involved in this simple movement.)

Some communities sensibly require that a check-valve be inserted between the main water supply and a buried sprinkler system. This prevents the remote possibility that contaminating dirt might be sucked back into the waterline. A few manufacturers supply the check-valve. Or you can buy one at the local hardware store. You will find that many plumbing supply dealers carry check-valves, too.

Underground sprinkler systems which we have tried and liked are listed on the opposite page.

now easy to install



Next test sprinkler pattern to be sure lawn is watered uniformly. Spray is finely divided so it isn't readily seen except close to spray head. (Lay pieces of newspaper in most distant areas to be sure water reaches them.) Some sprinklers spray in a square pattern, eliminating danger of wetting people on nearby paths.

To install, open narrow trench (left) deep enough so spray head is level with surface of the ground. Re-lay sod carefully (right) so there is no depression that allows lawnmower to dip down and hit spray head. Avoid setting head too low or spray will hit blades of grass and fall into a puddle (ruins uniformity of watering, eventually drowns out grass around sprinkler).

GETTING MARRIED AGAIN?

Most of us get married again every time we go to a wedding—or even hear about one. No matter whether it's in the family or out.

If you remember your own wedding, you had lots of questions—and you got as many answers as you had advisers. It was all pretty confusing. No need for this to happen to the girl you know who's getting married.

You can dispel most of the confusion by giving her the most welcome present ever—a bookful of answers from the nation's leading bridal authority, House Beautiful's GUIDE FOR THE BRIDE. From it she can learn all the basic principles of what she needs to know to plan her wedding, her home and her future.

Here's the kind of helpful information she can get from the Fall issue of GUIDE FOR THE BRIDE now on sale at newsstands.

FASHIONS: plain and fancy, glamorous and elegant; lace and satin and taffeta.
ETIQUETTE: how to plan the wedding.
FURNISHINGS: how to furnish her first home (Modern, Transitional, Traditional); how to decorate (starting with rug, or wallpaper, or fabrics); how to buy Furniture, Floor Coverings, Fabrics, Linens.
HONEYMOON TRAVEL: where to go and how to plan the most important trip in her life.

Get a copy for her today at your newsstand. Or send 50¢ direct to House Beautiful's GUIDE FOR THE BRIDE, 572 Madison Avenue, New York 22, New York.

mony such as occurs in a forest of trees, as opposed to the regimented order of a bedroom or living-room suite, of a room done in a single, museum-like period style. It has distinction and originality because it is distinctly the product of a free person, and no two free individuals are identical.

Awareness and free taste, freely put to use, reward those who employ them with freedom to choose from the fruits of other people's experience. They make it possible to appreciate touches of exceptional value, demonstrations of personal discoveries and triumphs in decorating and furnishing, because, having similar experiences of their own, they are prepared to recognize them in others when they fall upon them. This exchange of experience, this cross-fertilization of creative expression, occurs all the time in the world of art, as it can in the private world of our homes.

And so, by a course of patient but stimulating exposure, a person with free and aware taste eventually discovers for himself what it is that constitutes unity in variety—the harmony of co-operating elements, the balance of contrasting forces, the development of a theme to a climax. He is an artist, in other words.

Dominance. This is the second great principle of esthetics that is perceptible in such widely divergent works of art as a successful play, a painting or décor. It may be expressed in the importance of a central figure or in the rug, tapestry or fireplace of a room.

In the home of a person of free taste, it is, first of all, the person himself. It is his character, his choice of life, the idea and meaning of himself. His rooms reflect his deepest interests. It is he who dominates his rooms and is their finest ornament.

There is a secondary dominance. A favorite painting, rug or sofa, a preferred color or form might be the decoratively dominant element around which a room is unified and co-ordinated. Still reflecting the person who has freely chosen it, it will help focus a room around a central point and bring all the other elements more strongly together. It becomes the key to the décor, the point for the concentration of its special value and interest. And it will be as different in its manner of dominance as are the personalities of two equally dominant individuals—each striking, each distinct.

Equilibrium. The third and last of our principles helps counteract and control dominance. It insists on the importance of every part of a room. Every object in it must have some unique value and beauty of its own. Every detail in the handling of fabrics, in the accessorizing, in all aspects of homemaking, must show care and attention, and understanding.

Here we have come full circle, back to awareness with its emphasis on the importance of close attention to every aspect of every object. It is this faculty that will most contribute to the richness of our rooms, to filling them with things of significance and beauty, to making every corner count for itself without detracting from the unity of the whole.

Along with awareness, the practice of free taste will give us the courage of our impulse freely to select individually beautiful things of interest in themselves, but related in character (our own) to everything else in our rooms. For it is the beauty of free taste that all things we like are united by the same taste, when it is courageously and strongly manifested.

Awareness and free taste, then, if we may summarize, exercised with confidence and intelligence, lead to unity in variety, which gives wholeness and integrity to our homes, dominance, which gives them order and importance, and equilibrium, which offers richness, wealth of detail, interest and vitality.

And what is even more to the point, it leads to the same qualities in ourselves, which is, or should be, our point of departure.

What is more lasting than your wedding ring?

Please remember that nothing in the world lives so long and stays so eternally beautiful as your sterling silver.

That is why Reed & Barton designers always take particular pains to create patterns you will never grow tired of—patterns that will adapt easily to different decorating tastes. If you'll study the three sterling designs shown here, you will see that their charm and grace are as timeless as moonlight.

But to appreciate all the silversmithing art that goes into every Reed & Barton design, you should visit your silverware store and hold the pieces in your hands. Then, and only then, you'll be able to feel the impressive silver weight and the finely proportioned balance of each piece.

And you'll know why America's first families have been choosing Reed & Barton sterling silver for over a hundred years.

the things that money can't buy ... come into your home with a Steinway

THE CLASSIC HEPPLEWHITE VERTICAL reflects the grace and grandeur of the famous 18th Century English cabinetmaker. Your Steinway dealer can deliver one to your home for as small a DOWN PAYMENT as ... $157.00 Liberal terms. Slightly higher in the West.

A Steinway can help her overcome the emptiness of 'spectator' living. Keyboard experience leads your child safely past pushbutton ease and creates confidence in doing and getting done. Over a hundred years of experience and skill in piano building make today's Steinway unique in tone, action and styling. The Steinway serves so many years and depreciates so little, it is actually the least expensive of pianos —an investment of lasting value that will pay extra dividends in your children's future happiness.

STEINWAY

The world's great concert artists use the Steinway exclusively. The list includes the young American pianist GARY GRAFFMAN, pictured at right, and Casadesus, Shura Cherkassky, Elman, Jacob Lateiner, Moura Lympany, Mitropoulos, Artur Rubinstein, Franz Rupp, Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, Brooks Smith, Toscanini and many, many others . . . also nearly all of the nation's leading orchestras, radio and television stations.

Our Booklet, "How to Choose Your Piano," will be sent free if you write Steinway & Sons, Steinway Hall, 109 West 57th Street, New York.

don't hide your Tōwle under a bushel (use it!)

TOWLE'S FRENCH PROVINCIAL TOWLE'S ROSE SOLITAIRE TOWLE'S CANDLELIGHT TOWLE'S SOUTHWIND TOWLE'S MADEIRA

The New England craftsmen who create your Towle Sterling make it to be practical as well as beautiful. Do you know that your Towle is more durable—thanks to Towle's low-temperature annealing process? You probably have noticed the softer, warmer glow of your Towle Sterling. This prized "patina" is an exclusive Towle process and is further enhanced by your regular use. There are many Towle Touches...for beauty and convenience. Enjoy them all by using your Towle daily. (If you're not a Towle owner—note that Towle costs no more than other fine sterling. Six piece place settings begin at $29.75.)

Two practical Towle Touches on fork tines make washing, cleaning easier. (A). A tiny notch between tines on most Towle forks reduces surface of that hard-to-clean area at tine base. (B). Extra hand polishing inside of tines creates ultra-smooth surface to which food can't cling.

(CUTAWAY OF TOWLE'S OLD MASTER KNIFE HANDLE)

Another Towle Touch that makes your Towle Sterling more usable. Towle uses solid metal (not cement or rosin) to seal knife blade to handle permanently, the best way to insure you against loose blades, rattles in the handle. And, of course, Towle knives are watertight, airtight, sanitary.

The Tōwle Touch

...means sterling craftsmanship at its best...a direct heritage of silversmithing that dates from 1690. The Towle Silversmiths, Newburyport, Massachusetts.

Your child will love music— if you let him

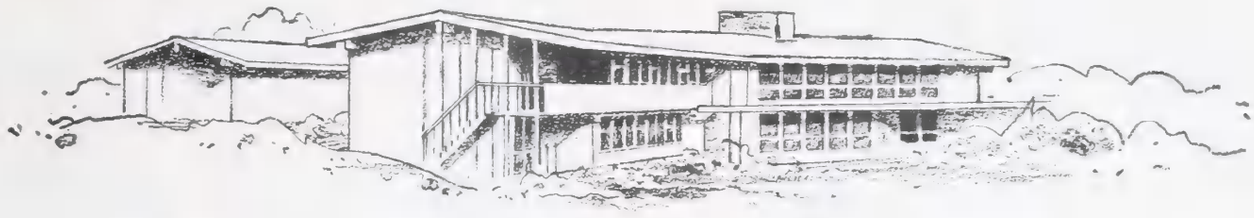
By RICHARD WILLIAMS

All children are born with a love of pleasant sounds. The delight in rhythm and melody is an instinct as rooted in the human being as is the admiration for bright color or the appetite for sweets. The sweet ear is as natural in a child as the sweet tooth. Only a tone-deaf youngster is indifferent. And tone deafness occurs very, very rarely. Indeed, it is a rarer affliction than color blindness.

It is not difficult, then, for the love of good music to develop in a young child. The question is, how should parents go about nurturing such a love? Since all music is rooted in song and all melodies, however lordly or sophisticated, trace their ancestry to the chant, a child's first experience with music should probably come from the mother who sings. As Alexander Pope put it, "What will a child learn sooner than a song?".

But what should the mother sing? The choice is not too important, the repertoire not decisive. It is the singing and not the song which matters, though one would of course choose the easiest and the shortest of the folk songs—those songs which deal with simple subjects and experiences.



A treasury of these miniatures has been gathered over the centuries; the songs in it comprise all moods and shades of moods. They are of varied substance: vegetable, animal and mineral. They create a child's world made of snowflakes or the little star, the mushroom in the wood, the baby who goes rockabye on the treetop or the curious gray goose. You need only help yourself.

Let the mother keep silent, let her refrain from singing because she does not know any songs or she thinks she hasn't a good voice or she believes that she cannot sing correctly—or because she is just plain embarrassed—and she will deprive her child of an early and easy acquaintance with music.

An alienation will have begun. Along with this, a mother may also discourage her offspring without meaning to by banning the singing of songs which the child has picked up in the park or heard on the street or in kindergarten. She may point out to John that he is singing the wrong melody or that he is not able to carry a tune precisely. She may correct his singing "grammar." She may also frown on the new words which children like to substitute for the traditional words. (I know

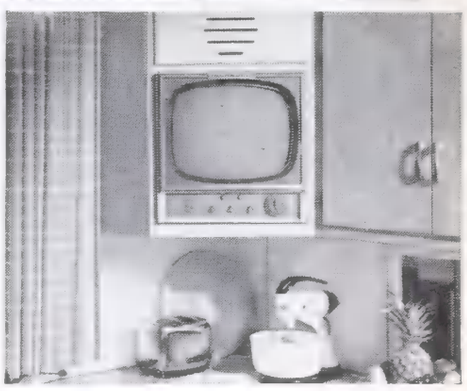
Building Entertainment Into Modern Living

The famous "House of Ideas", in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan, is a typical example of the trend in modern home design. This beautiful home is functional in every respect, to enrich the experience of living.

It is only natural that television and high fidelity reproduction of music have been incorporated in the plans for this gracious home, for these wonderful inventions have become integral parts of modern life.

Magnavox is proud to have been selected to provide the instruments for important cultural and entertainment purposes in the "House of Ideas." This installation is an example of how Magnavox can help you to increase the enjoyment of your own home.



The large Activities Room, in the basement, has a Magnavox high fidelity radio-phonograph as well as a Magnavox speaker system which is "fed" by the high-fidelity component installation upstairs. A Magnavox television set provides additional enjoyment.

The Music Wall in the "House of Ideas" separates the living-room from the library, and incorporates a Magnavox custom high fidelity system and television installation that serves both rooms. Music from the Magnavox DeLuxe Imperial High Fidelity component system is "piped" to all areas of the house, so that it may be enjoyed in any room. The Magnavox 21″ TV, behind door panels, turns completely around on a swivel base.

To make your own home life more enjoyable, get the finest in television, high fidelity systems and radio-phonographs at your nearest Magnavox dealer's. His name is listed under "Magnavox" in the Television section of your classified phone book.

THE KITCHEN PRAYER

Lord of all pots and pans and things, since I've not time to be A saint by doing lovely things or watching late with Thee
Or dreaming in the dawn light or storming
Heaven's gates
Make me a saint by getting meals and washing up the plates.
Although I must have Martha's hands, I have a Mary mind
And when I black the boots and shoes,
Thy sandals, Lord, I find.
I think of how they trod the earth, what time I scrub the floor Accept this meditation Lord, I haven't time for more.
Warm all the kitchen with Thy love, and light it with Thy peace
Forgive me all my worrying and make my grumbling cease.
Thou who didst love to give men food, in room or by the sea
Accept this service that I do, I do it unto Thee.

Little or no remodeling necessary. The new G-E Wall Refrigerator-Freezer can be installed with little or no remodeling in most homes. The cabinet is mounted securely to a sturdy, 5-foot "picture-hook" mounting bracket which is screwed to the wall. It can be moved and rehung in another location, if and when desired.

Magnificent, new G-E Wall Refrigerator-Freezer

First of all, brush aside conventional ideas on refrigerators. This new refrigerator-freezer that hangs from the wall is a completely new and advanced concept of modern living. Truly, it is the most convenient and magnificent refrigerator-freezer ever produced!

TO YOU, the advantages of this utterly new G-E Wall Refrigerator-Freezer are obvious: there's no need to bend or stoop for foods because everything can be seen at a glance. The new G-E Wall Refrigerator-Freezer is luxuriously convenient in other ways, too. It can be installed directly above a work counter to provide extra counter surface. And, there's room in the kitchen for extra base cabinets because this compact new appliance occupies no floor space.

All three doors are equipped with famous alnico magnets that grip the doors shut . . . no projecting handles.

The new G-E Wall Refrigerator-Freezer is available in your choice of six Mix-or-Match colors including white. Only a limited number of G-E Wall Refrigerator-Freezers are now being produced. See your G-E dealer, or send the coupon below. General Electric Company, Appliance Park, Louisville 1, Kentucky.

This de luxe refrigerator-freezer has 10.7 cubic feet of storage room—8.7 cubic feet for fresh foods and 2 cubic feet for frozen foods. It is 5 feet 4 inches long, 3 feet 3½ inches high and 17½ inches deep. 1. Long-lasting baked enamel with a wide band of textured aluminum. 2. All 3 doors are kept shut by famous alnico magnets. No handles, no catches. 3. Separate vegetable and fruit compartments have transparent, sliding doors. 4. Top shelf provides space for tall bottles. Shelves are adjustable to various levels. 5. Separate compartments inside door for butter, egg rack; and door shelves for small jars and cans. 6. Zero-degree food freezer has room for up to 83 packages of frozen foods. 7. Four new-style Mini-Cube® ice trays. 8. Frozen fruit juice storage rack. 9. Dependable, whisper-quiet sealed-in G-E refrigeration unit is built into the refrigerator. No need to install it separately.

AMAZING NEW
UNDER-SHELF OPENER

No jar top, no bottle top, from the smallest to the largest, can stay sealed when gripped by the notched edges of the Under-Shelf Opener. Constructed of heavy gauge steel, this boon to housewives can be permanently affixed in any handy place, under shelf, or cupboard. Simply slide jar or bottle down the notched edge until the cap fits snugly, and turn without effort. Cap loosens instantly. Also ideal for camp trailers, and boats. An ideal gift $1. postpaid

COLTEN'S

1351 BEACON ST., BROOKLINE 46, MASS.

Spread Around the World

YES, it's a fact that while Colten's is located in Greater Boston, (Brookline, Boston and Wellesley) . . . you are apt to find Colten bedspread ensembles in Paris or Rome, Australia or South Africa. We know, because in the past year our customers have shipped them there and to scores of other faraway places. It all started not so long ago, when we decided to style our bedspreads with the "Couture Look." Since then, homemakers the world over have bought over a million dollars worth of our ensembles.

Colten's carry in stock, ready for immediate delivery . . . over 1,000 different ensemble pieces, all moderately priced. And if you require special sizes, we can make our bedspread ensembles or draperies . . . any width . . . any length . . . and ship them to you within one to three weeks after your order arrives. For good taste, good quality, good price . . . try Colten's. Your home will show the difference.

Beautiful Custom Made Drapes

approx. $1.50 a yard

Now—from Carabao alone—you can get custom made drapes, tailored with all the fine quality features of decorator-made draperies. Yet you pay less than you would for ordinary ready-mades.

Carabao drapes are custom made to your exact width and length measurements

Fabric is "tabled" for precision cutting so your drapes will always hang perfectly

French pleated by hand. We use plastic crinoline to assure perfect headings

Weights are sewn in the full 3-inch hems to give hanging perfection

In joining widths of fabric, we cut off the selvages and seam the fabric with an overlock stitch so seam cannot pucker

Seams are positioned in the pleats so they are completely invisible

Remember—only Carabao gives you these custom-tailored features, plus an unequaled selection of fine quality fabrics.

Choose from 50 colors in six exclusive fabrics

Glass adds beauty to indoor walls, too. This lovely mirror reflects the striking decorative motif of the room. It's made of L·O·F Parallel-O-Plate Glass... twin-ground to make it the most distortion-free plate glass ever made in America.

Architects: Palmquist & Wright, Detroit. Designer: Richard B. Pollman, Detroit.

To fully enjoy your window walls . . .

you need this permanent insulation

It's wonderful how window walls add enjoyment to living. Views. Color. Daylight. Spaciousness.

But only with insulating glass — Thermopane® — can you enjoy window walls to the fullest all the year 'round. In winter you'll be more comfortable near these windows and you will save money on fuel. In summer Thermopane keeps out heat and helps your air-conditioning do a better, more economical job. And Thermopane keeps your home quieter, because it muffles outside noise.

The best part of it is you get these benefits without having to bother with storm sash. That's because Thermopane insulating glass is built right into your windows . . . stays there permanently.

Your L·O·F Glass Distributor or Dealer can tell you all about it. He's listed under "Glass" in the yellow pages of your phone book. And, for our free Thermopane book, write to Dept. 195, Libbey·Owens·Ford Glass Co., 608 Madison Ave., Toledo 3, Ohio.

SPODE BUTTER CHIPS come in a dozen well-known patterns: Pink Tower, Blue Tower, Pink Camilla, Blue Camilla, Old Salem, Spode Byron, Buttercup, Lady Anne, Rosebud Chintz, Green Basket, Rosalie, or Mayflower. 3" wide, they're practical and pretty substitutes for table-crowding butter plates. $1 each ppd. Hunterdon House, 148 Main St., Flemington, New Jersey.

LARIAT TIE. In the Southwest, this is the tie you see everywhere, some, with massive turquoises and three-figure price tags. But this is our favorite. It's made of braided plastic that looks exactly like leather but is tougher, and the sliding disc is a sterling circle with 3 cutout initials. Wonderful with sports shirts. $7.95 incl. tax. Ppd. Northmore's, Box 66, Park Ridge, Illinois.

FALLING LEAVES in the Fall of the year are the bane of a proud gardener's existence. This cart basket and grate are the marvelous answer to the problem. The basket hooks easily onto any garden cart, tripling its capacity and folds flat for storage. The grate also fits easily and may be used to burn refuse in the cart. Basket and grate, $9.95 ppd. (cart shown, not incl.) Threshold House, Box 277, Winnetka, Ill.

The unusual, yet truly realistic Christmas gift for you and your discriminating friends.

FLUFF and FROSTY Snowman may be hung on your home or apartment door, with your backing of evergreens. May be used over fireplace or on mirror. Individually designed. Original! New! Prepaid $3.95 per couple, send check or money order.

NATURAL CANASTA. In the tongue of its craftsmen, "canasta" means basket—and we think it is a wonderfully decorative catch-all for magazines, knitting, fruit. Or fill it with tropical plants or gay flowers. Of split bamboo on a wrought-iron stand with removable legs, it's 15″ high and the basket measures 20″ in diameter. $5.95 ppd. Salvador-Craft Co., Box 1426, South Miami, Fla.

DAVY'S FULL OF SURPRISES. The Davy Crockett Surprise Ball is a miniature head of the Great Man, complete with coonskin cap. He's made of 72 yards of crepe paper which, when unwound by a little Davy-doter, reveal 12 different surprises. Wouldn't these be wonderful birthday party favors? $1 each. Postpaid. The Added Touch, Wynnewood, Pennsylvania.

SLENDERIZE HEAVY LEGS by following the tested and proven method outlined in this paper-bound book. Set aside just 15 minutes a day and trim down bulging hips and knees, flabby thighs, heavy calves and ankles. A registered physiotherapist, Henry Milchstein, gives you step-by-step instructions. $1.98 ppd. Modern Methods, Dept. HB-2, 296 Broadway, New York 7.

"BAKA TATA" is our favorite utensil for several reasons. First, even calorie-counters may have baked potatoes! Second, this aluminum sheet has aluminum prongs that spear potatoes and cook them evenly—by radiating heat in their centers while their outsides cook. Cuts baking time in half! Lifter-handle to take sheet from oven incl. $3.40 ppd. Gourmet Mart, 8995 Biscayne Blvd., Miami Shores, Fla.

TOTE-A-PUP makes your dog top man in the neighborhood! Because now he drives in style in his very own seat. Steel wire construction, aluminum enamel-finished, basket has a foam rubber pad covered in removable, washable, bright denim! 18″ long, 13¼″ wide, 7¾″ deep, it folds flat when not in use. $7.98 ppd. The Tote-A-Bite Co., 114 N. Church St., Cynthiana, Ky.

HE'S A SOFTY who will melt the heart of any young lass from 2 to 22 and who will be equally at home in the nursery or in the dormitory. His velvety soft coat is brown and white and he has a shaggy white mane and a long white tail. The bridle and saddle are green plastic. A most enchanting equine! $3.95 ppd. from "little joe" Wiesenfeld, 112 W. North Ave., Baltimore, Md.

CRAZY FACES are Mr. and Mrs. eyeglass cases of straw cloth with felt appliqué features. Each one is silk lined and has a gold braid loop on the back for slipping through a belt. These are too ludicrous and fun to be relegated to a pocket or purse! $1.50 each, $2.95 pair, ppd. Welcome House, 1133 Broadway, New York.

THESE HOLD A CANDLE in their centers and darling arrangements of tiny flowers in their three footed cornucopias. The effect is one of pure enchantment. And for candlelight dining and dreaming we've never seen their equal! Of glazed white pottery, they are imported pieces, each standing about 4" high. $2.95 the pair, ppd. Edward H. Ziff, 1534-A Merchandise Mart, Chicago 54, Ill.

ANTIQUES

takes you to Old STURBRIDGE Village in the September issue

This collector's item

FREE with 8 months subscription for only $4

THE September issue of ANTIQUES is entirely devoted to this re-created New England village—complete with mills, houses, tavern, meeting houses, country store . . . over thirty buildings.

A living museum of early rural life

Articles written by experts discuss and illustrate each of the major collections, brought together at Sturbridge—folk art, woodenware, New England pottery, textiles, and country furniture. Particularly interesting are the handsome clocks of the Willard school and the metalwork of the rural blacksmith, tinker, and handyman. The theme of the issue, as of the Village itself, is the impression of rooms lived in and objects lived with in the everyday life of the early 1800's.

Start your subscription today and receive this outstanding September issue plus the next eight months of ANTIQUES. You get nine magazines—worth $6.75 newsstand price—for only $4.

As a subscriber you will discover and explore the wonderful world of great craftsmanship—antique furniture, silver, pottery, paintings, glass, old houses. Whatever your interests may be, we urge you to take advantage of this unusual offer.

You save $2.75 when you fill out this coupon today!

KEEPS DUST OFF GARMENTS!

Transparent "Closet-Coverette" Protects Like Garment Bag Yet Clothes Are Easy To Get At

No more whisk-brooming unsightly "shoulder dust" off garments. Now you can keep clothes clean while they hang in the closet—and without cramming them into clumsy hard-to-manage garment bags. "Coverette" simply drops over closet rod, drapes over garments—and you never have to remove it. Heavy, glass-clear plastic keeps dust, soot and lint off your clothes—lets you see all the garments at a glance. It's easy to hang or remove things in a jiffy through a handy center vent—without crushing other garments. No zippers to snag clothes. Eliminates need for individual shoulder covers; cuts cleaning and pressing bills, too. In 4 sizes to hold 6 to 18 garments; for 18" rod—$1; 24"—$1.25; 30"—$1.50; 36"—$1.75. Add 15¢ for postage. (Combine sizes for rods over 36" wide.) No C.O.D.'s Not sold in stores. Money-back guarantee. Order today for every closet.

a little boy who sings "Oh! Susanna" with the words, "I come from Alabama with my Band-Aid on my knee.") Any of these corrections will almost inevitably dry up John's natural enthusiasm.

The proper way for music to enter a young child's life is by the communal door, the same door through which other experiences in beauty enter. Music should be introduced as a matter of course; the ways and means are secondary to the introduction itself. From the very earliest, a child should be encouraged to sing. Whether or not he can carry the tune is no indication of his musical capacity. Many musical people, and surely many who enjoy music, are unable to hum a melody correctly. Sing to him, then, as best you can—and let him sing, as best he likes. Get a collection of songs and teach your child the words.

Children's records are a useful adjunct to getting acquainted with music. However, they are an adjunct only and cannot or should not take the place of music person to person. With the record industry as active as it is, it is to be expected that a very wide choice of children's records is available. By no means are all of them good. The poor ones (I'm speaking of musical records) are either so tricked up with stories and explanations that the music becomes quite secondary, or they are condescending to a degree that no self-respecting modern American child will accept.

The age group for which the record is destined is usually printed on the cover, but it has been my experience that these estimates have been made for mightily precocious children. You may safely add a year or two. In general, I believe the simplest musical records will not be enjoyed by a child younger than four or five. At that age, "Tubby the Tuba" will be a favorite. A year or two later you might try the attractive set Golden Records, "Instruments the Orchestra," in which each strument is represented by so and music, all very well produc by Mitch Miller. Personally, I thi that if it is to be a musical rec it should be music; I am not favor of the combination of nar tive and music as in "Let's Lis to Haydn" or "Chopin: Story a Music."

On the other hand, there is no ing like Prokofiev's "Peter and t Wolf" for a child of seven or eig That is a combination of story a music, but it happens to have be written by a genius who was as su cessful in this attempt just once Lewis Carroll was with his Ali

AT SEVEN or eight, the child oug to be ready for adult music. M sic is particularly free of the bou daries of age. It is possible to lo the same piece of music as an adu that we liked as a child in spi of all the changes of taste we u dergo. Unlike a fairy tale whi we outgrow, music—indefinite, fr and wholly imaginative as it is remains impervious to the passi of the years. Certainly, we woul choose simple music for a chil But it may not be such a bad ide to let him hear the music you lik so that you may transfer your ow enthusiasm to him.

It is never safe to predict chi dren's tastes. A child might lik what you would judge to be difficu music and dislike easy music. M own boy liked Wagner and Str vinsky before he cared much abou Mozart. It is probable that you child will like strongly rhythmi music, stuff that is full of bounc and dramatic music, composition which are colorful, strong, noisy

Whatever the selections, the ought to be short. A child's spa of concentration is short. Listenin ought to be quite informal and in deed casual. Let the youngste stamp and stride around, play wit the toys, dance and bounce up an down. As to children's concerts— well, children's concerts are goo if your child is ready for them.

A certain amount of formalit must be observed in the conce hall and a little decorum kep Therefore it is better to start t late than too early. We took ou boy to the opera much too earl Hänsel and Gretel was bewilderin rather than bewitching. Much late having arrived at the year of di cretion of sixteen, he returned f

La Bohème and liked it very much.

It is desirable that children learn to play simple instruments before they tackle the piano or the violin. A number of schools now give children the opportunity to play on such instruments as the recorder, the marimba or the flageolet. Such instruments can be played without acquiring any technical skill and they can be played in group activity. They form an introduction to the study of the piano which, other things being equal, most children ought to learn.

But whether it be the piano or the violin or the saxophone, we ought not to fool ourselves or our child. Learning to play a musical instrument requires work. Even a small amount of skill cannot be attained by "progressive" shortcuts. On the other hand, learning to play should not be and need not be tantamount in unpleasantness to a visit to the dentist.

What are parents to do? If you force your child to practice, he may learn to detest the instrument and perhaps music altogether. If he does not practice and consequently forgoes his piano lessons, he may regret it later.

It is of course important for you to choose the right teacher for your child, one who can set up a sympathetic bond and a common ground of understanding between himself and his pupil. The method of teaching is perhaps unimportant, but the teacher is important. A teacher should certainly know how to make music lessons interesting and how to make the interminable practice sessions bearable.

BUT you must not hide from the child the fact that practicing entails work. Present the truth: "You will get a great deal of fun out of music, I promise you, but you must realize that you have to practice. I am going to help you and see that you do it regularly."

All this sounds severer than it is probably going to turn out to be. Many children love music lessons from the very beginning—with occasional lapses when they become enraptured by stamp collecting or basketball—and are quite glad to do the necessary work. Still, you must expect to run into some rough weather. You may even expect a tear or two. The little grief will be forgotten. What will last is the great joy of being able to play music. For that ability, be it ever so amateurish, no substitute exists.

Finally, a word about the development of taste. The love for the good in music cannot be forced or artificially administered. It can be nurtured only by unaffected and voluntary acquaintance with good music. One can lead a child to beauty—but one cannot make him hear it.

Young people today, or young people of any day, naturally take to the music of the day. In our day such music happens to be pop songs and jazz. Good, bad or awful, this music is part of our life. It would be the greatest possible mistake to set up barriers against songs which leap at you from the jukebox. You would then lend them the charm of forbidden fruit. Out of sheer bravado, if nothing else, your child will want to taste them.

I KNEW a young German girl, Liesl, who was carefully nurtured on the traditional folk songs of Germany. Then her family moved over here and the first thing Liesl did was to fall in love with Eddie Fisher and his pop ballads. It was a case of "Pop Goes the Liesl." But it didn't do her any harm!

No, light music must go along with better music. Liesl's taste can be developed only by making it easy for her to walk on any road she chooses. She must do her own walking. If her parents enjoy music, if there is music in the home, if the parents aren't too obviously eager in guiding her to better music, then one can almost predict the results.

What about this business of being over eager? While your own indifference to music may prove to be an effective way of making your child indifferent, over eagerness is just as bad. Press music on the child with nervous and self-conscious zeal, like a host with unwanted food, and he will protest. The natural rebelliousness that lurks within the human being will come to the surface. Music doesn't have to be over-offered nor does it need to be wrapped in the cotton wool of culture and presented as if it were a fragile toy, not to be roughly handled. Music can be introduced simply and, so to speak, "unculturally." With such a restrained introduction, the chances are good that your child will learn to love music. The chances are good that you yourself will learn to love music more, that your own enthusiasm as a guide will become newly fresh and strong, aided by the morning joy of the traveler who hasn't been there before.

A NEW fashion in lighting...

A NEW KIND OF LIGHTING

From Lightolier's designing hand comes South Pacific . . . new in form, new in function. The fashion: exquisite silhouettes like the three cones above, the long oval to the right, the boldly proportioned wall lamp above right. The materials: grass cloth, shimmering brass, aspenslat, pleated plastic diffusers. The scale: big, dramatic, exciting.
And . . . a new piano wire and counterweight system raises for a flood of light, lowers for an intimate pool. Glare-free lighting . . . warm, golden, inviting. See all the Lightoliers in our showrooms and at the authorized distributors listed to the left. They cost lots less than you think! Write today to Box 368. Dept. DECORATOR'S DIARY

What goes on behind the decorating scenes from a typical decorator's notes on the new and better things now on the market

A minstrel with his lute, a swain with his lady, a turreted castle, a barking dog, a hunter toting home his quarry, a pecking hen, a leaping rabbit, a thousand flowers. That is a partial listing of the motifs in "Medieval," the United Wallpaper pattern we used in Lesley Spencer's bedroom. Lesley is nine and rather a nonconformist in this television age. She likes to read, for one thing. For another, she's a romanticist. Loves to pour over all the flora and fauna on the wall and make up stories about them. The designs are so many and so close, it doesn't matter if her fingers are a little smudgy. We called her in for consultation on the color and she picked the version with two shades of green on white. That suited me fine because it gave us a chance to keep the whole room young and fresh looking and still relatively resistant to wear and smear. Bedspreads are washable green corduroy. Curtains are white Orlon. Chests are painted medium green except for the drawer fronts which are white. Reviving the white is Lesley's Saturday job. Problem is not in getting her to do it, says her mother, but in getting her to do it with less than a whole bottle of wax cleaner. She likes the smell.

"Medieval" wallpaper

How's this for elegance: polished brass inlays in white vinyl floor—or a black floor, or a floor in any color that hard surface floor coverings come in? Simon Manges & Son are responsible for this shining idea. They have a whole collection of little brass inserts—stars, diamonds, squares, fleurs-de-lis, octagons—as well as two widths of straight stripping for borders or crisscross patterns. Not very expensive either. Range from 40

You can always enjoy
Healthfully Clean and Comfortable Air in Your Home with Airtemp . . . by Chrysler

Seldom, if ever, is the air around us just right for health and comfort. It's either too hot or too cold, too moist or too dry. And it's frequently polluted by dirt, dust, pollen and germs.

Outdoors, there's nothing we can do about this. But inside, where most of our life is spent, we can do something about the air we breathe. Airtemp Year 'Round Air Conditioning filters the air—maintains the temperature we wish—controls humidity. We feel better and live in a cleaner home in this thrilling New Dimension of Modern Living.

There are three ways to graduate to healthier, more comfortable living . . . and at far less cost than you might think:

1. Replacing an old, worn-out furnace, the Airtemp "Spacesaver" provides heating plus cooling in even less floor space.
2. When Airtemp is built into a home expressly designed for year 'round air conditioning, you may save enough on construction to pay most of the difference in cost between heating alone and heating plus cooling for summer.
3. Airtemp cooling can be easily added to almost any forced air furnace without additional ductwork. Waterless cooling (uses only air and electricity) in places where water is scarce.

Call your Airtemp Dealer (he's in the Yellow Pages) for book of plans containing 50 "Air Conditioned Homes for New Dimension Living." Or send 25¢ for your copy to Airtemp Division of Chrysler, Dept. HB, Dayton 1, Ohio.

Filtered from the air you breathe!

Analysis of this material filtered out of the air in a large Midwestern city revealed the following composition: Particles of rubber tires, cinders, lint, pollen—40%; soot—30%; sand and grit—20%; bacteria—10%. Here's what Airtemp Air Conditioning will keep out of the air in your home!

BALDWIN IS THE OFFICIAL PIANO OF THE

SAN FRANCISCO OPERA

America is on the move toward greater music...for more people...in cities, suburbs...towns, villages. What yesterday was "culture" for the few, today is a spontaneous manifestation of the American way of life... for all.
The makers of the Baldwin Grand Piano take pride in the growing roster of civic musical organizations which have made Baldwin their official piano. And salute the great musical artists who prefer, play upon and praise Baldwin as the piano of their choice.

Of course it's Baldwin—that builds the Acrosonic—today's finest small piano.

cents to a few dollars each. Just the kind of thing that keeps me awake nights concocting designs from the same basic set of motifs. One thing I know: They will help no end in designing dining room floors that are beautiful as can be and a cinch to de-crumb.

Still congratulating myself on my latest find in disappearing beds, though I suppose I ought to be congratulating the Simmons Company who had the wits to make it. "Hi-Riser" is the name, and they tell me it's been around a few years, but I didn't run into it until I got involved in Mimi Tucker's hassle with her mother over the matter of a second bed. What was the use of living, Mimi asked with true 12-year-old pathos, if she couldn't invite her best friend to stay overnight? Mrs. Tucker did not wish to seem inhospitable, but two beds would crowd Mimi's room badly. Cheerfully, I jumped into the fray—but that was before I reflected that a convertible sofa would be considerably off key in Mimi's bedroom, and a double-decker bed would be an insult to her advancing years. "Hi-Riser," however, suited everybody fine. The top is a simple studio-type couch with a firm innerspring mattress on a flat spring. Under it is a similar couch, a kind of trundle bed on big casters that glides quietly under one side of the top and stays there. When you want to use it you pull it out, give one yank to the heavy metal lever at the foot, and behold, the whole thing rises up to regular bed height. Nicest part about it is that the second bed is wholly disconnected from the first. Can set them up as twins if you want, or move the trundle clear across the room. "Pretty casual," was Mimi's brother Tom's comment when he witnessed a demonstration. Had to have it explained to me that "casual" is the 1955 synonym for "nifty."

Been haunted for half a lifetime by the memory of those fake Persian rugs that used to darken so many houses when I was very young. Made me decidedly shy of any design whatsoever that had even a touch of East-of-the Mediterranean flavor. Getting over it, though. Last winter I was surprised to find myself inwardly oohing and ahing over the sets in Kismet. Then I discovered "Sinbad," and knew my old phobia of the Near East was definitely on the wane. Was thumbing through the racks at Ramsona Fabrics, Ltd., when I turned him up—the old navigator sailing on an ocean of pink and blue flowers with green leaves on off-white linen.

The pink was really a deep rose and the blue, a deep blue. But I wrote "pink and blue" in my book because I was so entranced to see those two pastels paired off without displaying the slightest resemblance to a nursery or a candy box. Here, I reflected, is just the right amount of tempered whimsey to liven up a room full of very somber, very proper, mahogany antiques. It was, too. Used "Sinbad" last month for the draperies in Mrs. Livingston's dining room. Nothing will ever make that room feel informal. But who can look at Sinbad grimly clutching his oar and not relax into a smile?

My First Fifty Feet of Film

House Beautiful's 16mm movie editor confesses:

"Movie cameras always terrified me until I shot my first roll of film.

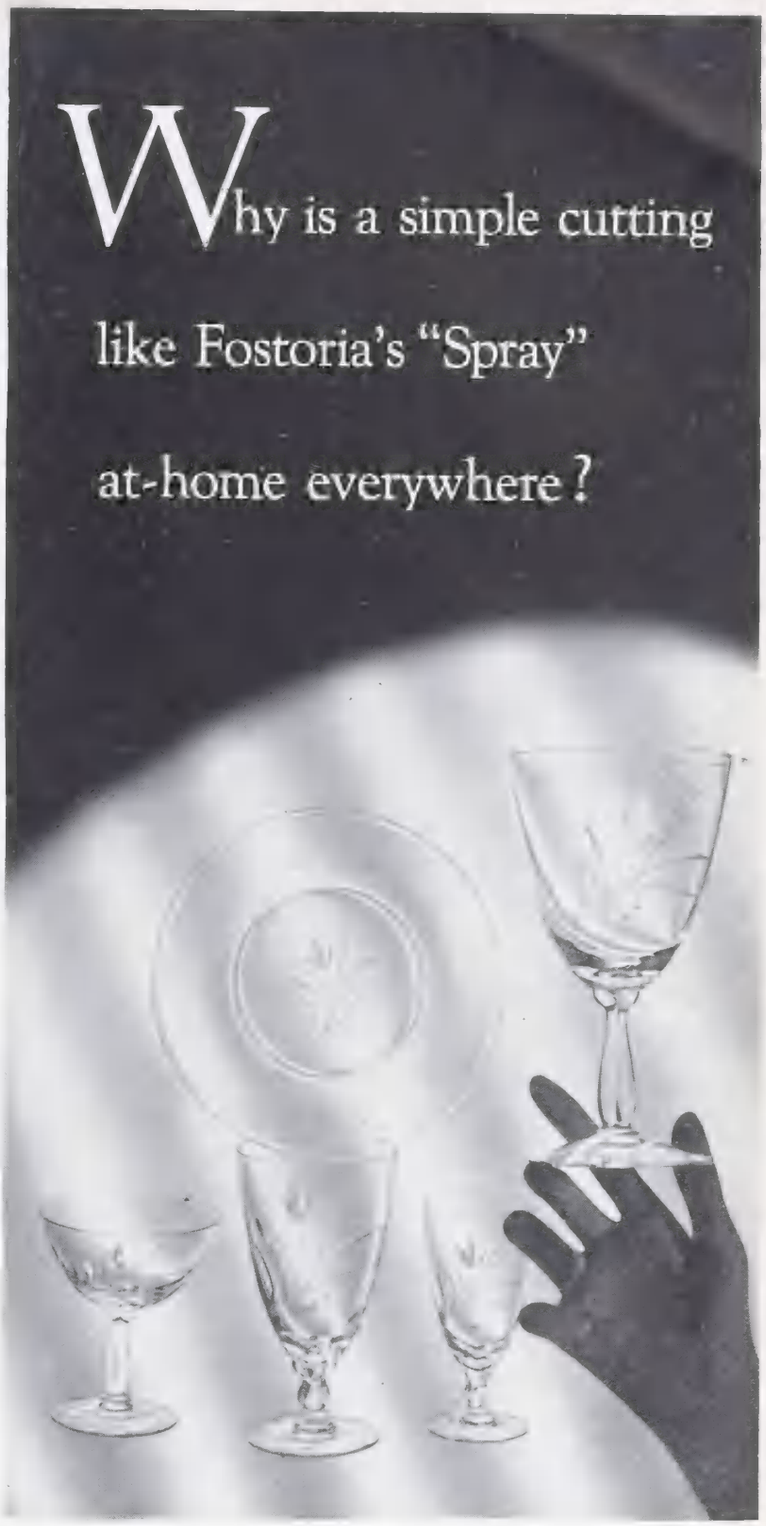
Now I'm an amateur for life."

By CECILE STARR

If Queen Elizabeth can do it, so can I! This was my inspiration when I first decided to try my luck at making home movies.

I needed inspiration. After all, it's one thing to write critically about films after they are artistically finished and in the can. But operating a movie camera and creating a film from beginning to end, a film you wouldn't be ashamed to have others see—that's quite a different matter.

It may have been the pictures of Elizabeth II taking movies of her round-the-Commonwealth tour that first got me interested. Wherever she went, the camera went too. I was impressed to learn that when official engagements prevented Elizabeth from using her camera, she would give it to a member of her entourage to record the scene for her. I was also impressed to learn that movie-making has been a long-time hobby of both Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh. They generally have one or more cameras with them on a holiday or at other relaxation times. You and I will never see any of those movies, for they are shown only to members of the Royal Family. For that matter, it's quite unlikely that you'll ever see any of my movies. But I'd like to tell you about my first experience with a movie camera.



As I say, at first I was relatively indifferent to the idea of making my own movies. I enjoyed using my still camera and that was quite enough. Then a friend asked if I would like to have a 16mm movie camera, and the idea was tempting. I said yes, with pleasure. I got it two days before my birthday—and by that time I really couldn't wait to see it.

It was beautiful—a 16mm magazine-load Ciné-Kodak, with a handsome leather carrying case, and two fifty-foot rolls of film.

But, frankly, I was scared of it. What would I do if my films were so terrible that I couldn't show them even to my closest friends? What would I do if they wobbled worse than any of which I had written such devastating criticisms? What would I do, heaven help me, if everything went wrong and the film came out totally blank?

With these fears floating around in my head, it was hard to get started. But I managed somehow, and the results were gratifying enough to make me write them down in detail. If you're just starting out on your own movie-making hobby, my experiences and suggestions may give you an idea or two on how or how not to do it.

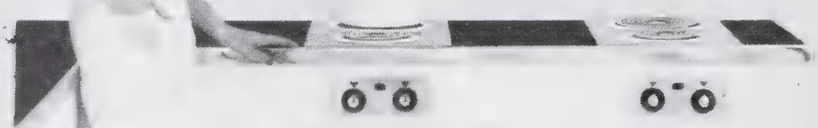
FIRST, I read the instruction booklet that came with the camera. It was simple to follow and easy to compare the photographic illustrations with the actual parts of the camera at hand. On the first fine Sunday, I went out visiting friends in the country and took my camera with me. But no film. This wasn't an oversight—I did it intentionally. The camera went along just for practice. I'd heard that it takes a while to get used to the "feel" of a camera, if you've never used one before.

It was a lovely summer day at the beach. I remember. Every time I saw what looked like a good shot, I tried to get it as earnestly as if my camera had been loaded with film. I set the lens opening and the focus, using the guide card that came with the camera. As I wound the camera motor and "shot," I discovered that the noise of the camera in action took me by surprise at first and made me jump. I think it was a good thing that I spent the first day getting used to it.



A few days later, I was visiting friends in Washington. The household was a large one that included a number of children and dogs, all potentially excellent subjects for my first bit of movie-making. I didn't want the grownups to see me at work with my brand-new camera, so the next morning I sneaked into the back yard with the two youngest children (blond twin girls, eleven years old) and the two new pups (black-as-ink spaniels about six weeks old). With only one fifty-foot roll of Kodachrome, I knew I had to choose my shots carefully. Again I tried a number of practice shots. Keeping up with my subjects, especially the four-footed ones, was a bit of a race. I'd seen enough amateur movies to know that the one thing to avoid above all else was the frantic pan, the blurred swing of the camera.

But what was I to do? Every time the children put the puppies down on the lawn, and I carefully adjusted the lens barrels for distance and lighting, off they would scamper in two directions at once, and at lightning speed.

PATIENCE helps. Fortunately the kids were amused and interested. Without their help I never could have managed. It was all I could do to keep up with the camera.

The morning was clear and sunny, so I realized that I didn't have to worry about readjusting the lens opening, as long as I stayed out of the shade and kept my back to the sun. Estimating the distance of the shots (as yet untaken) was more difficult for me, because I've never had a clear sense of foot and inch measurements. I tried to recall familiar objects and compare the measurements mentally: My bed is six feet long. My living room is fourteen feet wide. (I later discovered that these makeshift approximations guided me well.)

We solved the puppy problem when I discovered that the best way to keep up with them was to leave them alone. I had the two girls flop down on the ground. I took aim, and sure enough the puppies came a-running. They licked the girls' faces and pawed at their skirts. There was no problem about keeping them in frame. It seemed a perfect shot. And thus it was that I, on my knees in the grass, camera at my eye, elbow on knee to help hold arm steady, took my first movie shot.

One thing led to another, and we discovered that one of the puppies (Cindy) had a special love for one of the girl's bedroom slippers. The slippers were of a most fortunate bright red leather, with an inner lining of white fur—good material for a close-up of Cindy chewing at Barbara's slipper.

Meanwhile, Ann and her pup, Jupiter, were having a game of their own—Ann "walking" (with her hands) over the parallel bars, and Jupiter pawing at her feet which dangled over his head. It meant readjusting the focus, which I did, and I would have taken a fine action picture—except that when I pushed the lever forward, nothing happened. I'd forgotten to wind the motor spring. (This was my first forgetting, and unfortunately not the last.)

Meanwhile, we were acquiring an audience. Three or four neighborhood children had seen us, a they came to join in the fun. T mother of the pups found us (though we were sure she'd be carefully shut up in the basement And my host, the father of t twins, came out to give me so pointers. It was an awful lot cope with at once. I can't reme ber exactly what happened and which order. I do know that we ha lost a little of the ease we start out with.

It became harder for me to thin I found myself photographing wil ly, not because I wanted the sho but because everyone was waitin for me to "take" something or a other. At one point, I frantically tried to follow one of the puppi who was running around in circle And in the middle of this sill chase, I ran out of film. That ce tainly wasn't good planning, but h this time I had lost control of th situation. Every time I looked u from the camera there seemed t be more children and more dog Then the film was all used, an that was that!

Now that the movie-making wa over, children and dogs scattere to the winds, and I went back to th house, dizzy but proud. I had take a roll of movie film. But what woul it look like? Solemnly, I opened th camera and removed the magazine repacked it with its cardboards i the yellow carton, addressed it t the processing laboratory (carefu to write clearly my return address) tied it with a bit of string, stampe it and left it with the pile of out going mail. All the time wonder ing: But what will it look like?

A WEEK or so later, after a da in the office, I went home an there it was—a golden box of film My first. And now I would know. I was expecting guests for dinner and I was already behind schedule but before I could do anything else I had to see my movies. Not just once, but three times.

I can't figure out why the pictures turned out to be so wonderful. Heaven knows that I didn't do anything extraordinary. I merely slipped the film magazine into the camera and followed the instructions in the booklet. The only explanation I can give is that they make mighty fine cameras and film these days.

What did my pictures look like? They looked very much as I remembered them, only more precise. The color was really beautiful. (I understand that outdoor Kodachrome generally is beautiful, but still I'm always surprised when mine turns out so well.) The black puppies, the green grass, the suntanned faces and arms and legs of the two girls, the red slippers—it was all as vivid as reality.

There was one awkward moment when the film flickered. (I had forgotten to wind the motor—remember?) There was one off-focus shot when I flubbed completely and took a picture of the pups bouncing around my host's feet, without readjusting the lens aperture for shade. There was that frantic chase at the end, with the dog and the camera going around in blurry circles. The beginning, when I had been careful and considered in my actions, was definitely better than the end of the film.

I HAD promised to send my first finished roll to a friend who is a professional film-maker, for criticism. This was a reversal of roles, and frankly I dreaded it. But he was kind and constructive in his comments.

"I think you are to be congratulated," he wrote, "for the uniform quality of your exposures." (It was good of him to start off his critical letter with praise.)

"I think you'll agree," he continued, "that if you don't use a tripod, it is very important to hold the camera steady." (I still haven't a tripod, and I need one, but I have practiced getting improved steadiness by leaning against a tree or a park bench or an automobile.)

"The puppies are very cute," his letter went on. "I kept wishing for more big close-ups." (If he only knew how brave I felt in getting my moderate close-ups! But the fact is that I am still fighting the battles of the close-ups. Long shots seem so much safer and they're fine for atmosphere, but the close-ups are what make a film real and exciting. And, in general, it's much harder to get really good close-ups.)

"All in all, Cecile, you did mighty well." (Those were his words, but they're exactly the way I felt about it. If I can start from here and improve a little each week and month and year, I'll be pleased.)

That Christmas, the film was sent to my Washington hosts as a gift to the family. They have their own 16mm camera and projector—in fact, they've taken family movies for twenty years, ever since their oldest child was born. But somehow or another no one had thought to take pictures of the pups. It was their fifth batch, so perhaps the novelty had worn off.

When I visited there the following spring, Cindy and Jupiter were permanent members of the household. How they had grown! Ann and Barbara and I got out "my" roll of film, and together we looked at it again. They giggled and cooed at the pictures of themselves (they're practically teenagers now), and exclaimed with glee at the antics of the pups. "Weren't they tiny, just last summer!" one of them exclaimed. "They've grown so much without our even noticing." commented the other "And weren't they darling," we all muttered.

Of course they were tiny and darling. In my film they'll be that way forever.

I've gone on with my movie-making, still a beginner but fairly comfortable with the camera in my hands. I've taken some wonderful color footage of a school children's Maypole dance in Central Park (and given it to the principal as a beginning "archive" to be added to each year). I've had very good results out-of-doors with black-and-white film, which isn't as popular or as appealing as color, but which I find very interesting for people a city scenes. I've tried indoor mov at night, using a simple photo-lig bar which is easy to attach to t camera itself and very useful f parties.

I'VE learned that for amate movies, themes are more appr priate than stories. Last autum for example, I did a lovely fifty-fo roll about a leaf-burning day the country. Everyone in the fam was working in the yard. I didn have to ask anyone to pose for m I didn't even bother them. If wanted a second take of a teenag wheeling a barrow of leaves—a he'd just come back from emptyi it—I'd tell him to whistle when was ready with another load a I'd get my shot then. I didn't g in their way and they didn't get mine. It made a wonderful livi memory of a wonderful golden da

I still have practically everythi to learn about how to make hon movies. And while I'm learnin I'm having great fun and getti surprisingly pleasing pictures. If can do it, believe me, so can yo

How to leave home and like it

Dates and rates are changeable. Prospective tourists should confirm this information with their travel agents, transportation companies, and hotels.

The off-season is on, or just about to be, for in travel circles the great summer rush is over and now is the time (from September through April) when the cagier citizens start brushing off their Dacron suits and making their plans to go places. So, for the benefit of those who may have some qualms about taking a major vacation "out of season," we offer these following observations, all based on personal experience, as an old off-beat, off-season voyager both at home and abroad.

The obvious advantages are that you won't be trampled on in the crowds, you stand a pretty good chance of getting reservations almost anywhere you want them, and there is the heartening certainty that you will be saving money in transportation charges and hotel bills, and also, we suspect, in whatever you buy, since shopkeepers the world over seem to respect the law of supply and demand. The fewer the customers, the lower the price.

So far as the steamship lines serving Europe are concerned, the thrifty, marked-down season runs from July 31 to April 15 for passage to Europe. From Europe, cut-rates begin the middle of October and last through June. An off-season first-class ticket on the French Line's glamorous "Ile de France" (which amounts to pretty fancy traveling) would stand you as little as $330, as opposed to the in-season rate of $355; Cabin Class about $222; Tourist about $170. You're RIGHT in style...and thrifty, too...with lovely floors of OAK

PRACTICAL—The practical value of Oak—its strength, its economy of upkeep, its timeless resistance to wear and tear, its fadeproof coloring—is only one reason for its continuous popularity.

BEAUTIFUL—Another is the unobtrusive beauty of Oak—its quiet harmony with all types of architecture and with every conceivable ensemble of colors, fabrics, and furniture. It gives you complete freedom of choice in decorating your home.

COMFORTABLE—The resiliency of Oak gives restful comfort underfoot. And its high insulating quality prevents loss of heat, affords healthful protection against cold and dampness.

ECONOMICAL—And yet lovely floors of Oak are not for the rich alone. Lowest cost homes can afford them. Thanks to its durability, Oak is far cheaper in the long run than any other type of floor material, even lower in first cost than most.

CORRECT—Important, too, is the recognized style leadership of Oak. Today, as always, hardwood floors are correct—the ultimate mark of good taste and elegance in contemporary or traditional homes.

When you build or remodel, it's SMART to insist on Oak Floors. Sold by lumber dealers everywhere.

The Third Parent

The house in which children grow up is almost as much a parent to them as a father or a mother. With its all-pervading influences—both good and bad—a house helps shape values and set standards for the younger generation. In this respect a house is really a third parent

By MARVA SHEARER

In our time of changing standards and uncertain goals, conscientious parents are hard put to give their children a helpful set of values. In the words of the soliloquy from The King and I, "Is a puzzlement." It is indeed a "puzzlement."

To tell children that honesty is the best policy and that industry will be rewarded is the easy beginning. Such principles are simple and clearly defined. Any child can recognize the difference between truth and falsehood, between doing a good job and "goofing off." That is not the problem.

But when it comes to teaching the young and inexperienced how to differentiate between true and phony beauty, between real and cheap culture, between civilized and shoddy living, between surface and meaningful endeavor, then the way is not always clear. Such intangibles as "values" and "attitudes" are difficult to put into words. Even when the parents, unlike the King, are "sure of things they absolutely know," they sometimes find it difficult to transfer their ideas into useful guide-posts for their offspring.

To complicate the problem further, children usually don't take kindly to parental lectures. They are too impatient, too sure of their own impulsive judgments and hasty decisions.

But a fine house that represents the thinking and taste of many talented people, as well as the personal choice of its owners, does express the parental ideal better than words. If the house combines beauty with shelter, peace with stimulation, then it becomes the third parent and speaks eloquently for the other two.

Esthetically, a good house exerts a strong and early influence on children. Although the average youngster starts out in life without any well-defined taste, he quickly acquires an awareness of beauty that grows and develops with exposure to new and lovely things. Children living with beauty are nourished by it just as they are by kindness, consideration and good food.

In my own experience, one child when he was eight months old showed obvious delight in textures. For example, he reacted to a new thick rug the way a kitten responds to catnip. Whenever he was placed on the floor he rolled and rubbed his face against the deep pile. He also showed a definite preference for certain silk dresses hanging in my closet. He'd crawl in and finger the clothes whenever he found the door open. This boy's early response to texture has now extended into a feeling for color and form. He's a better-than-average artist in school. He likes to construct elaborate toy towns of blocks and Lincoln logs. Even his choice in T-shirts is unusual (he loves purple) and interesting.

Other mothers who own beautiful homes report that their children also notice and comment on the beauty they see around them. One three-year-old's early acknowledgment of spatial concepts took the form of a question. (Continued overleaf)

Family harmony with seven individualists under one roof is a near miracle. The Irving Axelrads of Los Angeles, Calif., have achieved this almost impossible goal by living in a house that makes raising children easy. Each child from Alan, the artist in the family, to Joel, the littlest charmer, has a room of his own. Privacy is a highly regarded right. But the sound of the piano draws everyone to the living room. Here, casually and informally, they listen to good music while reading, playing and enjoying a sense of family unity.

"Telling Time" is another Axelrad family tradition that is fun as well as instructive. They all take turns telling of the most interesting thing that happened during the day. The rules of the game are that everyone must listen politely until the speaker has exhausted his subject. Questions are in order, but not heckling. This delightful custom teaches consideration for others; it binds the family more closely by shared interests. And table manners are less of an issue when the atmosphere is relaxed and the conversation is lively and absorbing.

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS MARIE AND ARTHUR BERGER

Recreation begins and ends at home, if appointments are as complete as in this "Casita." To keep their youngsters from leaving home for sports and companionship, yet avoid turning living room into a youth center, the Dewars built a playhouse near pool and badminton court. Wide open on one side, built of brick and concrete, it is ideal place to eat, dance, and even sit in wet swim suits. In bad weather sliding doors enclose front.

continued

One day as he stood in the family's high-gabled garden room, he turned to his mother and, wide-eyed, asked, "We built our house tall, just the way we wanted it, didn't we, Mommie?"

Children whose home surroundings have sharpened their sensitivities speak appreciatively of lying in bed at night and looking at the stars. Others like watching the rain on a skylight or are stirred by the sight of the first blossoms on a chestnut tree. One West Coast architect who hears many such happy comments from his clients calls it the "thrill of exposure to beauty."

It follows, then, that a house of good design, beautiful materials and fine furnishings must influence children during their formative years. It serves as a foundation for future esthetic appreciation—perhaps, even, for participation in the arts.

The cultural standards of children also have their beginnings in a well-planned home. No amount of parental lecturing on art, music, and literature is half as effective as a house (Continued overleaf)

EDWARD D. STONE, ARCHITECT, KARL J. HOLZINGER & ROY S. JOHNSON, ASSOCIATES

Alone and yet together, the two children of Mr. and Mrs. Bertrand S. Linder of Scranton, Penn., sleep apart and do their homework alone and undisturbed in their minimal-size bedrooms that open off large playroom (right) in which they share toys and games.

CLARK AND FREY, ARCHITECTS

Performing in a home orchestra is a fine way. Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Stephens of Palm Springs, Calif., have found, to educate their three daughters to good music. The little girls practice harder and enjoy a piece more when they know the whole family will play it together. Music for them is an every-day activity that takes no more preparation than going to the music cabinet and selecting a number. Convenient storage for the violins and violas was worked into the guest closet (left). Narrow shelves keep sheet music available, clearly catalogued.

that includes pictures of fine quality, a high fidelity music system and a collection of good books.

Talking about the arts can make one pretty self-conscious. Young people are especially touchy about being "elevated." Frequently they rebel against studying music or even picking up a book. Forcing them to dip into the classics only makes them resentful. But if it's made easy and natural for them to read, to listen casually to music, to live with good art and to hear intelligent conversation, then they gradually develop a taste for cultural pleasures. That means such activities all need to be going on at home.

An eight-year-old of my acquaintance got his first brush with literary classics in the casual, off-hand way I've just described. When Ernest Hemingway's The Old Man and the Sea was first published in Life, the boy noticed the illustrations and asked his father what the story was about. His Dad told him the plot. The story quickly became one of the youngster's favorite bedtime tales. A year later he was idly looking over the family library (which he'd used primarily for its collection of cartoon books) and spotted the Hemingway novel.

"Is this the story I like?" he asked. When told it was, he took it and, without any further encouragement, started reading. He finished the book in two days. This book was an ideal choice for his introduction to real literature. The writing is simple, and the length short. He gobbled it up and now he's searching for other "real reading."

Similarly, children who are surrounded by music look askance at those who aren't. I had to smile at the daughter of a friend of mine who returned home one afternoon after a birthday party. When her mother and I inquired into the success of the party she waxed indignant. "It was just awful, Mother," she declared. "Peggy's mother didn't even know how to scoop ice cream or play the piano or anything." (Please turn to page 198)

HAROLD ZOOK, ARCHITECT

Where to put electric trains is a problem in any home where there are two boys—and a father. The John Griffiths of Pasadena, Calif., cleared this hurdle by mounting their track on a 3′ x 6′ section of plywood. Plywood was finished on the underside like playroom walls and hinged securely. Up (right), table is inconspicuous; down, it rests on saw horses that belong in workshop. Trains, extra equipment are kept in good order on shelves in playroom.

LAWRENCE HALPRIN, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT
ERNEST BRAUN, PHOTOGRAPHER

Equipment for a gang is what it takes to keep neighborhood playmates from fighting over the same swing. Children's play area at the home of the R. J. Giddings has an ideal assortment of big-muscle apparatus. There are things for climbing, sliding and swinging. With plenty of outdoor fun children are easier to live with indoors.

MAYNARD PARKER

Boys and tools go together like ham and eggs. Aware of this fact of family life, the Griffiths had an efficient workshop built next to playroom. They equipped it with professional thoroughness on the premise that good craftsmanship comes from knowing how to handle real tools. Shop opens to outside near carport so large-scale projects can be managed outdoors, still close to tools.

A rocket ship or prairie schooner —a tree house is this, and more, to kids who play in it. The valuable exercise in imagination that comes from having an elevated playhouse can't be duplicated. When building one, it pays to do it well. This was designed for the Alexander Hixons by architect John Matthias. Lath flooring lets rain run through. A tree surgeon was consulted about bolts in tree.

Growing Up Gracefully

In the limbo between childhood and maturity a young girl needs the assuring factor of a pretty room—a place for friends and a place for privacy

Toni Evins, the engaging twelve-year-old whose picture and whose room are shown on these pages, is entering that exciting and bewildering period known as adolescence.

A typical teenager, Toni is both the delight and the despair of her parents. One minute she's a little girl—forgetful, disorganized and often tearful—who still takes a stuffed doll to bed. The next moment she shows such a precocious talent for painting and design that it almost frightens her family.

The problem of channeling such extremes of behavior into a steady growth pattern confounds a lot of parents. Toni's family is no exception. They're frequently befuddled, and they don't pretend to have all the answers. But they do have a consistent point of view.

"We try to encourage Toni on two levels," says her mother, Mrs. Ellis Gimbel, "and then let her alone. First, I want her to feel that it's wonderful and desirable to be a woman and to enjoy all the things that are traditionally feminine. That's most important, I believe.

"Secondly, I think it's (Please turn to page 164)

Part of the fun of having a pretty room is being able to rearrange the furniture. When she has an overnight guest, Toni pushes the beds together so both girls can talk. She also has her own bedside phone.

This tidy girl's room was planned so that the mother needn't clean up after her daughter's hobbies. All of Toni's books, records and art supplies are stored behind closet doors. Her clothes are kept in a similar closet on the other side. Her easel stands on floor of washable rubber tile. Table tops are made of durable white Micarta.

During the last decade a new type of dwelling has emerged:

THE FAMILY HOUSE

Obviously families have always lived in houses. But the houses did not show signs of the presence of children. Now they do

Time was, once, when the children in a family had to be retailored to fit the requirements of the house their parents lived in. This produced a lot of wear and tear on both parents and children. (This reshaping of personalities may account for some of the perplexing psychiatric problems in our present population.)

But a sounder solution than the reshaping of people has finally been found. It has become clear that a house can be conceived and built to withstand the wear and tear of child life; that it can be conceived also to insulate adult life from the joyous ruckus of childhood ways while it is performing as a home in the time-honored sense of the word.

The era of Clarence Day, however nostalgically amusing, has irrevocably passed from the American scene. Children are no longer regarded in this country as Nana-disciplined showpieces to be trotted into the living room for a kiss and a curtsy at tea time. In today's family house children are considered as distinct individuals; it is recognized that they are by nature carefree, experimentative and uninhibited. (Discipline will come in time!)

This enlightened viewpoint has resulted in homes flexibly planned to meet changing needs. Such houses are built to withstand the abuse of youngsters, to cushion their noises and yet to allow them plenty of freedom. They are designed also to stimulate and encourage a congenial and full home life. The house shown on these 10 pages is a fine, representative example.

The basic plan of the Family House usually calls for separate living areas: one for the parents, one for the children and one middle or connecting zone for the family living. In some of the new homes visited by HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's editorial staff, the children's zone consists of bedrooms, a bath, a playroom and an outside exit to a play yard. These elements are grouped together at one side of the house, separate from the parents' zone.

The parents' zone, consisting of bedroom, bath and sometimes a den, is (Please turn the page)

Living room has style with low maintenance

The inviting fireplace corner in the home of Judge and Mrs. Agee is the epitome of the Family House. Its beauty of design was created with durable materials like concrete blocks, redwood and poured concrete flooring. Mrs. Agee shopped for a few rare pieces of antique furniture and used them like art objects. The baroque piano that separates the dining area from the living area contrasts well with the plain built-ins and cement floors.

located on the opposite side. An inter-com system permits immediate verbal contact between the two.

The materials utilized in the family house are used honestly and naturally. Stone, wood, brick, concrete and glass are employed in a straightforward way without benefit of camouflage. This makes for low maintenance and ease of housekeeping. But the hard-surface finish of these materials, plus the openness of these homes, heighten rather than absorb the noises of children.

As a result, many of these houses are furnished and equipped with devices and acoustical material especially designed to absorb and muffle sound.

An attractive example of the Family House trend is the home we show on these pages belonging to Judge and Mrs. James Agee of San Francisco. This house was planned during World War II. At the time, the Agees and their two children were living in a conventional house.

"It was a pleasant enough place," Virginia Agee declares, "but it was really all wrong for people with growing children. Most of the time the house and our family seemed to be at cross-purposes. If the children brought their playmates indoors, the muddy footprints showed on the carpets. If one of their pets curled up on a bed, I'd have to get the spread dry-cleaned. The youngsters couldn't paste or pin up pictures in their rooms without ruining the walls.

"I think we might have survived the slow ruin of our interior decorating but for one thing. In a house with low ceilings, dormer windows and too much bric-a-brac, my husband and I began to feel terribly constricted. There were days when we felt we'd been locked in a closet with children, pets and musical instruments."

The way out, the Agees finally decided, was to build "a different kind of house—one that might adjust to the changing needs of our family."

Because it was then wartime and private building was forbidden, the Agees spent more time thinking out their housing problems than they would have under normal conditions. They read dozens of architecture books. (Continued overleaf)

Everybody's hobby is provided for

The big living room is an activity center for the entire family. The children have fun on the arts and crafts counter. When adults entertain, Judge Agee uses the counter and basin as a drink bar. (One of the cabinets underneath is for liquor.) Opposite page: The built-in television is also children's province. It's equipped with two sets of earphones so that Susan and Jimmy can watch a program while their parents read in peace and quiet. Ballet is one of Mrs. Agee's hobbies; her practice bar and mirror are at far end of room.

A patio for parties and outdoor meals

The patio behind the house is a lovely sheltered spot that gets the morning sun but is protected from the evening winds. These climatic conditions plus the convenient arrangements for food preparation and serving make it a natural outdoor living area.

In good weather the family has breakfast, lunch and dinner on this terrace. "It's like living in the woods," says Virginia Agee. "The quail and wild jays come from all over to Jimmy's bird feeder. Their antics keep us entertained as we eat."

Patio has a barbecue, a firepit and a copper-lidded woodbox that can be used as a buffet. With teen-age Susan approaching the date stage, paved terrace will come in handy for dancing. Jimmy's crowd appreciates this large cemented area for its smooth skating surface and its easy access to kitchen. Mrs. Agee hands out snacks via a window pass-through. Drinking fountain is for thirsty boys who would otherwise invade the kitchen.

Firepit for marshmallow roasts nestles in patio corner.

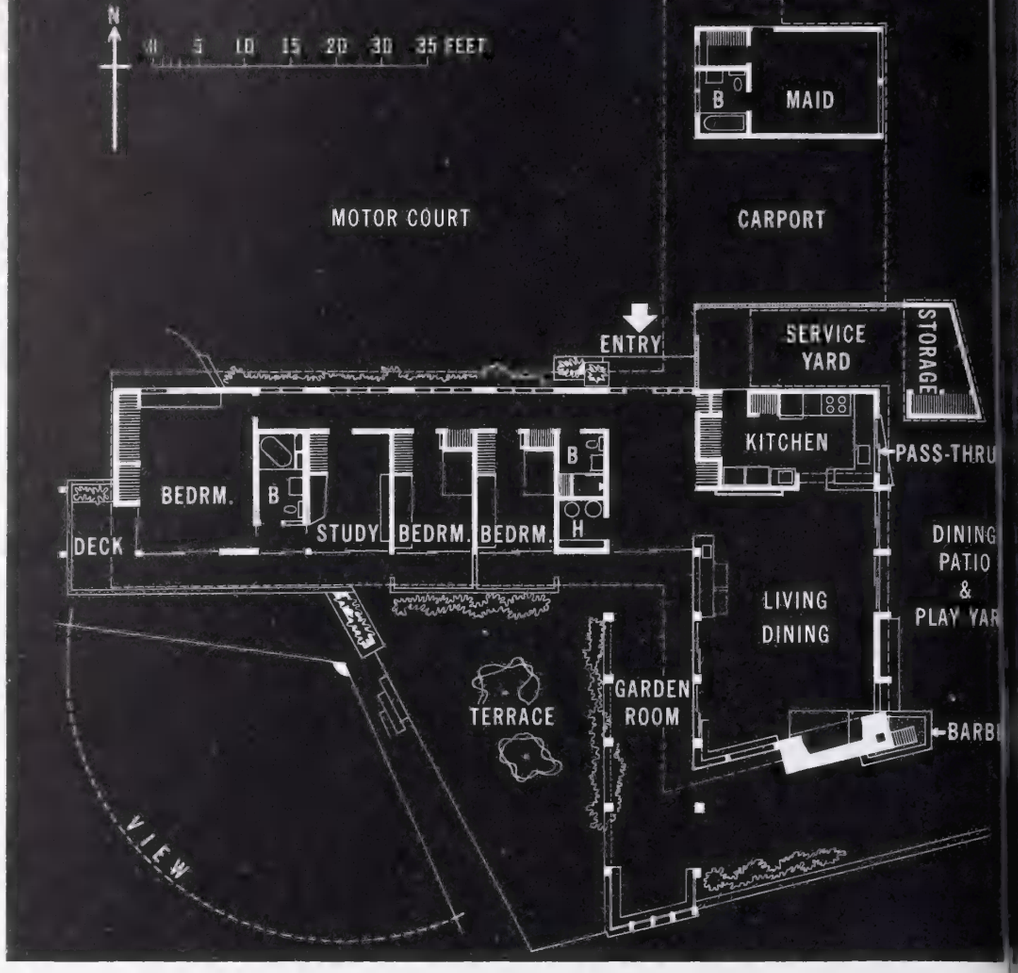
Everything on the patio can be hosed down or swept.

They pored over housing magazines. They saved clippings. They talked to friends and acquaintances and, of course, held long family discussions.

Having amassed a great deal of information, Virginia Agee then compiled a 70-page notebook. It expressed all the needs, desires and dreams of her family. She presented this complete statement to the two architects she and her husband had selected to design their house—the architectural firm of Anshen and Allen.

Virginia Agee's notebook is a highly individualized document and the house derived from it is right for her family only. But it does symbolize many of the basic characteristics of the Family House, a model for the decade of the 1950's, at the very least.

Take, first, the quality of its design. Above all, the Agees insisted upon an excitingly beautiful house. They wanted their structure to be so architecturally handsome that it would need relatively little decorating to fulfill its enrichment. By eliminating carpeting, draperies and fragile fabrics, they hoped to rid themselves of many of the child-traps of their former home. Still, they didn't want to sacrifice any esthetic values.



Another element they insisted upon was openness. They wanted a sense of freedom in their home, and they got it. Large glass areas open onto patios. Oversealed doors, high-gabled ceilings and the underfurnished look all combine to form a house that "feels" free and non-confining. The children can leave by any of a dozen separate exits. The balconies outside their bedrooms were specifically planned so that in good weather they can wheel out their beds and sleep under the stars. Because the house opens out so much, neither parents nor children ever feel cramped.

In the Agee plan the parental zone is located at the far end of a bedroom wing. It consists of a den, a bedroom and bath. The children, on the other hand, have separate rooms that open on the outside. Each of these rooms is equipped with guest bunks that are occupied practically every week end, thus the social life of Susan and Jimmy Agee does not impinge too greatly on their parents'. In the Agee household, privacy is considered everybody's individual right.

There are plenty of places and opportunities, however, for the family to get together. The large living room, for example, is a family activities center that features a work counter for the children as well as a TV set, a dining area and facilities for performing and listening to music.

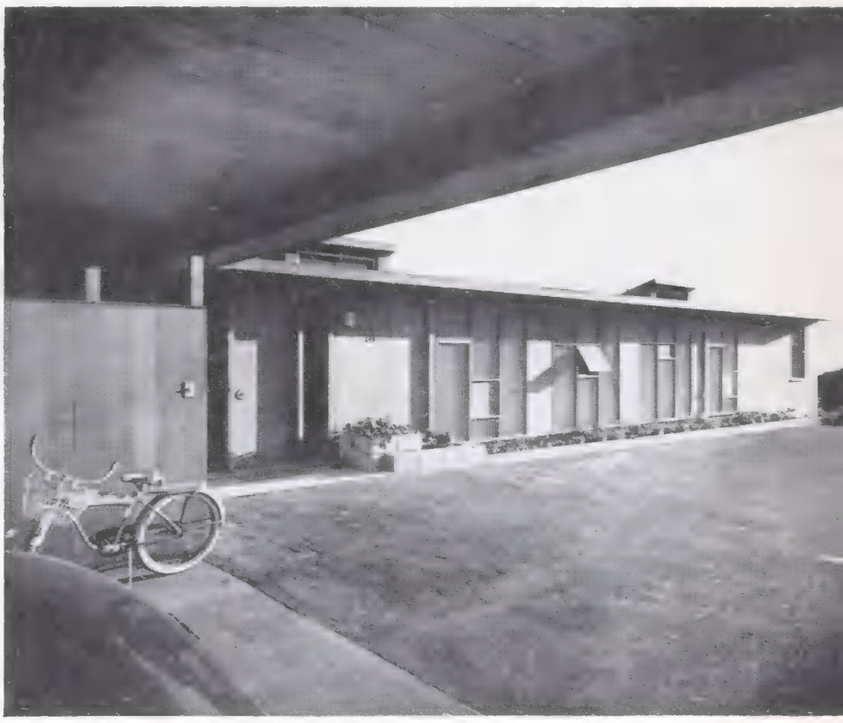
of the living room are for family gatherings, too. The rear patio has a fire-pit and outdoor dining table for barbecue dinners, while the front patio boasts a shuffleboard game.

The building materials used in the Agee house are redwood, glass, cement blocks and concrete flooring. Each in itself is an ordinary building product, but each is used with such taste and skill that it appears richer and more vital in combination than alone. A glass skylight over the fireplace, for instance, pours strong cross-lighting across the masonry, making the pattern of the cement blocks appear uniquely beautiful. At night the skylight is equally attractive, for the Agees can sit around the fireplace and watch sparks flying up from their own chimney into the dark sky like little comets.

Combined with these natural materials, many modern synthetics chosen for their easy maintenance are used in the house. All the horizontal counters are topped with dark brown Formica that looks well with the natural wood walls. Masonite pin-up boards in the children's room help display the results of their hobbies and art work and also keep their clutter to one side of their rooms. The windows facing the motor court are made of a translucent plastic, called Corrulux, rather than glass, admitting light but maintaining a maximum of bedroom privacy. The plastic also permits baseball games to be played in the motor court without windows being broken. (Continued overleaf)

MAYNARD PARKER



Haven at the end of a hall

Parents, of all people, need a private retreat away from their exuberant offspring and out of the mainstream of house traffic. Judge and Mrs. Agee's bedroom is at the end of a long corridor, separated from the children's rooms by the study and a bathroom.

An honest solution of family needs

That's what the Agees asked of their finished home, and they got it. Furthermore, they told their architects that they hoped it would also be a work of art—an uncomplicated house, made of natural materials and at ease with its surroundings. This classically simple design with its broad horizontal lines was the satisfactory outcome.

Fine design pays off in comfort

The corridor leading to the bedrooms would have been a dark, airless hall in the hands of less imaginative designers. Anshen and Allen let in light through use of plastic panels, providing ventilation through high and low redwood hatches. They spaced the materials so as to form an interesting pattern outside as well as inside.

To minimize the children's noises in the Agee house, there are sound-absorbing storage units between the bedrooms, plus a layer of sound-insulating material called "Acousti-Celotex." In the living room, two pairs of earphones are connected to the television cabinet. Using the headsets, the children can listen to their favorite TV programs without disturbing their parents in the same room.

Mrs. Agee feels she has a successful and workable house because it has met the challenge of continuous change. When Susan and Jimmy started to outgrow the clay and paint counter in the living room, the counter didn't become obsolete; it became a serving buffet for their junior parties. It is also used for adult affairs.

Now that the children are getting older, Mrs. Agee plans to add more decorative and delicate pieces and fabrics to the rooms. Gardening is also re-entering her life. When she first planned her house she wanted a maintenance-free garden. As the children require less and less of her time, she plans to devote more of her free hours to potted plants. In the area that once housed the children's slide and sand box, for instance, there is now a lath house and potting shed.

Mrs. Agee also happens to love the ballet. Not a professional ballerina but a devotee, she has had a practice bar fastened to one wall of the living room and is studying ballet for pure enjoyment and for her figure's sake.

Her home is a happy one because it facilitates the mutual affection, growth and progress not only of the children but of the parents as well. As such it is a forerunner of the thousands of family houses currently going up all over the country to fill the needs of America's changing social patterns and its expanding family groups.

For a list of materials used in this house, see page 173

The children's rooms are sturdy and alike

When Susan and Jimmy were consulted on what they'd like in their rooms, they produced lists a block long. Both wanted bunk beds for overnight guests.

The first month in the house they slept only in the "upper." When the novelty wore off, they came down to the greater comfort of a bedside radio and reading light. The doors to the balcony are scaled so that they can pull their single beds halfway outside and sleep under the stars.

The pin-up board above the work counter was in answer to an earnest plea to be able to "stick things on a wall." The desk top is brown Formica. Only difference in the two rooms is that Susan has a lift-up vanity mirror.

Tested Party Ideas for Older Children

By VIRGINIA STANTON
House Beautiful's Party Editor

Since I am the proud mother of three rather grown-up teenagers—Susie, Shannah and Mike—in my day I have master-minded every kind of children's party, from the kindergarten set's "Fish Pond" to our most recent "black tie" dinner-before-the-prom.

But the most successful party we ever had (it's still talked about today) was the Hallowe'en party in the haunted house. It's the kind of "do" that youngsters just under high-school age get the greatest kick out of. We had three station wagons full of kids and drove them out to an old vacant house which we had rented for the night. We had rigged up all sorts of scary things in the house, such as luminous skeletons in closets and eerie noises made by one of the parents hidden where no one was allowed to go. We had a lighted head high up over the stairwell (a mask lighted with a flashlight), a ghost that could be seen wandering above and clanking chains. There was a great build-up before going into the house, too—a bucket of "dragon's blood" (tomato juice) to make the kids brave enough to enter, a candle in the window with a paper owl floating over it and a paper black cat staring out. Weird music was playing on a concealed phonograph and the whole affair was really great.

You can let your imagination run riot, for the kids are scared to death and will not sleep for days, anyway.

We had a supper before this big adventure, but I found the kids were so excited over their sheet costumes and the coming adventure that they could hardly eat (I learned this the hard way). Your Voice of Experience recommends that you plan a very (Please turn to page 196)

Opposite is a dining table such as might be set for the pre-prom dinner Mrs. Stanton describes. For the teenagers such a dinner is a dress rehearsal in the social graces, a preview of their party manners as adults. But poise and pleasant behavior come easier to youngsters who have grown up with beautiful things from babyhood. Today even quite small children can join the family at mealtime and share a thrice-daily experience of an impeccably set table, for modern materials make the dining room pretty nearly impervious to stains and spots.

For instance, the floor in the handsome dining room of Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Foote is Flor-Ever Universal vinyl tile, by Sloane-Delaware, as resistant to wear as it is easy to keep. A wonderful time was had by all Parties for the very young can be fun for everyone—parents and children alike

The first step in giving a successful party for a very young child is to get in the right frame of mind. Instead of dreading the day when you will have to open your home to a collection of over-excited, hyperactive children in celebration of your own son's or daughter's birth, try to see it through his or her eyes.

Birthdays and birthday parties are very big events. To minimize their importance is to deny a child one of the joys of childhood. One's own birthday is more significant in many respects than Christmas, Easter or any national holiday, since it is a date exclusively one's own. Furthermore, a child's concern for his own birthday isn't limited to the few days before the party. It's quite common, when a group of youngsters are bickering, to have one shout triumphantly, "All right for you! I won't invite you to my party!" Whether the party is six days or six months away, the dire threat shows that in the child's mind his party is a pleasure he can control by giving or withdrawing invitations, producing a satisfactory feeling of importance.

Birthday parties make outstanding memories for adults, too. In our family, the highlight of a three-year-old's celebration was when one little friend, who was filling the wading pool, turned the hose on the mothers. (Somehow this anecdote seems much more amusing as the dousing recedes into the ever dimming distance.)

If we agree, as I think all parents must, that children's parties are worth any extra work involved, the next step is to make sure the preparations are as much fun as the party.

Arrangements for any such affair can be simplified, of course, by calling on a party service. Many department stores and some toy shops, as well as caterers, offer a ready-made deal. For a flat price these professional party-givers will bring the table decorations, favors and the food, and even provide performers. Children may find the total effect of such a "package" party just as memorable as the ones you organize yourself, but for you it won't be nearly as much fun.

In my years of giving and going to minor social functions for children, I have found that (Please turn to page 160)

CHILDREN AND ART

We are children once in a lifetime of art. The way we experience it in our youth may open its world of seeing, enjoying and creating for the rest of our lives

By JOSEPH A. BARRY

What do we really mean, what are we really after, when we talk about children and art? Is it to make artists of our children, in the strict sense of painters and sculptors or even of semi-professional craftsmen?

That would be an unlikely goal, even if it were desirable. There have always been, there probably always will be, but a few children with God-given genius and talent, and they for the most part will go their own inspired road, accompanied part of the way by all the insight and breadth of spirit of which we are individually capable.

Beyond question, such prodigies deserve the most intelligent of our efforts as much for our sakes as for their own. But our concern here is not with these few, but with the many children whose only claim for our attention is their childhood. And the problem we should set for ourselves is not their works of art, but their experience of art—their growing awareness of the world around them, their growing appreciation of its wonders and beauties, and their growing ability to communicate the special meaning it has for them with a pencil, crayon or brush, a piece of string, wire, cardboard or any of the materials that their fancies might seize upon to express their emotions and images.

Our role as adults is to multiply their occasions of awareness, to call out by inspiration the creativity slumbering within each child, to help each one develop and mature, to be wise enough to aid him to master the expression of his own vision without ever substituting our experience for his, our authority for his discoveries, our solemn fixed rules for his own playful free taste.

Thus the problem of art education partakes of the problem of all education, indeed of democracy itself: how to form a culture that is personal yet universal, individual yet part of an historical heritage. We want to summon the special quality of our children and keep it unique and unspoiled. At the same time we want to impart our own lessons so that each child need not try to recapitulate the history of civilization with all its errors. We want to encourage our children to venture with uninhibited imagination, but we don't wish them to plunge into senseless activity, into a needless waste of time and energy that will only end in stifling their creative impulse by exhausting it with frustrated effort.

Actually these are the problems of our own adult life. In every field of taste—furnishing, decorating, gardening—we are constantly choosing between authority and the slow process of personal experience. However, if ours had been the intimate contact with art to which we would like to expose our children, how much more likely that our decisions would be as fully informed as they would be highly individual.

If we too had played with color and texture, forms and shapes—all the experiences we call art education—from childhood through the difficult years of adolescence and young adulthood, perhaps today we might have arrived at the finest expression of ourselves, at a form of taste that is personal and possibly perfect. We might have reached a state of culture never before seen in history, a culture achieved by individuals over a whole nation rather than by an elite of wealth or pedigree.

Our final goal, then, is an American civilization, a way of life made beautiful and expressive. It is with this in mind that the most sensible and sensitive of our educators say: Let your child freely play with the materials of art. Let him make his mistakes so that he can also make his discoveries. (Please turn to page 203)

Another postwar development:

THE FAMILY ROOM

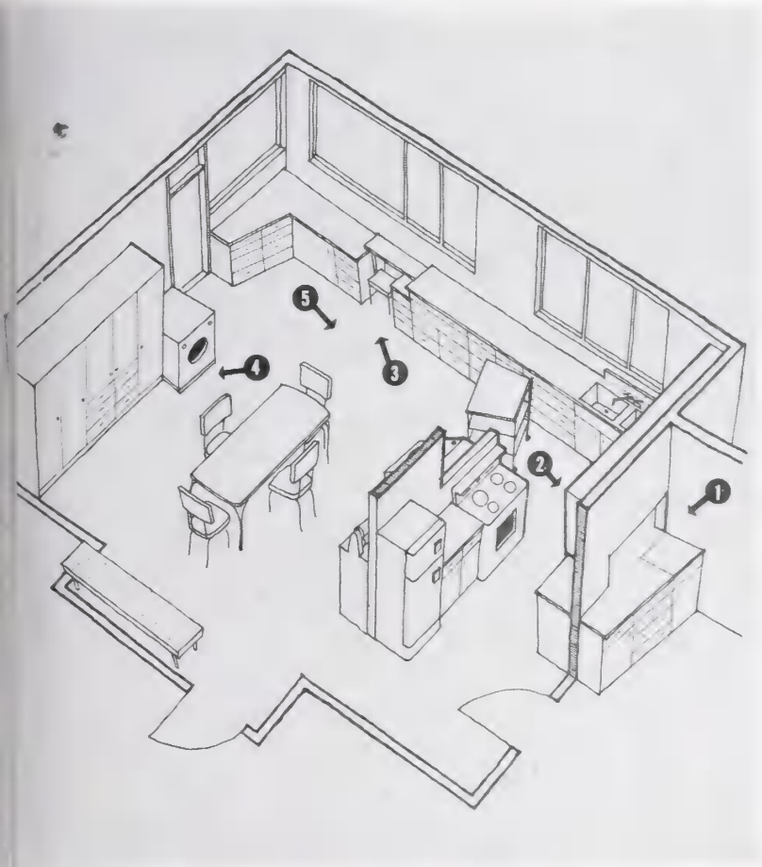
It takes many forms. But above all it's a room that can change its character from day to day and year to year. Here is a hard-working example

This family room belongs spiritually and visually to the kitchen. But it catches a lot of rough living that goes on, in many houses, in other rooms. It's playroom, sewing room, laundry plus kitchen.

1. A pass-through and two-way china cabinet unite the dining area with kitchen. The counter on both sides is in the same architectural grammar as the family room. (See plan opposite.)

2. From her compact cooking center, Mrs. Stephens can easily serve food on the patio, to the dining area of the living room and also in the family room. Cleaning up is simple.

3. Every detail was thought out in advance to make the sewing corner as efficient as possible. Notice how the ironing board pushes back under the counter into what is usually dead storage.



Clark and Frey, architects
Dr. & Mrs. Hugh Stephens, owners

5. Movable shelves scaled to counter height and made to wedge precisely between the stove and sink enclose the cooking area, making it into more workable space. When the children were toddlers, shelves blocked their route to the stove. Now they operate like a tea cart.

4. By analyzing her own work habits and deciding all the various kinds of jobs she'd be doing in the family room, Mrs. Stephens designed a storage cabinet that will hold such awkward but necessary household items as a dressmaker's dummy, unmended clothes and toys.

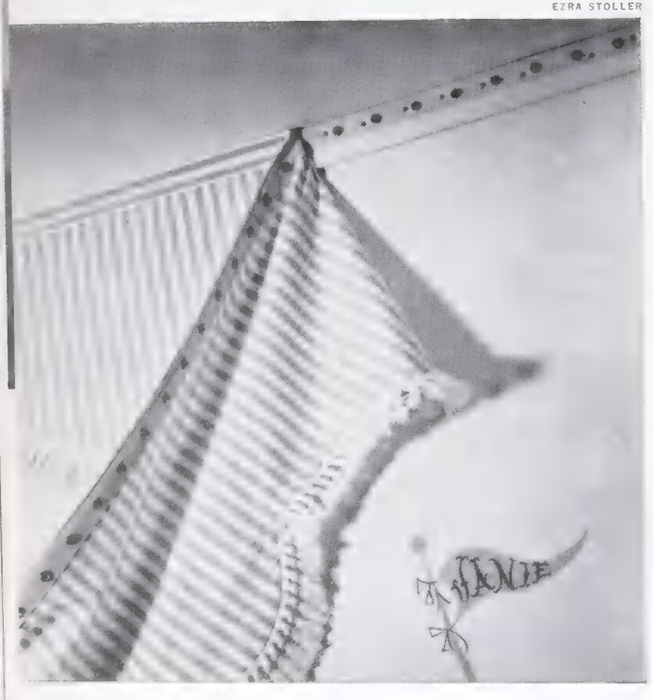
WHAT PRICE GLAMOUR?

It's not a high price if you shop for the better examples of our modern technologies and learn easy ways to keep lovely things beautiful

By MARION GOUGH



Your child's chances of growing up with an intimate appreciation of beautiful things have never been better. Look back at your own childhood and you will realize this. No matter how young a parent you are, it is more than likely that as a child you were signally unenthusiastic about your family's loveliest possessions, simply because your contacts with them were fraught with admonitions. "Don't put your feet up on that good chair!" "Don't sit on the bedspread!" "Don't touch the wallpaper!" Ad infinitum.

Or it might even be that your early memories of the rooms you lived in include no vivid impressions of beauty, for the very good reason that there wasn't any there. For it has only been within the last ten or fifteen years that durable furnishings have been anything except drab, uninteresting and devoid of any real style.

But today, thanks to the burgeoning of plastics, synthetic fibers, finishes, chemical treatments and the constantly improving technologies that practically hand these things to us on a silver platter, you take it for granted that your most interestingly styled and delicately colored furnishings are going to be both durable and easily maintained, no matter what rooms you use them in. With that kind of assurance, children's rooms —or, most important, any room a child may live in—can be as bright and entrancing as the one on the opposite page. It is just as impervious to rough use and as easy to keep clean as it is pretty. Such rooms are coming to be the rule rather than the exception.

And what is most remarkable about all this is that now you can eat your cake and have it, too, when you furnish for children. You can choose from the whole wonderful, durable, colorful range of no-iron, wipe-with-a-damp-cloth synthetics, of course. But you can also indulge your taste for soft, conventional fabrics, hand-painted wallpapers, pale and luxurious rugs—such refinements as would once have been madness to put within hand's reach of the young. New developments in soil-retardants, water-repellents and protective coatings have showered this gift into your lap. Silicone finishes which can be applied to upholstery and drapery materials (see our January, 1955 issue) give the fabric a water-repellency and soil resistance that lasts for at least five dry cleanings, and actually increases the abrasion-resistance of the fabric. You can have this applied to fabric in yard goods before it is made up. Or, with less durable results, you yourself may spray such a finish on your fabrics. Another new finish endows rayon rugs and carpets with soil (Please turn to page 175)

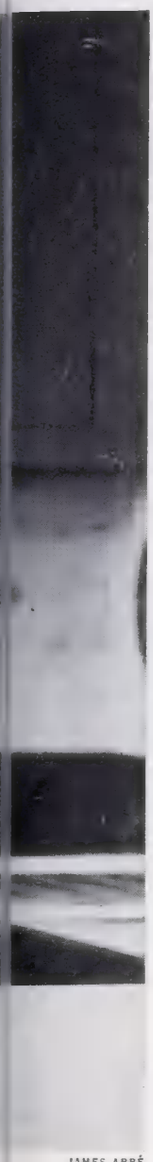
THE FIRST CAFÉ

By M. F. K. FISHER

A child's introduction to the wondrous art of fine eating has never been more delightfully or nostalgically described than in this piece, first published in the July 1947 issue of Harper's Bazaar.

The first time I ever went to a restaurant, the waiter, I have been told, thought me delightful and my little sister even more so, in spite of the sad truth that children to waiters are professionally Hell.



She was four, and I was six. We behaved nicely: we spoke neither too high nor too low, we sat up straight, we spilled almost not at all, and at the end of the meal she said to our man, "Oh, I am so sorry to leave all these dishes for you to wash, and a nearly clean napkin too!" He, who already loved us, or so it appears in Apocrypha, grew dewy-eyed.

Whatever his feelings then, he took care of us for some 30 years more in one or another of the respectable restaurants in southern California, and when I strolled, a little while ago, into a beach chop house, there he was, celebrating his last night in the profession, and we embraced and touched several glasses together before he left for his chicken farm. If he wanted to take time from his capons and his poults to write a book, I cannot help believing that he would speak kindly of the two little girls who got such a fine start under his snowy, flickering napkin.

That was in Los Angeles, at Marcel's, in 1914 or a little later. There were a few good small restaurants there at that time, a kind of backwater from San Francisco, undoubtedly. Marcel's was, according to my parents and a great many other hungry provincials, very good indeed. And Pinafore was playing a (Please turn to page 198)

One Woman's Report on how she Cooks for Children

JAMES ABBÉ

By MARY ELIZABETH WILEY

Once a child has progressed past the pablum, strained applesauce and formula stage, cooking and planning his meals can become a major undertaking. Just sticking to the approved schedule and following all the suggestions the pediatrician writes down is a big job, to say nothing of cooking for the adults in the family and following the schedules and suggestions previously outlined for two or three brothers and sisters. In a situation like this, one of two things often happens—either the children grow up on peanut butter and bananas or Mother spends her life in the kitchen.

I'm of the opinion that one of the most satisfactory ways to feed several children is to let them have their meals with their parents—just as early and as often as possible. It's valuable experience for children to become exposed to a wide variety of food at a youthful age and to learn to enjoy the family at the table. It really means very few menu concessions for the adults, as most children can eat almost anything, with the exception of very rich, highly seasoned, or fried food and pork, by the time they're three and a half or four. And when you consider the amount of extra work involved in serving two separate meals, it seems more than worth while to do the job all at once.

It means a lot to our children to be in on our meals from the time the cooking begins. The four-year-old loves to help and watch. She climbs on a stool for a better look at what's going on and enjoys nothing more than being allowed to help wash the lettuce or shell the peas. And our ten-year-old always sets the table, heats the plates and fills the automatic coffee percolator for our after-dinner coffee. She can do many helpful little things like cooking the bacon and making toast for breakfast or washing the vegetables or fruit for dinner.

Most of the time we do our cooking as a family; we wouldn't think of sitting down to dinner without the children and, as often as not, one or two of their friends. Sharing our meals gives us a chance to visit and catch up on each other's news, and it's good for the children's manners as well as their general enjoyment of life.

This does take care of a large number of family meals, but there are still many other situations to provide for that can be pretty harassing without expert planning. I'm thinking, for instance, of all the separate meals the children must have when we're going out or entertaining. And I'm also thinking of school lunch boxes and all the hungry friends that appear after school, and the impulsive, heartfelt begging for weenie roasts, explorers' lunches and extra guests on the week ends. In my book it all adds up to one thing—keeping a varied and constant stock of food in the freezer or on the pantry shelf ready to serve without preliminaries or to prepare quickly.

One way we keep individual meals ready is to freeze them in sectioned metal picnic plates. We make a point of having generous amounts of a favorite meal twice a month, and we freeze the balance à la TV dinners. The children's favorite is roast lamb, string beans, mashed potatoes (these are better for freezing than the usual roasted kind) and gravy.

All we do is prepare about an extra pound of string beans, being careful to avoid overcooking them, and about double the usual amount of mashed potatoes. After dinner we wash and scald the aluminum plates and carve up all the lamb. This goes into one compartment with the gravy, and the potatoes and beans fill the other sections. I put lockerweight foil on top and into the freezer they go. This usually provides for the children about six extra meals which are reheated straight from the freezer in a 400° F. oven for about 20 minutes. Other good bets are meatloaf, chicken, roast beef, stew or meatballs.

Good vegetables to use are squash (well drained), lima beans, puréed spinach, creamed onions, peas, cauliflower and broccoli. Sweet, mashed or creamed potatoes or rice seem to work well as a starch. We often have enough left from a meal to make just one dinner—or perhaps just the meat and vegetable. It's always worth while to freeze it anyway. The children like the element of surprise when occasionally one lone dinner turns up that's different from any of the others.

We like a commercial brand of chicken pie and beef pie made by Foster's Cafeteria of San Francisco, which also makes a good frozen chicken and rice dinner. We use the pie without most of the top crust—one five-inch pie for two children. These all make a good supper with the addition of a vegetable, salad and a dessert from the freezer.

I try to keep a small but steady stock of frozen cooked dishes like Cock-A-Leekie soup, creamed chicken, stew or creamed fish for kedgeree. If I make any of these things for a regular meal I make twice as much as I'll need and then put the balance in the freezer in individual portions. I use either small Ecko foil-ware containers or cream cartons with the top cut off. There are flat plastic tops available to make these into good freezer containers. If I haven't any cream cartons I use large muffin tins lined with foil with good-size corners of foil left on each one. I fill each cup, fold the corners over the top and put the whole thing in the freezer. When the contents freeze solid they can be taken out and all put together in a tightly closed plastic bag. When ready to use, I just unwrap and reheat them in a double boiler. Extra vegetables can be cooked and frozen this way, and small amounts of vegetables or other leftovers can be frozen in Dixie cups or foil (Please turn to page 179)

Let's give their "gang spirit" a boost

Youth Groups Are for Adults, too

This is candy sale time. Proceeds from such sales help maintain youth groups, give community good opportunity to meet and help youngsters directly.

In our time the healthy "gang spirit" that youngsters used to have in the good old days often seems to have lost its way. Newspapers are full of stories about school vandalism and youthful gang encounters—stories that fill us with foreboding. Youthful gangsterism has replaced gang spirit among many of our boys and girls. It has become one of the most baffling of our national problems.

Troubled, most of us want to help. But we don't know how. We ask angrily, What's gone wrong; what has happened to the younger generation?; and we turn to sociologists with demands that they study means of combating the situation.

It is right that we should be concerned and that we should ask for an informed approach, because the problem is very real. But the first step in helping the situation must be to remember that it is only in its "gone wrong," anti-social aspect that gang spirit deserves blame. Properly directed, it can be a source of parental and civic pride. Let me give you an example.

Not so long ago my husband happened to encounter a man and a boy cutting wood in a near-by canyon. When he stopped to offer some fallen trees from our land, the answer was, "Thanks, no. There's enough right here for us. Our Boy Scout community supper comes up tomorrow, and we volunteered to bring in plenty of solid oak for that barbecue pit. Sell you a couple of tickets? You'll have a good meal, and our troop goes to camp on the proceeds."

The next night a Scout escorted us down the hash-line where Scout fathers served us barbecued beans, salad and hunks of well-buttered, toasted bread. A half-dozen Scouts seated us (much flourish as my chair was efficiently placed under me) and attentively provided us with punch, coffee, and a wedge of home-made cherry pie—all good and seconds for everybody.

Such cheerful service had the families gathered at the long tables laughing and wondering whether their Mikes, Jims and Angelos would work like that at home from now on. Talk was enthusiastic and friendly, for we were all sharing an interest in the same thing—the success of these Scouts in their evening's function. Someone observed that tonight the boys were illustrating in every action that a Scout is indeed "helpful, friendly, courteous, cheerful and clean." Certainly we all appreciated the spirit of self-reliant responsibility (Please turn to page 187)

How to have "custom-designed" rugs at non-custom prices

By LAURA TANNER

Plain carpets have been a necessity for a long time because of the centering of pattern interest in the decorative fabrics of our rooms. With the trend to rich textured fabrics, pattern is coming back to our floors. Now for the price of your time, the carpet involved, plus tape and adhesive, you can create a patterned rug to your own taste with all the beauty of a handloomed, one-of-a-kind luxury. An ability to cut and paste, and a modicum of design skill can produce carpets as colorful and varied as any of the ones shown here and on the next six pages, most of which are amateur efforts.

Create a rug to go with an art treasure, add a border to a too small rug, or salvage a damaged or worn one with clever insets. Or change the architectural quality of a room with an ambitious wall-to-wall carpet like the one on page 142. We tell you how on page 145.

Wide expanse of gray Barwick carpet is broken by islands of pink and red. Decorator Maurice Sternberg has given a fillip to this party room by placing insets under glassed-topped table and at other strategic spots. Since installation is permanent, inserts are cemented directly to rubber underlay.

Hearth rug (left) is made from three pieces of 24″ x 36″ cotton carpeting from Masland. Note, on cutting charts, how every bit of green carpet was used, and how the leftover triangles from the white and aqua made another tiny bath mat. Design of overlapping bias strips was first made into a scale drawing, each cut carefully pencilled on the latex back. Great care must be exercised to keep grain of all the pieces going in same direction and not end up with two strips for the same spot. Tire cord mesh tape on a paper backing and Rug-Sealz adhesive join strips.

Simple device of setting random triangles of cerise carpeting to match the drapery material into this white bedroom rug gives it excitement and a special custom look. Designed by Ellen Lehman McCluskey for Gimbels, it was fabricated by K. N. Paster of latex-backed cotton carpeting by Artloom.

This wall-to-wall carpet is put together with two-foot squares laid on the floor like tiles. Some squares are cut into patterns with pieces transposed to create a quiet meandering decoration across the unfurnished area of the room. Two tones of "Tableau" by Karastan are used.

Because of the flexibility of the afghan-like squares, this wool carpet looks like custom weaving. Yet it can easily be taken up or rearranged into different patterns for other furniture arrangements or use in another room. A worn spot could be readily replaced.

An uninteresting room to begin with, it presented a difficult problem with this wall of doors. The patterning of the rug was mainly concentrated in this area which would necessarily remain free of furniture. Wall was given character by emphasizing pattern of door posts. Closet doors were replaced with stock metal panels pierced with little squares.

PASTING IS FUN and a big carpet goes together faster and easier than you think. Without any special skill or patience you can make a rug like this one

This pasted wall-to-wall carpet virtually remodeled the room. Bold composition of squares makes the floor a dominant architecural feature in a room where none existed before. Cutting and transposing the square pieces of carpet was as much fun as setting out flowers in a garden. Exactly enough square footage was purchased to cover the entire floor, half in gold and half in natural, so there would be no waste. Then the two colors were cut into two-foot squares. With the material reduced to these small scale units, it was easy to lay the squares out over the floor like tiles in a checkerboard, using the floor boards as a check on straightness. With all squares on the floor, nine of each color were cut into small geometric patterns (Text continues on page 154)

Square motif of rug pattern was suggested by square tiles in fireplace and the leaded glass casements—the room's only claim to architectural interest. Rug design weaves like vine shadow across floor interrelating three important elements in room: desk, bed, fireplace.

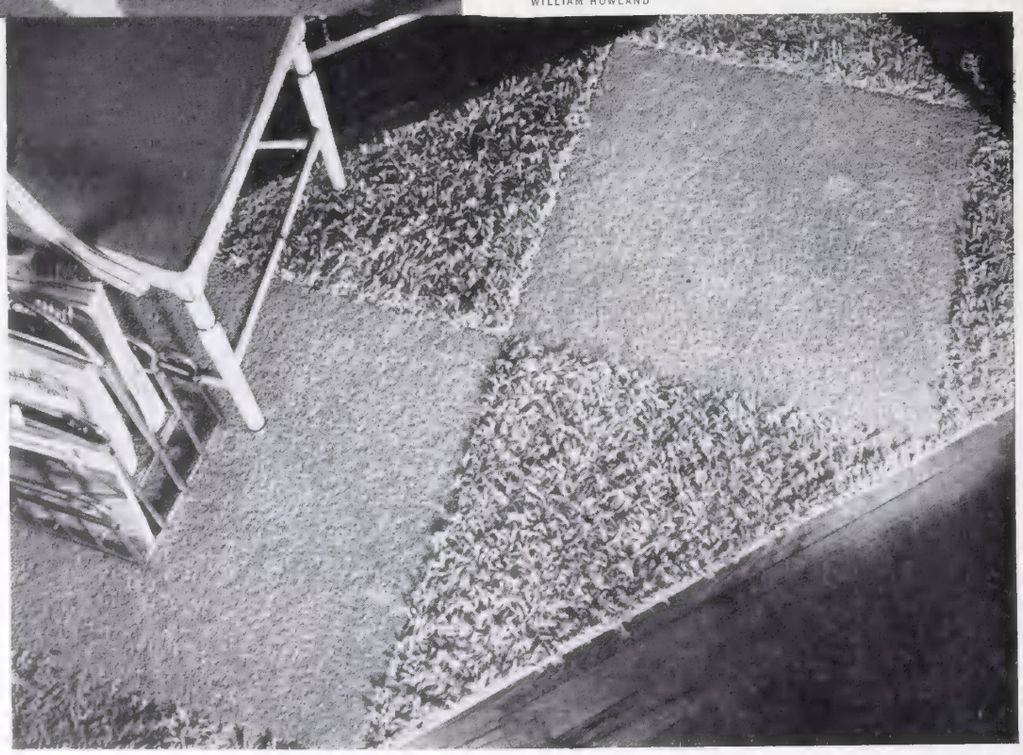
Possession of an art piece is a good take-off for designing a custom-made carpet. The one above, inspired by Swedish tapestry on rear wall, was made by Bigelow from our design. "Waikiki" blends Viscalon and nylon in white, gold, green and red.



Make a whole rug like this, or save a carpet by setting in strips to replace worn area in front of a sofa. Small squares cut from one color are reset in second color without waste.

Using three colors, you can create a more intricate design. Charts designate cuts economically planned so all strips will have grain in same direction. Work size out to suit your need.

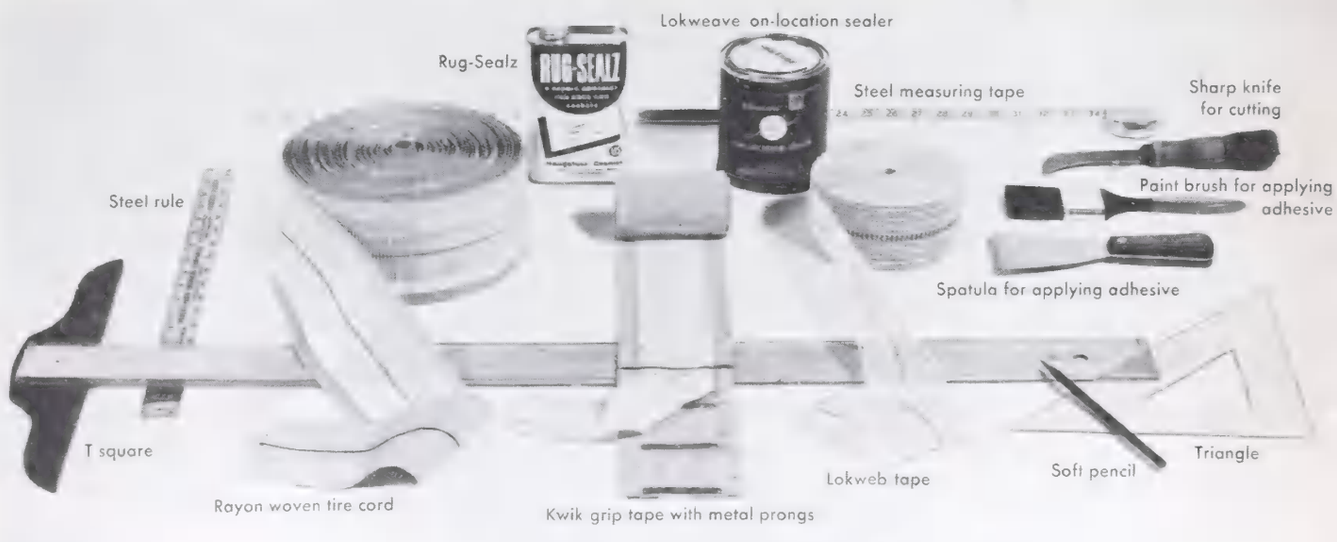
The hows and whys of pasting rugs by those who've done it

You can successfully put together a rug with a custom look, if you follow a few simple rules. Use a lock-weave type of carpet which has a latex backing. These two qualities will control the ravelling along the cut edges and make invisible seaming. You can find these non-ravelling characteristics in wools, cottons or blends, as virtually every manufacturer makes this type of construction. In short, use a tufted weave with a loop or cut pile. Wilton types and velvets are best left to the experts.

Most non-ravelling types of carpeting, which come in broadloom widths, are available also in 27″ and 36″ widths which can be cut economically into squares, diamonds and triangles.

You will find that almost all of these locked-in-tuft type of carpets will be finished on the back with a latex or with a plastic coating. This backing has many advantages. It keeps the carpet from skidding, gives a firmness helpful in marking and making a clean-edge cut. Always cut from the back. If you follow this procedure, very little of the actual pile will fall away.



Start your rug designing with simple straight lines, using triangles, squares or straight strips, because they are easier to cut and paste. Circles and curving lines require more care in cutting and more skill in joining than straight runs, but they are not impossible. Curved forms are also not as economical to use.

Using straight-line forms, you can achieve lovely effects by mixing two colors and by reversing the direction of some of the pieces so that light falling on the pile creates a third tonal effect.

Since the planning and cutting of your carpet is the most difficult and time-consuming part of the job, go about it in an orderly way. First work out the pattern on paper, bearing in mind the placement of furniture on or around the rug. Also your paper design must be based on the economical purchase and cutting of the carpet. This paper work is your guarantee against mistakes and waste. Color your diagram with crayons to be sure you are achieving a pleasing pattern which will not be too restless on the floor. The cutting diagrams on these pages are examples of how you should go about it, no matter in what size you plan to work. From this diagram mark out all your pieces on the back of the carpet before you start to cut. A heavy black lead or graphite pencil and a straight edge such as a yardstick are needed. A razor blade in a holder can be used, though it needs replacing often. A carpet knife is better and most good hardware stores have them. Use a straight metal edge to cut against.

Plot all cuts for various strips of carpet and be sure to keep grain going same way. This helps to disguise the seaming, if you want it to disappear. When circles or overlapping arcs are set in, or where you deliberately reverse grain for light shading, make your own rules. When the direction of the carpet is kept the same in all the pieces, seams will become invisible, so carpet of same color can be pieced together without seams showing. This is important in using up scraps.

Pasting your carpet together is quick and easy. We found pasting from face of carpet was easier than working with carpet upside down. But either method is satisfactory. (Please turn to page 155)

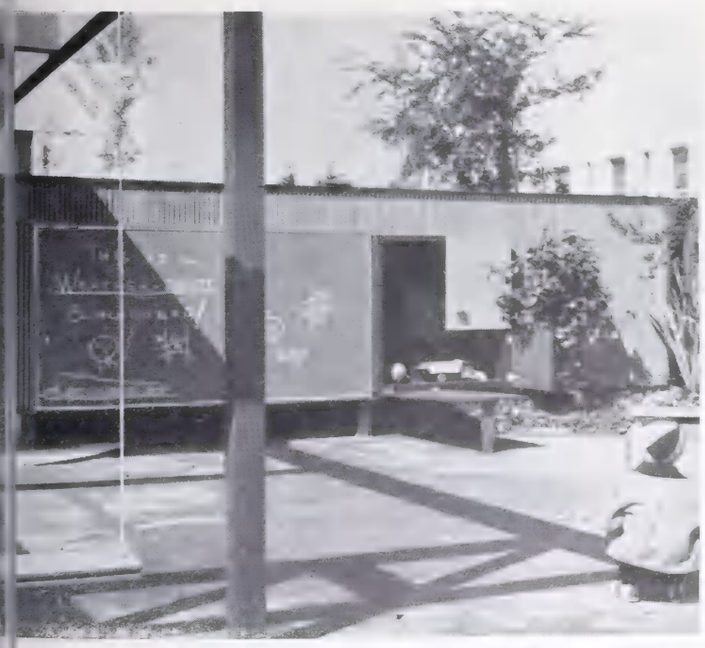
WHERE TO PUT THE PLAYGROUND

By THOMAS D. CHURCH
Landscape Architect

Children use the garden as much as, or more than, you do. Design it to fit their activities—and you, they and the delphiniums will all be happier



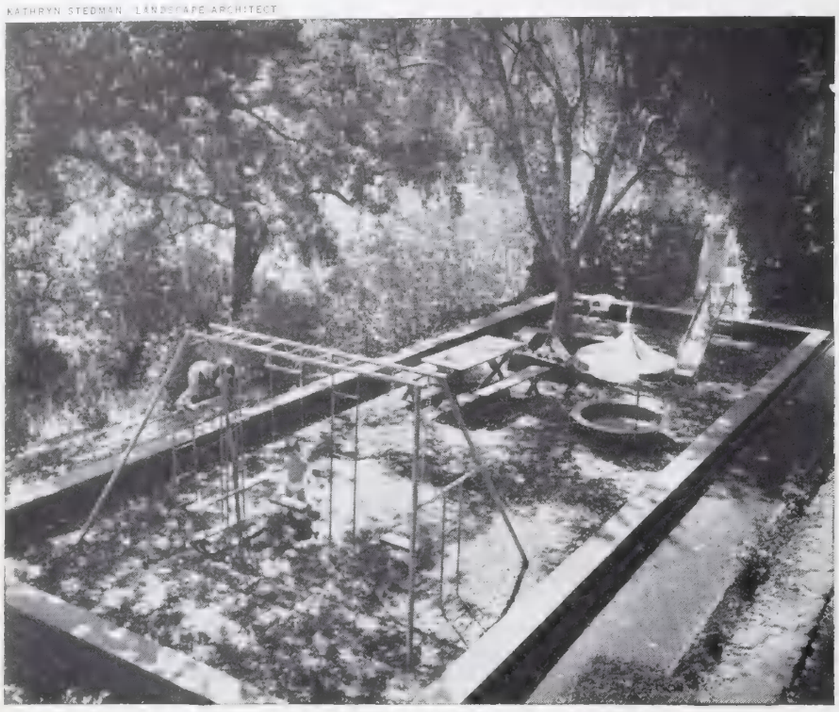
Children play where they have the most fun. To keep them in what you hopefully call "play space" you must make it the place they enjoy most in the yard. Let's see then what they like best to do. Run, jump, swing, throw, hide, ride and yell, of course.

Children have to dig, too—and in the dirt. I recall a garden we designed. It had a complete playground for the children. At least we thought it was complete. But the mother of the children asked, "Where's the dirt?" So we added a place to dig in the dirt. Then she asked, "But where's the mud? Children have to have mud." So we added a water line and a faucet.

But you want the playground to do more than entertain the children. You want it to provide a place to wash muddy hands and to get a drink of water, and to have some way to get into the bathroom without having children traipse through the house or across the adult terrace. You want it to guarantee safety. You want it easy to supervise. You hope that it will adapt readily to new interests as the children grow, and that eventually it will convert easily to other uses when playgrounds are no longer wanted. It is for all these interests that the playgrounds shown on these four pages were designed.

When playground can be a separate but visual part of the garden

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER



Answers to three questions determine whether or not this is a practical solution: First, from which rooms do you want to be able to watch the children at play? Second, can the design lines of the main garden and the playground flow together pleasantly? Third, will the play space be seen when it should be seen and screened when privacy or segregation is desirable? You see three very different solutions here—each designed for specific needs and sites—directly above by landscape architect Douglas Baylis, left above by Osmundson and Staley, and on the opposite page by Thomas Church.

If the children are to have a separate area of their own

y from the main garden

This is the ideal situation. Look for such play space directly outside their bedrooms or playroom. Or maybe it could be adjacent to an all-purpose family room. Easy access is important. There is bound to be heavy traffic, what with toys and the to-and-from-the-bathroom routine, which you want to keep from adult areas.

Then to be certain that these busy feet don't track mud into the house, be sure a hard-surfaced material connects this door with the terrace and all other places of interest to children.

The David Stone children (left) have such an arrangement. There wasn't enough natural shade close to the house so a lath shade was added. But you may have to go out into the yard to find space, as the Epsteins did (far left). Then look for a tree for shade, swings and climbing.

t occupy the same area

This is a real challenge, but care in four decisions can result in a highly workable solution. First, keep traffic patterns from conflicting. Study the plan at the left and you will see that children have a complete tricycle run circling the lawn and flower areas reserved for adult activities.

Second, all materials, both construction and planting, must be the durable types. They will be bumped and brushed and worn. Third, locate plantings out of danger from regular traffic, and protect them behind raised walls and seats when possible, as was done in the Littlefield garden you see here.

Fourth, provide enough of interest to the children to keep them out from under foot. Give them something to do—space to swing, jump, dig. You can't expect them to stay in their play space if they are bored and interesting things go on in your garden.

EDWARD HUNTSMAN-TROUT, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT

When what you do today can be converted later for new uses

Children grow so fast that today's needs are past as soon as tomorrow. This means that expensive solutions should have convertibility to be realistic. The sand "box" gets heavy traffic only until school starts, then it becomes "baby stuff." But while it is used, the child is in need of supervision, so a spot in the main terrace is called for, as in the Mudd garden above. Later, this can become a water garden or a mosaic of dwarf plants.

A trike circle (below) easily shifts into a roller rink or a dance floor without disrupting the basic garden layout. Additional "later use" ideas are given on page 214.

THE RIGHTS OF PARENTS

By JOSEPH A. BARRY

DRAWINGS BY ROY MCKIE

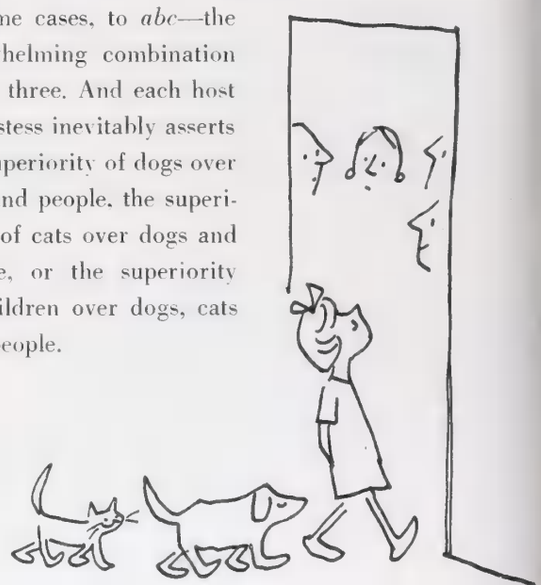
This entire issue is virtually devoted to the rights of children: their property rights (they have the run of the home and threaten to have the running of it too), their legal rights (we won't let them vote even at eighteen, but from birth we've given them a powerful voice in family affairs), and their ex post facto rights (they can blame any of their failures as adults on how we raised them as children).

How about the rights of parents?

It's a long time to New Year's, but not too long for this parent to start drawing up a list of resolutions, a sort of Magna Carta, a new Rights of Man, to present his two sons ($7\frac{1}{12}$ and $3\frac{5}{12}$ years old) on New Year's Day. Additions to the list are welcome, but it must be closed, alas, by Christmas.

1. We parents will allow our children to act their age, if they will allow us to act ours.

In Europe, we've observed, boys act like little men. In the U. S., men act like little boys. Let's all act our age. Let's tell our kids that they can pretend to be Hopalong Cassidy all they want, if we don't have to be his horse.



2. Children must learn to listen, even when their own parents are talking.

This is more serious than it might sound. If children won't listen when they are young, what will they have to say when they are grown up? Everyone knows that one's reputation for being a good conversationalist begins (and often ends) with his being a good listener. Besides, we parents could be casting a pearl or two worth picking up, even by the precocious children of the new, progressive generation. After all, we've had a life of trial and error. (Why is it always a life of trial and error?)

3. Children must not interrupt adults who have retreated to the living room for a profound discussion of politics, people and the decline of children.

It is well known that conversation among adults ceases whenever dogs, Siamese cats or children enter a living room. There is a prompt and unseemly descent to the level of the particular (a) (dog, (b) cat or (c) child. Each guest feels obliged to prove that he is irresistible to (a), (b) or (c), or, indeed, in some extreme cases, to abc—the overwhelming combination of all three. And each host or hostess inevitably asserts the superiority of dogs over cats and people, the superiority of cats over dogs and people, or the superiority of children over dogs, cats and people.

4. Children must respect the property rights of parents, as we respect theirs.

This must be done, of course, without hurting their (the children's) feelings. It must be explained to them in their own so-called simple language. For instance, when our older son, having thoroughly exhausted his comic books, turned to the magazine shelf to exfoliate the current New Yorker, his father reminded him firmly that "the New Yorker is Daddy's comic book and not to be touched." RUG PATTERNS

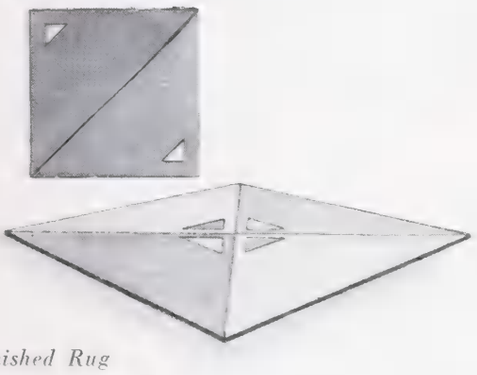
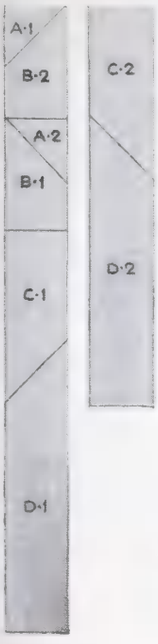
Cutting Diagram



Finished Rug

Plan designs without waste. We like the economy of starting with a full square, lopping off the corners in triangular cuts, as shown in 5, 6, 8 and 9. A square (7) then forms the diamond center of our rug. Though only two colors are used here, the joining of bias cuts of the darker hexagon will result in a color shading due to way light falls on pile.



Cutting Diagram

Finished Rug

Here is another simple but effective design that will make a handsome rug, easy to cut and paste; one that uses your carpet without wasting a scrap. Notice how the triangles cut near the corners are transposed so that dark motifs are reset in light surface, and vice versa. This design lends itself to mixing of textures, as well as using color contrasts or blends.

The striped motif here forms a more ambitious design, but one that would be fun to work out. This needs careful figuring and marking of cuts to know just where they go. The chevron effect will be pointed up if three colors are used. The narrow, light bandings can be joined invisibly to make whatever length you need. This rug can be scaled to any dimension.

PASTING RUGS IS FUN

Pieces of carpet can be fitted together right side up on the floor, then, one joint at a time, taped together right in place. Protective paper-backed tape keeps adhesive from running through onto floor. Heavily backed carpet like this stays in place without tacking. Rug lies loose on floor.

by cutting a 10½" square out of each corner of some, one or two squares out of the others. Whenever a natural-colored piece was cut, a matching gold square was cut so cut-outs could be interchanged.

By transposing these cut pieces of contrasting colors the monotony of the checkerboard was completely destroyed and infinite pattern variations were possible by altering juxtaposition of the squares.

Any wool carpet with a latex backing like this one which locks each tuft securely in place will paste well and lie flat. But if you are doing a wall-to-wall rug, the fittings of the final filler-pieces along the wall should be done after body of carpet is taped together.

(Please turn to page 170)

This little rug is an example of how well two textures can combine to make a border, an excellent device wherever a rug needs enlarging. Here Firth's shaggy Woolturf is joined to Tuftwoven V. I. Frieze; both come in many colors.

Although the sealers have the quality of rubber cement, binding and securing effectively, the seams can be pulled apart, if desired, unless the whole back is given an over-all brushing of latex. This makes it possible to take your pieces apart when you move, to be remade in other ways. If you wish your finished rug to be a permanent composition to be taken up for dry cleaning or shampooing, coat the whole back with latex. (Rugs without this extra latexing can be effectively cleaned or shampooed on the floor.)

All Bigelow "Lokweb" tape and "Lokweave-on-location Sealer" can be purchased wherever Bigelow rugs are sold, or at any carpet workroom. To buy in small quantities, you will need to order ahead of time. The "Rug-Sealz" and rug tape, and "Kwik-Grip" tape of U.S. Rubber are not in general distribution except to carpet workrooms.

Some types of clipped carpet will look neater if edge of finished rug is bevelled. To do this, clip the pile at a 45-degree angle with a pair of sharp scissors. In triangular designs, bias-cut pieces may occur along the finished edge of rug. In this case, a handsewn or press-on type of binding should be used to prevent ravelling and to give a neat finish. Or, in some cases, a brush-on coat of latex will secure the exposed threads.

If carpet pieces tend to slip while you are pasting them together, or getting them lined up, you may like to use "Kwik-Grip" (U. S. Rubber) which is another paper-backed mesh tape with small prongs that grip into the carpet backing. Adhesive is applied to the tape, and joining of strips is done from the face of the carpet.

Not only do most manufacturers make a locked-in-tuft weave, but they all use this construction to make twists, tweeds, shaggy textures, multi-colors, and each category has its own dozen or so of colors. Imagine how varied your materials are for fabricating a rug when, for example, in Firth's line alone, you have 121 variables that may be combined.

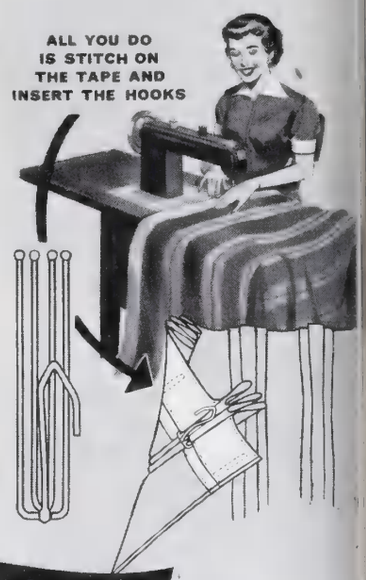
BOOKS FOR GARDENERS

Johnny Appleseed: Man and Myth, by Robert Price. Indiana University Press. 1954. $5.

Fifteen years ago the Men's Garden Clubs of America established the Johnny Appleseed Award. Today it is the most prized accolade in American horticulture for life service to its improvement.

John Chapman, the original Johnny Appleseed, devoted his life to extending the planting of fruit trees. His self-appointed mission was to establish little nurseries progressively west of migrating America so that as land was cleared Mr. Chapman would have trees ready for the new farmers. It wasn't all a business venture, though, as he believed in the dignity of creation in horticulture. For 50 years he championed both apple-growing and the Scriptures.

Chapman died 110 years ago. He was born in Massachusetts, lived and planted on the Pennsylvania frontier, moved on to establish a series of nurseries in Ohio, and spent his last years growing apple trees in Indiana. He may have visited Iowa, but certainly not to plant his beloved apple trees. That he planted the thousands of venerable apple trees that grow today from Maine to California known as Johnny Appleseed trees is impossible.



Chapman is a key figure in American horticulture precisely for the reason the Johnny Appleseed Award is made today by the Men's Garden Club of America—for recognizing a need in horticulture and for offering the appropriate service.

Robert Price has dedicated 25 years to separating fact (precious little) from fiction. (Johnny Appleseed has become one of the all-time great heroes of America, subject of a popular Walt Disney film in 1948, Carl Sandburg stories in 1926 and 1936, and even a widely heralded, though actually fictional TV "historical report" a few months ago.) The Price book makes good though not easy reading. John Chapman, the man who emerges, is quite unlike the Johnny Appleseed of fame. Surprisingly, though, he is both more bizarre and believable. Certainly he is more human. I have always been bothered by the tales of Johnny Appleseed I read as a boy. The man just didn't square with the kind of love for plants and the miracle of life I have come to know as a gardener. What Price has to say about the real John Chapman fixes this. His Chapman I can accept—and admire.—J.E.H.

could have been clearer (I think).

5. Children must respect the privacy rights of parents, as we, admittedly, do not respect theirs.

Being sinners, too, in this respect, we agree to knock on their bedroom door before entering, if they will knock on ours with the mutual understanding that each party must reply before the other party enters. If either party takes advantage of this and establishes an impenetrable and privileged sanctuary behind closed doors, we will refer to higher authority. (Ha, we know who the higher authority is, don't we? Or do we?)

6. Children must respect the TV rights of parents.

If they will let us have Baxter, Murrow, Sevareid and boxing, they can have the rest. They'll certainly have a lot. TV programmers have co-operated remarkably in seeing to it that children have no dearth of programs. And one thing more: we want children to allow us the freedom of not looking at their ding-dong, bang-bang, Howdy-Doody TV gruel. Otherwise we parents will be reduced to the impotency of Louis XVI or Nicholas II, Czar of all the Russias, and they (the children) will take over, as they openly plan, outlawing baths, bedtime and parents.

7. Children must not quote Gesell or other child psychologists when they are about to be spanked for misbehavior.

This parent has discovered (after, I'm afraid, a life of trial and error) that a $7\frac{1}{12}$ year-old and certainly a $3\frac{5}{12}$ year-old operate on a non-Euclidean system of logic. There are only curved lines in their reasoning. What these little boys want and what they think they should have always meet, they never parallel along in normal, straight lines of adult frustration.

For example, they want to investigate a toy shop across the street; therefore they should cross that street as quickly as their little legs will take them. No resort to adult reasoning about the menace of juvenile drivers seems to carry any persuasion. So, a firm hand has been used to keep the children from (a) exploring the possibilities of such intriguing things as matches, (b) dashing across the street and (c) playing drums and fifes at six in the morning. As for their quoting child psychologists to the effect that spanking will lead to worse things than terrible burns and sudden death, this adult, for one, considers himself somewhat of an expert; he was a child once himself.

8. Children must not keep reminding us how much better off other children are in other parents' families.

And we will not remind them how difficult it was to earn a dollar. (It was even harder for our parents, they still tell us.)

9. Children must not keep reminding us that "wholesome" food planned for children by home economists is always tasteless.

We've had enough troubles on this score already. Of course it's tasteless. That's why it develops character and teeth that can chew anything. (Between you and us, why doesn't Poppy Cannon work out a gourmet program for children, so we'll all be happy at the dinner table?)

10. If children won't wake us when they get up early in the morning, we promise not to wake them when we come home late at night.

They should also promise not to wake us late at night. But perhaps we should not ask too much, or we'll get nothing.

WELL, there they are. They can't be called Ten Commandments. Not if you are modern parents of modern children. Nor can they be called all-inclusive or even definitive. But fortunately we still have 113 days before New Year's to add to our list of resolutions, or rather our children's list of resolutions, and to consider adding any you might have to suggest.

It's clear now we must all act together, if we are to meet one of the most subversive efforts to wrest authority from those in authority and prevent family order from disintegrating in a new wave of anarchy. And we must be vigilant, for in our midst are adults who are untiringly aiding and abetting the enemy with the most eloquent, persuasive and over-published pens in the history of propaganda.

It is not too late. Or is it?

By JULIE POLSHEK

A few days ago I received for tasting a brand-new Verdake cooky from Holland, Sprits Roundies. Sprits are Holland's version of shortbread, a pastry that although Scotch in origin has traditional counterparts in many European countries. In Verdake's shortbread recipe there's a delicately flavored batter of lighter and airier consistency than that found in conventional shortbread. In baked form, the batter has a crispness and somewhat the same taste quality you find in fancy butter cookies. The Verdake product lends itself ideally to serving with tea, coffee or ice-cream. However used, it has great merit.

Sprits Roundies cost $2.90 for a package of two 11-ounce tins. From Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn, N. Y. (Shipping cost isn't included in price.)

Pistachios are a new addition to the dry-roasted nuts produced by Franklin Foods. As with the other varieties of nuts Franklin produces by their unique methods, calories are minimized and digestibility enhanced by a roasting procedure that reduces the oil content of the nut. Roasting is accomplished without the use of auxiliary oil (as with conventional nuts), a further source of calorie reduction. All this taste-wise, makes for a toasty, crisp product, flavorfully seasoned, that affords exceedingly tasty nibbling.

Distribution to date is limited, but mail orders will be filled by Franklin Foods, 2555 South State St., Ann Arbor, Mich., at a postpaid price of $1.60 per 5-ounce jar. Vacuum-packing preserves the freshness of the product.

Peanuts, almonds, filberts, cashews and mixed nuts produced by this same dry-roasted method are also available. These varieties cost, respectively, 95¢ for the peanuts and $1.60 for any of the other varieties. All are roasted with skin intact. Each of these four jars contains from nine to ten ounces.

Great Valley Mills comb the Pennsylvania-Dutch countryside for unusual, homemade specialties of the region. Among the interesting foods hey've acquired in this manner re a pair of vegetable relishes hat are deliciously prepared in the egion itself.

One, Garde Sache, contains crisp, izable pieces of cauliflower; green nd wax beans; slices of cabbage; elery and onions; niblet corn; idney beans; diced carrots; bits f red peppers. The pickling brine as the sweet-and-sour quality hich we have all become famil- ar with in Pennsylvania-Dutch ookery.

The second relish, Sees Wels- orn, is a blend of niblet corn, elery, onion, bits of tomatoes and t red peppers. Here again there's weet-and-sour pickling. The price f either relish is $1.75 for three 2-ounce jars, plus shipping cost. Ordering address is Great Valley Mills, R.F.D. Ivyland, Bucks Coun- y, Pa.

Other homemade specialties of he region available from this ource are Gepickled Cauliflower nd a product called Senfgherkin ade of peeled, young cucumber trips; also an unusual chili sauce lavored with peppers, cucumbers nd onions. These three products, n 3-jar quantity, cost $1.55, $1.69, $1.69 respectively; in each instance nailing cost is extra.

I didn't believe that Welsh rabbit s fine as that packed under the Major David label was produced ommercially. Cheese, the ingre- lient that sets the pace for any abbit, is aged cheddar, sharp nough to be duly assertive. The nly other ingredients are fresh ggs, English mustard, Worcester- hire sauce and beer. All of these ontribute to a blend that has scin- illating verve and rich taste.

Aside from conventional uses, he product affords an interesting lressing for hearty vegetables such as green beans. Along this same ine of thinking, it lends itself to se in many ways in place of heese sauce. With the addition of lour and butter, the rabbit offers short cut in making a cheese oufflé.

LaEstrelle preserved Satsuma range shells netted me one of the nost interesting adventuring sprees I've had in a long time. Possibly because the label on the can gave no clue to the use of the contents beyond that of filling the shells with cream cheese, my adventuring instinct took over. Putting the rich-flavored orange shells through an electric blender produces delicious purée to incorporate into molded salads, ice cream or sherbet. The purée also makes a rich-flavored "baste" for duck or ham or a topping for puddings and other desserts. In small slices or chopped, the orange shells lend new flavor interest to cake mixes or icings, fruit salads, a favorite on the menu all year long.

Should all this "sweet talk" propel you into buying action, I'm sure you'll be doing further adventuring on your own.

The Cuban Satsuma orange used for this product has a rich, pungent flavor somewhat similar to the tangerine.

If you are unable to find this LaEstrelle product in your food shops, it can be ordered directly from the importer, Joseph Victori & Co., 164 Pearl Street, New York 5, New York. The price per 15-ounce can, exclusive of mailing cost, is 55 cents.

LaEstrelle guava shells in syrup can be had from Victori's for the same price; also a de luxe pack of grated Cuban coconut in heavy syrup that, spooned over vanilla ice cream, affords a delectable dessert. Victori's asks that mail orders include 20 per cent over the cost of the products ordered to apply against shipping cost.

On a recent browsing expedition, I encountered a versatile New England sauce in which tomatoes, English mustard and a subtle trace of onion supplement cooked salad dressing. The interesting blend on first taste is piquant; then suddenly, the fiery sharpness of mustard assumes flavor dominance, leaving a wonderfully warm aftertaste in your mouth.

The product has considerable taste interest used as a sauce for ham or hamburgers or for dressing vegetables such as broccoli, green beans, asparagus; where sea foods are concerned, it affords a tasty cocktail "dip" or a dressing for lobster or crab meat salads. Mildred Bailey's Olde Boston Hostess Sauce is produced by home-kitchen methods and the quality ingredients used include creamery butter and fresh, whole eggs.

Mail shipment of the sauce can be had from B. Altman & Co., Fifth Ave. at 34th St., New York; the price of three 5-ounce jars is $1.59 plus mailing cost.

It's no wonder women enthuse so over a Kitchen Maid Kitchen. For this magnificent kitchen is so delightfully different—from the beauty of its new Nutmeg finish to the warmth and permanence of its hardwood construction—it stands alone and apart, like a precious stone. Flo-Line styled in any of seven soft colors, with fabulous, fingertip conveniences, a Kitchen Maid Kitchen is as distinguished as its host of celebrated owners. See it—compare it—and you'll agree with Miss Emerson...Kitchen Maid's for you!

"Different indeed" says Miss Emerson. "Look at this ironing board that slides out at your finger-touch ready for use. And it's only one of scores of such features."

the most enjoyable, sure-fire hits are the casual, unorganized and homemade type of party. At our own house I let the youngsters share in every phase of the preparations. We usually start by putting our heads together and deciding on a motif for the party. This theme is then carried out on the invitations, in the decorations, on the paper plates and napkins, on the cake and in the games.

AT THE three- to four-year level the party motif is usually something elementary, like the circus, cowboys, or valentines, for example. A few days before a circus party, our three children and their neighborhood pals make clowns, lions, and seals out of colored paper. The night before the party I paste these homemade decorations onto a large dining room mirror. No matter how primitive the art work is, the effect is always greater than grownups expect.

Once, when we used a "space patrol" theme, the homemade rocket ships, planets and shooting stars were so genuinely admired that at the end of the party the guests asked if they might take them home. Thus the homemade "favors" gave me, as well as the children, a much greater sense of satisfaction than store-bought toy prizes ever had.

I like to center the party itself around a meal—either a 12 o'clock lunch or an early supper. It takes very little extra work, I've found, to serve something wholesome before the candy, ice cream and cake. It's my theory that feeding little children generous helpings of sweets in the middle of the afternoon ruins their appetites for the next meal and interferes with naps.

Game: Knocking hat off snow man with snowballs (In warmer climates, "snow man" can be a pillow, "snowballs" of Styrofoam.)

Table favors: Glass balls, obtainable in variety stores, that make "snow storm" when you shake them.

Space Man Party

Decorations: Toy rocket ships, planets, "flying saucers," stars and so forth.

Entertainment: Amateur magician (There's sure to be an adult or older boy in the neighborhood whose hobby is sleight-of-hand.)

Table favors: "Surprise pie" (Tie favors to colored string, place in a laundry basket or big box and cover the top with tissue paper; at signal, every one pulls on string tearing paper like opening of a pie.)

Cowboy or Ranch Party

Decorations: Toy horses, guns and rail fence.

Entertainment: Hayride and song fest.

Table favors: Toy guns and lassos.

Pirate Party

Decorations: Treasure chest, toy boats, "Jolly Roger" flag with skull and crossbones.

Entertainment: Treasure hunt with printed clues.

Table favors: Gold candy coins in bags.

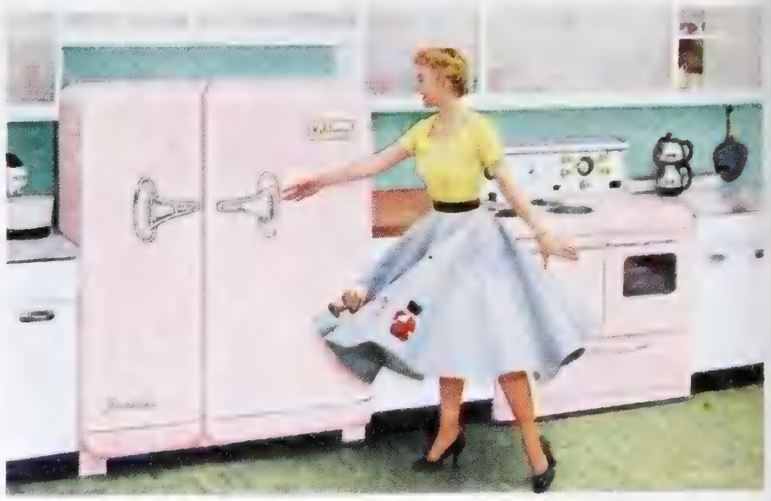
...THE FABULOUS "FOODARAMA" BY KELVINATOR!

A NEW STAR is born in the foodkeeping field! From Kelvinator comes a new concept in modern living. Here is the ultimate result of years of planning and more than four decades of appliance experience. It is the fabulous FOODARAMA—without an equal anywhere.



Open one door to a whole new kind of luxury living—freezer living. Here is an upright freezer with storage space for 166 pounds of delectable meats and frozen foods.

Open the other door to the finest refrigerator built—11 cu. ft. of refrigeration that never needs defrosting—the magic of "moist cold" to keep food dewy-fresh, roll-out shelves, moisture-seal Crispers.

And in the doors themselves are the conveniences you've always longed for. In the refrigerator, there's the handy Breakfast Bar for bacon, eggs and juices, Cheese and Butter Chests, bottle and jar storage. And in the freezer door an ice cream shelf, frozen juice racks, freezer wrap dispenser, and even an unrefrigerated place to store bananas.

This last word in food keepers can be yours—at far less cost than a comparable separate refrigerator and freezer.

See it at your Kelvinator Dealer. Or write Kelvinator, Detroit 32, Michigan. In Canada: Kelvinator of Canada, Ltd., Toronto 15, Ontario.

A lot of overexhaustion, tears and temper can be avoided by simply ending the festivities well before nap time or else starting late enough in the afternoon so that all the guests arrive rested and in good spirits. Try it once and see if such a time schedule doesn't make a party easier for you.

As for food, I stick to things the youngsters can eat with their fingers—sandwiches, carrot sticks, celery, potato chips and the like. Served small-size hamburgers and hot dogs in miniature buns (made to order at any bakery), they will eat seconds and thirds; without realizing it, even those with small appetites tuck away a good base of solid food before the dessert. It's a sound tenet of child psychology that a well-fed child is a happy child.

My idea of suitable entertainment for little children is extremely simple. At the beginning of a party we line up our family collection of wheel toys and have them waiting for the first arrivals. There's something about seeing a fleet of tricycles, wagons, scooters and sleds (sleds on wheels) waiting to be ridden that acts as an ice-breaker for young party-goers.

After an introductory period of free play we usually have a couple of casual games that don't involve rules or competition. I've found that any attempt to make the pre-school age group play games with involved directions is doomed to failure. This is true, too, of games in which keeping score or waiting in line for a turn is necessary. The parent is put in the position of being a referee; and being reminded of what to do next irritates the children and takes the spontaneity out of their play.

When the party theme is the circus, we would probably have a peanut hunt. There are no rules in this fun-for-all game, and there are no prizes, for the fun is in finding the peanuts, collecting them in a bag and then eating them. We might have one of our own variations of "Pin the Tail on the Donkey," too.

The latter is a traditional game at children's parties. My objection to the way it is usually played is that the donkey is too small in scale for clumsy little hands. Children need and like to handle big objects—an outsize donkey and real tails. Therefore, when we plan to play the game, I have one of the older children draw a huge donkey on brown wrapping paper. In place of paper tails we use pieces of rope that are much more realistic, even to the frayed ends, and much more fun to handle.

A VARIATION is "Tape the Nose on the Clown." (We use Scotch Tape.) My helpers paint a 3-foot clown on cardboard (the bottom of a suit box does nicely). Instead of the "tail" we have small red balloon noses, inflated ahead of time. And again, there is no single winner. However, if the game seems to call for prizes (the children's familiarity with this type of game may lead them to expect prizes) I give a prize for the highest "nose," the one farthest from the face, the funniest placement, the silliest and so on, until every child gets a trinket. I let the youngsters have several turns if they're enjoying the game.

Other variations on the donkey game include: "Pin the Cotton Tail on the Rabbit." "Stick the Black Patch on the Pirate." "Put the Feather on the Indian." Or you can create your own combination of a real object and a big target to suit the particular party theme.

When the birthday child comes of school-age, a wider variety of party ideas is possible (for instance: treasure hunts with printed clues, a hayride followed by a cook-out where the guests barbecue their own hot dogs and, in some parts of the country, swimming pool parties). But the same principles apply. This means that the whole family helps with the preparations, that you serve a meal and that the entertainment is modest.

entered the older age group, I let him take over most of the preparations for his birthday party this year. He had chosen comics for his theme, so in the days before the big date the children drew Mickey Mouse in dozens of poses and Donald Duck and Bugs Bunny in assorted sizes. Then they composed the cartoon characters on the mirror by themselves. I helped them use pinking shears to cut place mats out of funny papers and stick them to the dining room table with Scotch Tape so they'd stay put. Our place cards were comic cut-outs: the favors were a yo-yo and a comic book for each guest.

After supper there were 16mm movie cartoons (I had broken my own rule and rented some), and that was a mistake. Halfway through, the boys got restless. The movies were old and dated and not funny enough to hold their interests. It looked as if we were about to have a free-for-all in our living room when I suddenly had a brain storm, stopped the show and asked the children if they'd rather see the movies of last year's birthday party. The answer was a chorus of yes's.

One reel led to another. We dipped into our library of home movies that covered virtually the same group of friends back to their kindergarten days. The children were alternately convulsed with laughter at seeing themselves a few years back or else puzzled trying to figure out exactly who was who in each shot. So in the end my do-it-yourself entertainment policy paid off again in another successful birthday party.

WHEN I hear other mothers moan because it's about time to give another party, I pity them, because for me, at least, children's parties are fun. They are fun because I keep reminding myself that the point of the party is to give the youngsters a good time. If they really want to wear blue jeans, I let them. If the cake looks so delicious that their fingers itch to scoop up a taste, that's all right with me. If they rearrange the table seating at the last minute (a thing that I hate to have my husband do at adult functions), it doesn't bother me a bit. "It's their party," I keep telling myself as the occasion progresses.

And we never have to cope with rowdiness or undue noise, because every one in the family, as well as the neighborhood gang, has had a hand in the preparations. Each of us has a personal interest in making things go pleasantly. At the end of the affair we're tired but flushed with success because we've chalked up one more party that everyone enjoyed.

important for a girl to develop her own creative talents so that she can lead a full and independent life—alone, if necessary."

In keeping with this first aim, Toni has always been included in every homemaking activity. Both her grandmother and mother are enthusiastic cooks, so that from the time she could lick a bowl she was allowed to play around the kitchen. She heard recipes discussed with the same eagerness as fashions or art. As soon as she could read she, too, began leafing through cookbooks (her specialty is pastry making). Mrs. Gimbel calls her daughter a "lucky" cook because she has amazing success with cakes that fail even in the most experienced hands.

Toni also has a good basic knowledge of furniture and decorating that she's picked up by association. Before Toni was old enough to go to school, she was taken through half the antique shops in Connecticut. As her mother shopped for the New England "salt box" house in which they then lived, she learned to recognize early Americana and other antiques. At a tender age she could distinguish between milk glass, Lowestoft and Meissen the way other children know Mickey Mouse from Donald Duck.

Then the family moved to Florida and built a one-story contemporary house. They sold most of their antiques and started from scratch. Toni took an even more active interest in this new home. She'd sit by while her mother conferred with the architect and decorator. She learned a lot. The professional men were kind enough to answer her questions, and they didn't mind explaining why they did certain things in a certain way.

When it came to decorating her own room, Toni was allowed to choose the fabrics and the bright yellow paint that went on the walls. She also sat down with her mother and worked over the sketch for her custom-built work table. It had to be large enough to hold an artist's tilt board, strong enough to support a portable sewing machine, good for card games and for an occasional meal. It was Toni's idea to have small drawers on all four sides to hold her drawing and sewing supplies. (Her Girl Scout troop is taking the junior Singer Sewing Machine course so she recently added dressmaking to her list of feminine skills.)

BECAUSE Mrs. Gimbel is a meticulous housekeeper, she and Toni gave a lot of thought to the storage in her daughter's room. The mother in particular wanted to make sure that as little as possible of teen-age clutter would be left out in plain sight. So they allotted one closet to craft supplies, books, and records, another closet to clothes. A cork-strip bulletin board was put above the beds so that Toni would get in the habit of mounting and displaying her art prints in a tidy, decorative way instead of spreading them over all the walls in an unattractive manner.

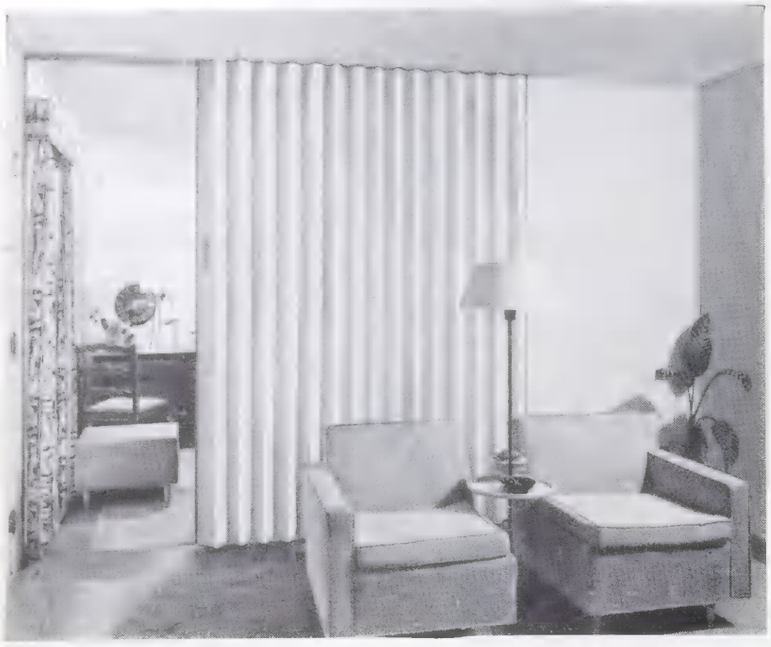
A good half of the room was left free for a piano and an easel. The easel and paints were tucked away in a corner where there is no carpet but a rubber tile flooring. If Toni drips paint she can easily wipe up the spots with a damp rag or sponge.

This minute planning seems to be making a very orderly girl of one teenager, who is so proud of her room that she actually enjoys not only working in it, but also keeping it neat.

Toni, who happens to have unusual eyes that are half brown and half blue, is conscious of her femininity; she has been told that her eyes are a sign she'll be a beauty some day, and she loves that. She also likes restyling her own hair and trying out new clothes ideas. For instance, she thought up the idea of sewing gingham patches on the seat of her blue jeans just to be different.

But it wasn't until her first boy-girl party that Toni really got an inkling of what is ahead for her. At the beginning of the party she was shy and nervous about the things she'd planned. She was afraid her guests wouldn't have a good time. But she needn't have worried. Her new home made a fine impression on her friends. She and her mother had sensibly decided on an informal affair where everybody wore cottons and jeans. They served hot dogs and hamburgers out on the terrace, and the entertainment was dancing and toasting marshmallows.

When she was asked later what she liked best about the party, Toni answered without hesitation—"The kissing games."



IT IS pretty well agreed around the Gimbel house that Toni will study commercial design. She would like to go to Pratt Institute in New York from which her mother was graduated. But even without training, Toni has a flair for art. She makes her own greeting cards, place cards for mother's dinner parties, and many gifts. With an enamel kiln that her father gave her she designs jewelry for birthday and Christmas presents. She collects shells and trims them with sequins and pearls to wear on her clothes. She does beadwork and she has tried her hand at ceramics. Her versatility might confuse a less open-minded parent, but Mrs. Gimbel, too, can turn her hand to many skills. She thoroughly approves of Toni having such a great variety of hobbies and interests.

"I want her to try any of the art mediums that appeal to her," says her mother. "At Toni's age you can't experiment enough. All I ever tell her is not to dawdle. If she gets an idea, she should carry it out right away and not let it slip through her fingers."

Having a big room where she can execute ideas is a boon to any young girl. In Toni's case, her interests are unusually wide. In addition to crafts, she takes lessons in painting, music, dancing and dramatics—not all at once, of course, but for concentrated periods of time. She studied piano, for example, until her teacher moved from Miami. However, she plays well enough for her own enjoyment. Having a piano in her room means that she and her girl friends can have a session of popular music without disturbing anyone in the rest of the house with their musical fun.

It is inevitable that Toni will grow up gracefully and with some purpose. It will be due, in part, to having her eyes opened to the opportunities around her and then being encouraged to do something with them. She is fun now. A few years from now she should be a person of consequence.

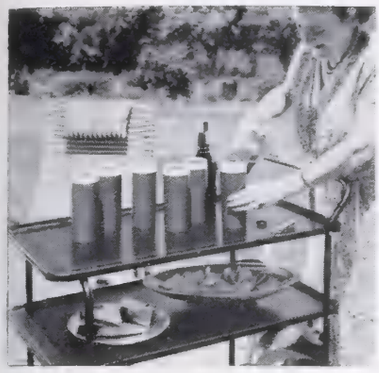
Coffee for party occasions is a simple matter with Tricolator's 24-48 cup Caterette urn. Brewing is electrical from cold-water stage on and controlled heat keeps the brew hot for serving. Also, impressive coffee economy is achieved by urn's triple-filtration cycle of extraction. Urn operation requires only an AC wall outlet. Ruggedly made of heavy aluminum; range-type electric heater. $49.95. From Goldsmith's, 77 Nassau Street, New York, N.Y.

Rol-O-Tint Sunshield operates like a window shade: an easy pull lowers it for use or retracts it when not needed. In use, screen is anchored by clip or suction cup, both on the pull bar. Screen, a new tinted acetate, neutralizes even the glare of dazzling sun rays; color perception remains normal. Chromed metal case is held by windshield's top molding. $5.95 for 18″ width; 20″, $6.95. From Holiday Hall, 549 W. Washington Street, Chicago 6, Ill.



Air-Lite Window Shield opens at center or sides; folding panels have rods top and bottom. You can equip any portion of a window in choice of six panel heights (20-23-26-29-32-35″) and remove panels at will. Curved or straight rods have brackets for use on molding's inner or outer face. Strong window-shade fabric, wood-reinforced. White, ecru, cream. For window widths to 38″, $6.95 a pair. From Air-Lite Co., 51 E. 34th St., N.Y.C.

Four screws mount Dor-Bac Workshop on a wall or closet door. Folded, it's only 18″ x 40″ x 7″. Unfolded, the strong steel unit (gray Hamerloid finish) supplies 18″ x 40″ x 1″ work bench, locking legs adjustable for leveling. There's an 18″ x 40″ perforated panel for hanging tools, a hanging gooseneck lamp, 2 electric outlets with 8-foot cord. $39.50 complete. Matching base cabinet has 4 shelves. $15. From Marshall Field's, Chicago, Ill.

Hi-kool Therma-Glass keeps drinks iced for a long time even with outdoor serving. You don't need coasters because tumbler doesn't sweat; when used to keep beverage hot, the outside surface remains cool. Styron plastic construction consists of tumbler with liner, nesting that effects insulating properties. Charcoal; pink or white liner. Melon, green or yellow; white liner. Set of 6. $4.98. From Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Humidity control provided by Kem-Air in refrigerator or freezer substantially reduces frost accumulation. Operating cost goes down, efficiency goes up and foods remain fresh and flavorful for a long period. Chemical action of unit's mineral eliminates odor and flavor transfer from food to food. You dry Kem-Air every few months in oven or sun; with this reactivation it serves for years. $3.95. From Downs & Co., Evanston, Ill.

Rub'N'Rinse Cloth cleans and polishes silver with unusual effectiveness and absolute safety. Cloth's impregnation contains cleansing detergents that dispel the heaviest tarnish, plus polishing ingredients that impart lustrous beauty to cleansed surface. You wet silver, clean it, then simply rinse and dry it. A 6″ x 6″ and 12″ x 13″ cloth. $1. Cloths remain effective indefinitely. From Jonard Co., Box 92, Springfield, Pennsylvania.

K-V Shelf Bracket Assembly provides powerful hardware for adjustable shelving installations. Shelf brackets (8″) hook into slotted wall supports providing a self-leveling, firm installation that remains straight even under great weight. Wall supports (5/8″x7/16″ x24″ can be butted vertically or horizontally for multiple installations. Satin-chrome finish. 4 brackets, 2 supports cost $3.95. From Patterson's, 15 Park Row, N. Y.

You can waive plumber aid to clear clogged toilets if you acquire a Toilaflex plunger. It combines an accordion-action compression chamber and a tapered tail devised to seal any shape or size of toilet trap; jointly, they create blasting air pressure that speedily forces the most stubborn obstruction down the sewer. Plunger operates at any angle with full compression power. $2.65. From Stevens-Burt, New Brunswick, N. J.

Once you have the design arranged to please you, the taping goes fast. Right on the floor with the carpet right side up and with the pieces in place, you simply lift back the edges of adjoining pieces, lay a strip of paper-backed-tire-cord-mesh tape on the floor, brush on the sealer with a small paint brush, and press the carpet back down. Joints between matching colors are barely perceptible provided the direction of the weave is kept the same in both pieces.

Like rubber cement, the sealer bonds the backing and the tape. But if a stain or worn place should eventually need replacing, the tape can be peeled off or cut with a razor blade. In the same way the pattern of the rug could be changed for other arrangements.

MICHAEL GREER, A.I.D., of Nancy McClelland, Inc., decorated this all-nylon room in warm fall tones.

A luxurious room . . .

because every fabric is made of Du Pont Nylon

Traditional and modern combine in a gracious room that is carefree, too, because every fabric is Du Pont nylon. Soft velvet enjoys new practicality for chairs and benches . . . thanks to nylon. Crisp nylon taffeta for the draperies and sofa promises both beauty and long wear. And for all its luxurious air, the carpet will wear valiantly, because it is made of 100% Du Pont nylon. Look for lovely, easy-care home fashions made of Du Pont nylon at your favorite store.

TAFFETA takes its name from the Persian taftah, meaning a twisted weave. Today's newest taffeta, while retaining its lovely texture, is easy to care for and amazingly long-wearing because it is made of Du Pont nylon.

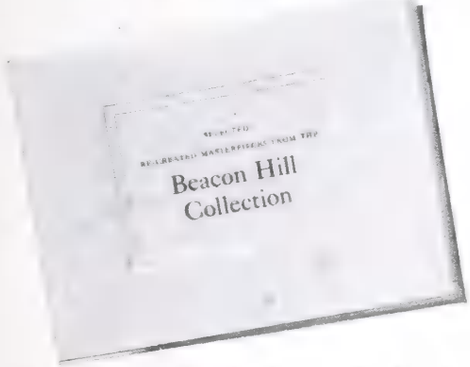
epellence, to put an end to track narks that especially afflict light arpeting. Yet another, which is eing applied directly by certain ug manufacturers to rayon rugs, ut is also available for home use y the consumer herself, can be rushed on walls, wallpaper, fabics and carpets to give them remarkable resistance to dust and its oiling marks. Dust literally slithrs off, won't stick. This finish eeds reapplying after cleaning. A hemical called colloidal silica nakes this possible, but the name hould not be confused with silicones, which are something else gain.

Wallpapers—and they may even e those erstwhile fragile papers, atterned in soluble tempera colrs like some of the French imorts—can be made thoroughly washable by the application of a ynthetic resin coating. This can e a matte finish, in which case he appearance of the paper is nchanged, or a glossy finish. Smudges, food stains, crayon marks, ipstick—these simply wipe off. Stubborn stains come off with Clorox. The coating can go on any kind of paper, so you no longer need compromise on the wallpaper pattern in order to be sure your choice is practical. You can buy this coating by the bottle and apply it to wallpapered walls with a certain type of lamb's wool roller. Or the finish can be given to paper in the roll before it is hung by sending it to a plant for processing. Paperhangers and do-it-yourselfers are enthusiastic about this because they don't have to handle the paper as gingerly as they must when it is untreated and prone to paste smudges.

MANY fabrics may be bought already treated with water-repellent and wrinkle-resistant finishes. This puts fragile-looking colors into the picture as practical possibilities. For the most part these are apparel fabrics, usually only 36″ wide as opposed to the 54″ width most usable for home furnishings. But some of them, as for instance, the new water-repellent, wrinkle-resistant, patterned corduroys, might very well be the makings of charming curtains and spreads in a child's room. (Several of the most popular decorative fabrics, like denim, first came into the home from the dress goods counter, because someone had the wit to put their durability to home furnishings use.) Many, many fabrics can be treated for water repellence by the same methods that reapply the finish to your raincoat, so it is a good idea to find out what finishes your dry cleaner may be able to give to fabrics in yard goods. In larger cities there are plants which are equipped to do just that.



It's really the ounce-of-prevention philosophy that characterizes most of our home furnishings materials these days and makes your lot easier and the youngsters' rooms prettier. For example, if you leave a child alone with a bedspread you can depend upon the bedspread's being wrinkled. But, knowing this, you can now realistically select a fabric that is wrinkled to begin with, that must look wrinkled in order to be pretty, that is simply washed out and let drip dry, that would be desecrated if you touched it with an iron! The market is loaded with such, many of them with their creases chemically set in them so that they'll last a long while. Seersucker, crinkle crepe and plissé in cotton and nylon, nylons and cottons embossed with puffings that make the fabric look as if it were quilted, muslins deliberately and interestingly striated with the permanent texture of random creases—these are all naturals for bedspreads or slipcovers.

VISUALLY, the ounce of prevention for soil marks is the busy, small allover pattern like a calico print in which marks get lost. We don't mean to imply that this is a substitute for laundry, but at least slight soil doesn't show up and take the bloom off the fabric.

The same principle applies to furniture. If you choose it with the slightly mottled finish called "distressed"—which means a pleasant sort of nicked and battered and much-used look deliberately given at the factory to make it look antique—you won't have to worry much about the additional nicks and batterings that its owners will inevitably give it. The markings make it a soil-camouflage, too.

You'll find this finish usually on provincial or colonial types of furniture, on pine, maple and fruitwood.

Another way to thwart the destructive behavior patterns of the young—and it may seem unorthodox at first blush—is to give their rooms painted surfaces that are actually the equivalent of what we used to call blackboards, only they are now an eye-pleasing, decorative green. You accomplish this by painting surfaces (woodwork, dadoes, wall panels) with a pleasant green paint which welcomes chalk marks just as slate does and which is just as easily erasable. With dado and doors painted like this and an upper wall covered with a crayon-spurning wall covering, how could your headaches be slighter! The paint, incidentally, is designed to create writing surfaces in schoolrooms and playrooms, the green color being especially applauded by experts as one that prevents eyestrain and helps the young retain what they see written on it. And, speaking of paint, non-toxic, quick-drying enamels are particularly welcome for the finishing of woodwork or furniture in rooms where the very young may be inclined to chew on the furnishings.

WALL coverings that stand up to the young currently run the gamut of materials: scrubbable plastic tiles of hard polystyrene, in a wide range of color, sometimes with a striated, combed texture, and a non-glaring matte finish, in 9″ x 9″ sizes and easy to install; vinyl tiles on a flexible back, also in many colors and easily installed; wall coverings that look like wallpaper but actually are fabric coated with stain-impervious vinyl plastic, with patterns printed in vinyl ink; all sorts of scrubbable, durable coated fabric wall coverings, now so made that they need no special adhesive other than old-time wallpaper paste; panels of perforated board which give the room's occupant plenty of pin-up space for accumulated treasures. (You can acquire hooks that fit into the board's holes.) This versatile pegboard, which to a degree deadens the sound in the room and is consequently the family's protection against too much phonograph, noisy games, et al., may also serve as a dart board. It can be painted to fit into the color scheme. Lately a melamine plastic pegboard noted for its toughness and in a variety of colors has come on the market.

Cork, for its noise deadening quality, its resilience to pins, blows and dart games, its interesting texture and naturally "distressed" surface, makes an excellent wall surcovering, whether it is used in its natural coloring or painted, as it was in the pastel room on page 129. For extremely rugged wear (in boys' rooms, for example) the dark, very coarse textured and least expensive insulating cork of the type used by builders makes a smart looking wall. The material comes in flat squares and slim "bricks"—an asset because when the wall gets picked at and worn, it may be easily rejuvenated by the replacement of one or two squares or blocks. A new painted form of this cork is now on the market. We've seen white blocks laid in a brick pattern so that the wall of a room acquires the look of a painted brick wall.

PLASTICS, with their limitless, non-fading, easily kept, durable colors, are creating brand new concepts of furniture for children's rooms. Time was when the younger generation's quarters were either furnished in castoffs (on the principle that no kind of abuse could make the old stuff look any worse) or in cute, unrealistic midget-size furniture that was soon outgrown but not before its pink and blue paint and bunny-rabbit decorations began to look tired from hard knocks. Now, what a beneficent choice you have, what wherewithal to make the nursery as aesthetically pleasing as any other room in the house! With tough plastic laminate surfaces on table tops, dresser tops, and drawer facings, there is now furniture that is proof against practically every type of depredation a child can think up. Yet it is so designed that after years of active service in a child's room it can still be the mainstay of the bedroom when the child becomes adult. These laminates, impervious to stains, water spills, paints, crayons, hard knocks, now show up on existing furniture in white, pink, satiny black, brilliant colors and in wood patterns, all of them practicalities because they respond, fresh as daisies, to the "wipe-with-a-damp-cloth" treatment.

If you cannot find precisely what you want in ready-made furniture, laminates may be bought by the square foot from lumber dealers and applied to custom-built or unpainted furniture with special, but easily available adhesives. Places where you might use them to excellent and colorful advantage are legion—including window sills, window soffits, toy chests, dadoes, kick plates of doors, baseboards, ad infinitum.

ONE of the latest and most fascinating manifestations of vinyl film is the adhesive-backed vinyl that lets you cover any flat surface with a film of water-repellent, easily-wiped-clean plastic. In a youngster's room there are plenty of places where it might do a slip-covering job—on table tops, shelves, headboards, window sills. This astonishing pressure-sensitive stuff can be applied and removed and reapplied as easily as adhesive tape, so you can whip it on and off and change the colors, patterns and general looks of things at will.

Vinyl plastics, which run the range from sheer curtain film to the tough coated fabrics that may upholster furniture or cover walls, are now a taken-for-granted decorating asset in the nursery. They come in a wealth of prints, many of them indifferent, it must be pointed out, but the trend is toward higher styling than ever before. Embossing gives opaque film texture and dimension, so that it may look like tweed or taffeta. And a new development is creating a film with a soft, luxurious nap like suede or velvet. Esthetically, because of its light-filtering characteristic, the translucent film has a new quality to give to decorating schemes. Practically, with the vinyl film industry's recent establishment of standards of performance, some of the most serviceable objects made of film are identified with a seal indicating approved quality.

Vinyl-coated upholstery material comes in almost any color you'd care for, in almost as many variations of texture and in finishes from matte to a sheen like patent leather. Some of it is made on stretchable knitted fabric so that it is easily and neatly fitted around corners, and some is now available with minute perforations which permit the tough fabric to breathe, as if it were woven.

A type of upholstery fabric to put high among possibilities for a youngster's room, or wherever youngsters are going to be dominantly on the scene, is saran in its woven, multifilament form. This has a quality reminiscent of wool mohair and is currently being ›ven in a number of interesting ·aves. Because it is so easily eaned. it is perfectly practical such apparently fragile colors ivory and pastels. But there is ›thing at all fragile about it. It chemically the same stuff that any automobile seat covers are ade of. so you can count on its ·arability.

Saran also makes a particularly ild-proof carpet which is exemely durable and scuff-resistant d rather sensationally easy to ean of ink. food spills and similar ains which are usually calamities any other kind of rug.

FOR the most part. a hard-surface floor covering is usually the most ·actical in a youngster's room. rticularly if the room is also used a play area. Not only do asalt tiles. linoleum. vinyl. vinyl ›rk and rubber take a beating ther gracefully. but they are easy keep meticulously clean. They so offer the kind of hard play rface that most children enjoy—r bouncing balls. for floor games. r electric trains. etc. Vinyl cork d rubber are excellent sound ·adeners. And since these covergs now come in such good colors ey make smart decoration a cinch. ou can create almost any kind of tterned effect with insets.

The tweedy textures and mottled lorations of fiber rugs make them pecially good "soil-losers" for der children's rooms. They give u a bargain in good looks and rprising durability if you're lookg for an inexpensive rug. In most oms but especially in the rooms f younger children. small. washble tufted rugs of cotton. rayon r nylon add warmth and color to smooth. hard-surface floor. and re light enough so that they may e pushed aside whenever a clear oor is needed for play. But do eep them small so that they may e tossed into the washer. and see at they are backed with latex so at youngsters won't slip on them.

The latest development in cotton oor covering is 18" squares of fted cotton. made with a resilient ber backing and a pressure-senitive adhesive. You. yourself. can tick these "tiles" of carpet to the oor wall to wall and remove and eplace them as needed. They're ot touted as the world's toughest arpeting. but they're soft underot. adequately sturdy for a baby's oom. and come in several agreeble colors. All of them are cleanble with rug detergent. Use them "upholster" inside of crib to proct a baby's head.

The gossamer glamour of lace, dotted Swiss, embroidered batiste, voile—all the charming, delicate finery that used to be utterly impractical and yet always seems to be the birthright of little girls—is now reappearing in children's rooms because it has become as practical as synthetic fibers can make it. And that's mighty practical. You can indulge in ruffles and frills to your heart's content with sheer curtains and bedspreads that can be laundered and dried in next to no time without needing to be ironed. On the market currently you'll find such inspiring glamour as curtains of embroidered nylon and Dacron. Dacron voile in colors as well as white. flocked nylon and Dacron. "dotted Swiss." embroidered nylon bedspreads and dressing table skirts. Or. if you want to be lacy but even more practical still. there are the vinyl films simulating lace and embroidered lawn. Accordion-pleated cotton and sheer nylon may now be bought by the yard. It suggests fluted ruffle trimming. or bedskirts, curtains and valances that look like the height of impractical luxury but certainly aren't. for these scientifically set pleats stay crisply in shape even after undergoing many washings.

ADDED refinements which would delight a little girl and lighten the housework are fitted sheets of nylon in pastel colors. nylon and Orlon blankets. thoroughly washable Dacron-filled comforters covered with nylon. Dacron-filled cushions covered with Dacron and Dacron-filled bed pillows.

You can see that there are so many different choices from which to compose beautiful though hard-working rooms for the younger generation that the problems of the past no longer exist. Almost everything you're likely to use is washable. and with modern automatic washers and dryers even this chore has been reduced to minimum labor.

But you can make life even easier by designing your furnishings to provide short-cuts. For instance. café curtains which are clipped to the rods (instead of having rings sewn to them) amount simply to flat pieces of cloth. easily washed and ironed flat. as uncomplicated as a handkerchief. Untrimmed sash curtains. gathered on a rod. give you the same ease of laundry. And there is. on the market. buckram drapery topping so designed that you can make your draperies in one flat piece which pleats automatically when you attach it to specially designed curtain pins. The snapper tape by which the valance is attached to the wall in the room shown on page 129 is another aid to easily-maintained glamour. Snapped off, the chintz valance is essentially one flat, easily ironed piece of fabric trimmed with a fluffy cotton, no-iron fringe. You can even achieve the effect of wall-to-wall broadloom by taping together smallish pieces of washable tufted carpet, which, to make things easier, are separated for a trip to the washer.

pans for individual servings.

Besides these main dishes we always keep lamb chops. I buy these by the dozen and lay them out in the freezer on a large sheet of locker paper, unwrapped, until they are frozen hard. Then I put them in a double plastic bag and fasten the tightly twisted neck with a pipe cleaner so I can take out any number I want and reclose the bag. Hamburgers can be prepared this way too, but the patties must be flat so they don't get too well done on the outside before they're done on the inside.

THE CHILDREN like to choose their own dinner from the freezer when they are dining alone. To them, cooking frozen food is akin to watching one of those little shells from Chinatown blossom into a rosebush when dropped in a glass of water. They love to pick out unlikely-looking, chilly boxes of food and then watch them slowly turn into something good to eat.

On these nights they prepare their own party in the kitchen. We get out paper doilies and candles and colored Dixie cups for the milk, and they usually round things off with a special treat like ice cream for dessert or a toasted marshmallow in the cocoa (to do this just put a marshmallow on a bit of foil and let it toast under the broiler, then slip it off into the cocoa).

Here are the recipes for Cock-A-Leekie Soup and Kedgeree.

Cock-A-Leekie Soup

1 roasting chicken, cut up
Chicken broth and water to cover
1 turnip
2 inside stalks celery with tops
⅓ cup barley soaked in ½ cup water
2 small onions
Dash of nutmeg
Dash of mace
Salt and pepper
Juice of half a lemon
3 peppercorns
½ cup chopped parsley
2 bunches leeks, sliced

Rinse and wipe the chicken and put it in a deep soup pot. Cover it with the broth and water, half and half, and bring to a boil. If you have no stock on hand use canned clear chicken consommé. Add all the other ingredients except the leeks and simmer gently until the chicken is done—or about forty minutes to an hour. Lift out the pieces of chicken and cool in a colander while the soup simmers on. When the chicken is cool enough to handle, remove the skin and cut the meat into bite-size pieces. Skim the stock from time to time removing as much fat as possible, and cook it for about two hours altogether. During the last half-hour add the leeks (white and pale green part thinly sliced) and just before serving return the chicken. This can be more highly seasoned as desired. Serve in flat bowls with toasted bread.

This is a hearty, delicious soup to be enjoyed by any age but especially good for the very young as it's interesting, easy to eat, and good for them. Serves 4.

Kedgeree

A thick piece of white fish
Water to poach it in 2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
Salt and pepper
Dash of nutmeg

Wipe the fish and poach it gently in water or a delicate broth, until it is tender. Cool and flake it carefully, removing any bone and being careful not to break it too much. (If you are serving only adults, finnan haddie can be used.) Make a cream sauce of the butter, flour and milk and combine it with the fish, seasoning it to taste. This mixture can be frozen and when Kedgeree is desired simply thaw it slightly and reheat in a double boiler while you prepare one cup of Minute Rice per directions on the package, and two hardboiled eggs. When everything is ready, peel and chop the eggs and mix all together. Some people like to add a little crumbled crisp bacon when the Kedgeree is made with plain fish instead of finnan haddie.

PROBABLY the most important item in the diet as far as the children are concerned is dessert. I operate on the theory that all children always eat dessert, so it might as well be good for them. Not being a great dessert fancier or talented pastry cook myself, I tend to prepare desserts and shop for desserts with the "Health of the Children" uppermost in my mind. I like to have these high in food value, things I can whip up quickly, and I keep as many as I can manage frozen in individual portions. Of course we always have ice cream and plain cake and cup cakes in the freezer.

as well as many kinds of cookies. These are mostly made by my mother who does have a light hand with baked things, or I buy them at one of our favorite bakeries. The children always like the kind of round "store" cookies that have frosting in the middle so we keep some of these too. No matter how many I buy I never have enough.

I have found that almost any pudding with a gelatin base freezes very well and thaws in an hour at room temperature. We make Cocoa, Banana and Apricot Sponge, and Lemon Fluff from The Joy of Cooking (pages 738-739—revised edition) and freeze these in little plastic cups with lids on them. They hold about four ounces and can go from the freezer into a school lunch box if necessary.

ANY baked fruit dessert like Brown Betty freezes well, and baked custard does too. It's a great convenience to be able to make these in an unexpected lull and know that they're ready and waiting in the freezer. I'm surprised at how successfully they freeze and I'm annoyed I didn't try it a long time ago. All of these are very good for children as most of them have eggs and/or gelatin in them.

We make most of our cakes with mixes and frost many of them with Philadelphia Cream Cheese icings as I feel that gets a little extra protein into the children. For spice cake I like the cheese simply softened with cream until it is easy to spread, and then seasoned with about three tablespoons of sugar, grated lemon peel, nutmeg and cinnamon. For chocolate cake I melt a package of Nestle's Chocolate Bits in the double boiler until they are completely smooth. Then I mash and whip a small cake of cream cheese with cream until it is about the consistency of sour cream. I combine the melted chocolate with about ½ cup of the cheese mixture and it makes a really delicious chocolate frosting. We make tiny cupcakes of spice or golden cake for the little tikes without any frosting except a dusting of powdered sugar. These are more for morale than anything else.

Any of these desserts are very good to use for children if adults are having something like bananas blazed in rum or to serve as the follow-up to one of the separate meals I have described. Most of them are a great addition to school lunches or to the at-home lunches of the little brothers and sisters.

Other simple desserts can be made with things usually on hand. Try canned applesauce, for instance, with a half cup of whipping cream beaten until stiff and folded into it. Chill this and serve with cinnamon and nutmeg and some chopped walnuts on top.

Or thaw a can of frozen orange juice until mushy (about half an hour) and combine with a stiffly beaten egg white. I add a little cream of tartar while beating the egg to keep it stiff and some grated orange peel.

Another one is quick rice pudding following the instructions for rice pudding on the package of Minute Rice, but substituting brown sugar for white and currants for raisins.

We also like partially thawed frozen strawberries or strawberry jam with melba toast made of French bread and either cottage cheese or whipped cream cheese.

The ice cream stock can always come to the rescue. Our children like vanilla ice cream best with a little maple syrup or grated chocolate or instant chocolate powder over it, or served on a slice of pound cake with fresh sliced fruit.

We always have Bosco in the refrigerator (this is a thick smooth milk fortifier that tastes just like chocolate sauce) and it makes wonderful sundaes with chopped nuts. Besides the Bosco I try to keep whipping cream, nuts, and one or two kinds of jam to go on the otherwise plain puddings or ice cream.

Another way to have an easy dessert (and fun for the children) is to let them whip up a package of instant pudding mix, or even bake and frost a cake-mix cake. If there is enough time they can make either a Jell-o or Royal pudding, and I've found that these freeze very well, though regular cornstarch puddings made from a recipe will not. I forgot to say one thing that always pleases me when I'm making puddings for the freezer is that I can make a gelatin whip with the whites of the eggs and baked custard with the yolks and have two kinds of dessert to put away.

SANDWICHES are, of course, a mainstay in most families. Since they are the backbone of the lunches many of our children eat nine months of the year, they should be full of food value.

We use high-protein white bread

r 100% whole wheat exclusively. ith high protein foods as fillings. make them by three-dozen lots bout twice a month and put them the freezer. This takes me about alf an hour if the children are round to help wrap and label iem, and believe me it saves an ntold amount of time.

WHERE are one or two things to remember about sandwiches for ie freezer if they are to be successful, and here they are: Don't se mayonnaise. Use a boiled salad ressing. I make the one from Mrs. ombauer's The Joy of Cooking method No. 1—Boiled Salad)ressing on page 498 of the revised dition). I leave out the paprika, o easy on the mustard, and use ie juice of a lemon with enough lain vinegar to make the ¼ cup f vinegar the recipe calls for. I ake this first and let it chill while make the fillings.

Another thing to remember is to se well-softened butter and spread oth slices of bread from edge to dge to sort of seal the bread and eep it from soaking up the fillings. Never use hard-boiled egg white hich gets tough, or runny jellies r anything else that might make he sandwiches soggy as they thaw. put plenty of filling in each one s I'd rather have the children have ne really substantial sandwich han two which means four pieces f bread. I like to use two thin lices of ham, for instance, with ither cream cheese or dressing or pickle slice in the middle where t won't drip. And I put peanut utter on both pieces of bread vith the jam, instead of jelly, in he middle.

Here are the fillings I use in a ypical sandwich session. Our famly likes variety.

Boiled ham with softened, seaoned cream cheese spread on it. Thin slices of dried beef with the same cream cheese.

Ham run through the coarsest blade of the chopper and mixed with a little dressing and dill pickle slices.

Sandwich rolls—French rolls filled with any of the above or ham and Swiss cheese slices.

Peanut butter with strawberry jam or chutney in the middle.

Marmalade on white bread—lightly buttered and toasted.

Chopped egg yolk and a can of chopped olives mixed with the homemade boiled salad dressing. Tuna fish carefully drained, rinsed with lemon juice and mixed with the dressing and a little chopped dill pickle.

All of these are wrapped in Saran Wrap; each has an identifying label. (We use the Scotch Tape labels on a strip.) Then they are frozen and will thaw within an hour or two after they are taken out of the freezer.

In making school lunches I rely heavily on the freezer, taking out the sandwich and either a cupcake or pudding as a start. If it's pudding, I put in a salad of cottage cheese and raw vegetable in a plastic cup, or some leftover vegetable like string beans, carrots or broccoli mixed with a little French dressing. Or perhaps some carrot and celery sticks and a radish. If the children take cookies or cupcakes I put in raw fruit. I usually try to add something extra like a package of crackers or some cubes of cheese, a hard-boiled egg, or a surprise like Chinese fortune cookies, or a pastry from our favorite shop. All this besides, of course, milk in the Thermos. They all love those tiny cartons of Leslie salt ("Little Leslies") and I put them in for the hard-boiled eggs.

I keep up this stock all year round because just as the school lunch season stops the picnic lunch season starts. So we just keep right on in the same track.

IN SUMMER we use the electric blender a lot to make fresh fruit and ice cream drinks, and we always have the makings of a weenie roast in the freezer. I keep weenies, enough for six or eight in a package, package of hot-dog rolls, and succotash which they like with the weenies in the absence of their first choice, corn on the cob.

They usually round things off with toasted marshmallows and watermelon. Their favorite blender drink is a mixture of fresh orange juice, a fresh peach cut up, cracked ice and honey. When the weather is warm we use twice as much frozen juice, and when the children have their lunch at home they always want milk shakes.

It's my feeling that children generally have quite conservative tastes about food and simply have to outgrow the jello-peanut-butter-graham cracker stage before they appreciate saffron rice and ripe cheese.

It happens sooner than you might imagine where the children are exposed to all the things they love best as well as the more sophisticated choice of their parents.

Childhood is the time of exuberant excesses in the field of favorite and familiar food, and the one thing we can do for our children to keep them well fed and happy is simply to provide these things in an inexhaustible supply and at the same time quietly introduce them to the foods that they will like tomorrow.

HOW TO LEAVE HOME

the Holland-American's "Maasdam," which is noted for treating Tourist Class passengers like princes, off-season one-way Tourist rates start at $165. First Class at $232.50. Who'd be without a trip to Europe at that rate!

The airlines change their tune with the season, too. Their off-season, both to and from Europe, is from November 1 to March 31. First class round-trip flight to London costs $690 as opposed to $720 in season. You can whittle this down by going Tourist for $482, an off-season saving of $40. And then, if you're the type who doesn't mind paying for ice cream and cake for months after you've eaten them, you can plan to pay in installments, just as you can with many airlines all through the year.

THESE savings on a European trip are pretty spectacular, but even if you don't budge from your own continent you'll find rather beguiling off-season tariffs listed at some of the most luxurious resort hotels at home. During the summer and until December you can live for a few dollars a day in the palatial grandeur of a Florida hotel room which would cost you $30 or more from December to April.

The same seasonal change applies generally throughout the islands of the West Indies. And the fall is a glorious, sunny time to visit these parts. Both Haiti and Jamaica, for instance, are blessed with some charmers of hotels which offer you American plan accommodations for as little as $10 a day off-season. From December 15 on, the same accommodations would be $5 or $6 more.

The weather is, of course, the big question mark, because you naturally assume that weather, and fauna must be at their during The Season, whenever may be, but it doesn't at all fo that the rains come, the flower and all becomes stale, flat and profitable the minute the last sonal guest departs. The peopl main the same and your chanc getting to know them are b than ever. In fact, here is on the great inducements of off-se travel—you have a better op tunity to get acquainted with people you are visiting. You h in a sense, a leisurely chanc "speak to the owners." That particularly important experi if you're traveling in a for land, for we can all do with more mutual understanding.

If you have never been to Atla City or Cape Cod in Septen and October you have no idea gorgeous the seashore can be. our exact knowledge, Bermu much touted as a spring-time p dise (which it is), is benign, b soming and thoroughly swimma sailable and golfable through vember and probably right aro the calendar. We've tried it February and again in hot, August when the island re shows off how beautifully it is conditioned by the trade winds, loved it both times.

BALMY to hot is what you'd the fall in the American trop and subtropics. But Europe something else again. If you in October and November and looking for a place to swim sun yourself in consistently wa comfort, your chances are slim. have done some desultory sw ming in Majorca in November, once knew some Norwegians w swam happily through the mo of November in Capri. ("Po bears!" exclaimed the Italian Sicily, reputedly the warmest pl in Europe in November, oblig us with a suntan snatched on brilliant day among a week of g days.

So, if October or November your vacation time, and you do think it's a vacation unless you ha a chance to stretch out on a s drenched beach in a bathing su your best bet is to stick to this c tinent, looking southward. Besi Florida and the West Indies, ther Mexico, which is delightful at t time, just about winding up rainy season so the country is at greenest. Acapulco, with genero beaches and sunshine is uncrowd more or less, rather attractiv catching its breath before the season starts in December.

Come when the hillside blazes with unbelievable colour, when the highways and hotels are less crowded. You will indeed enjoy visiting historic, picturesque French-Canada, where you will be welcomed with old-time hospitality, in comfortable modern inns and hotels.

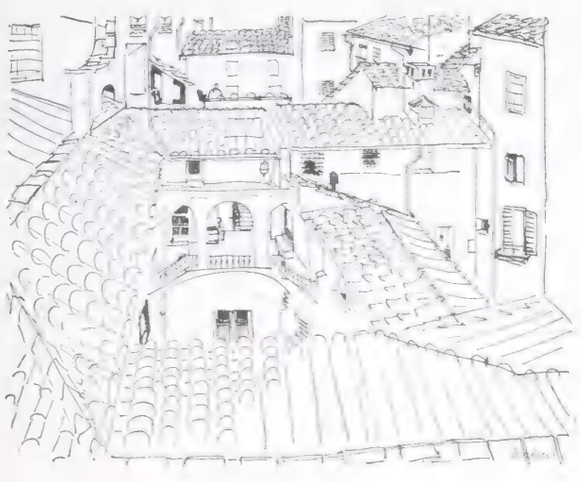
TENSE NERVOUS HEADACHES call for STRONGER Yet SAFER ANACIN

Won't Upset The Stomach

Anacin® not only gives stronger, faster relief from pain of headache but is also safer. Won't upset the stomach and has no bad effects. You see, Anacin is like a doctor's prescription. That is, Anacin contains not just one but a combination of medically proven, active ingredients. Scientific research has proved no single drug can give such strong yet such safe relief as Anacin Tablets.

So much for the swimmers and nworshipers. But for those who nply want to see the world, who ould like to get a close view of now that the crowds have gone d don't mind doing it occasionly wearing a top coat, here for hat they are worth are our imressions of some of our favorite l-season places:

Rome, in October and November, ves you plenty of fair days and ild weather. This means that the ıdless sightseeing is accomplished cool, uncrowded comfort. Sidealk café weather lasts into Noember. Just before sunset in ome's peculiarly glowing light, sit tea in the Pincio Gardens, overoking the city and watch the ttle Romans taking the air with eir nurses. Or observe them atching the Punch and Judy show -known to Italians as Pulcinella. all in Italy is glacé chestnut seaon. You'll find this confection in ery sweet shop or café and that one would make the off-season ip worth while for us.



Taormina in Sicily, from which e departed on a Thanksgiving ay with our turkey dinner in a ox ("I have included your tradional raspberry sauce," said the aitre de at the San Domenico alace Hotel) gave us startling, lear views of snow-covered Etna om a full-blossoming garden here mimosa was beginning to ower. We'd drink our cocktail egronis sitting in the plaza at a idewalk café. But after dinner at ıe hotel, we'd sit before a great re and listen to the sweet piping f the Sicilian pastorale, an anient Greek shepherd's song, now Christmas hymn sung by candleght.

Paris in October and December, ar more benign than New York, resents a wonderful new face hen you see its streaky gray stone randeur contrasted with the golden-bronze color of its autumn leaves.

Nice in fall has a quiet emptiness that lets you see what the "frame" looks like without the padding of people. It turns out to be a fascinator, half-medieval, half Napoleon III. Casinos in Nice and Monte Carlo are definitely in business. And it's an auspicious time to drive the Grande Corniche, to go up to Venice to see the Matisse chapel, to motor over the road to Grasse and the perfume factories.

London in October can have such golden days you wouldn't believe them, with gardens blooming away in St. James's Park and Hampton Court Palace roses putting on an eleventh-hour show. For the binocular and Baedeker set this is fine tripping weather, just as it is for Britishers themselves who turn out in quantity to spend the day at Windsor or among the beech trees of Hampstead Heath.

DENMARK, Sweden, Norway, we nominate for a spring-time visit, and in that order, from south to north. This is the kind of off-season travel one couldn't be more enthusiastic about because only when you are on the scene yourself can you begin to appreciate what the coming of spring means to the people of the north countries. It's a sweet, sweet time of year with beech trees putting out their tender leaves, anemones carpeting the woods and tulips and jonquils blooming at every doorstep. Days are sunny, pleasantly cool, although on May 10th we ran into a heat wave in Oslo. And any time of the year these three wonderful countries actually invite you into their homes, so that you leave feeling you have said good-by to friends. Just go to the government tourist bureaus in Copenhagen, Stockholm and Oslo and they'll see that you sample the incomparable Scandinavian hospitality.

Instant Hot-water Units to use at Home and Abroad

Left to right: Looking like a water-filled light bulb, Ohmlette (Chemex Corporation) boils a quart of water in five minutes. Hot-Pot (Universal) has high-low control for heating or cooking. You can both cook and serve in Knapp Monarch's Redi-Hot. These appliances are ideal for snacks in any room of the house.

Nesco's compact Tea Ryte has a steel removable basket under the lid for holding your tea leaves. Copper Electri-Kettle (Manning-Bowman), which has a light indicator to show whether the water is boiling, is a handsome hot water server. Tricolator's Carafe quickly heats bottles or food like instant puddings, soups.

Automatic heat control is offered by Sunbeam's Instant Coffee and Tea Maker. Real cooking can be done in Leckie's heavy aluminum Handi-Heat. West Bend's Speedmaster bubbles water, then cuts back to keep it uniformly hot. Dormeyer's Hurri-Hot contains egg rack, and has hand control for heat regulation.

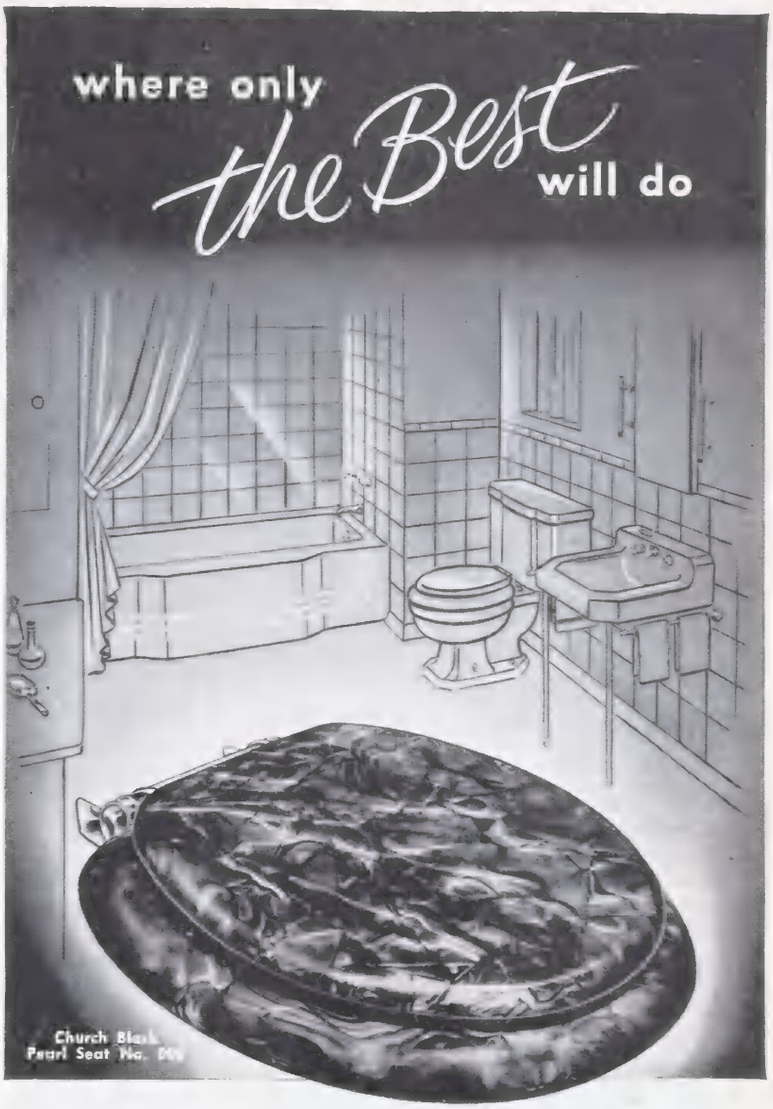
behind their determination to "pay their own way" at their summer camp experience.

After dinner we went to the end of the hall, where an exhibit demonstrated Scout camp techniques. As we watched the Scouts show how their troop maintained itself while roughing it, we reflected on how fine a thing it was to see the pride of these boys in their troop—in their "gang."



Group pride, such as that of the troop giving our community supper, is gang spirit, but this is the gang spirit "gone right." In the Boy Scouts, as in the Girl Scouts, Cubs, Brownies, Blue Birds, Campfire Girls, 4-H Clubs, "Y" organizations and similar groups, this same gang spirit is actually the cornerstone for fellowships organized around youthful interests and shared by desirable adult leadership. In these youth groups, boys and girls enjoy projects and excursions while satisfying that universal hunger for the security of "belonging" which operates with such special force between the ages of eight and fourteen.

Membership trends reflect the strength of the natural appeal which the groups have for our young people. Ten years ago one boy in every eight was a Boy Scout; now one in four belongs. In the same ten-year period, membership in Girl Scouts and Campfire Girls has increased from one girl in ten to one in five. In addition, there are fast-growing 4-H Clubs with their two million members and the "Y" youth groups, which are strong in number and purpose across the nation.

The youth groups' friendly attitude toward society is what sets them apart from hoodlum gangs. The Scouts' "good turn daily" is well-known to all, and their conservation projects have received much publicity. Each of the other youth groups also keeps before its members the question, "How are we helping our community?"

Groups stage regular clean-up drives, make used-clothing collections, repair broken toys. I knew one group that kept cartoon scrapbooks going. As each book was finished, they took it to a local veteran's hospital. Another group bought two TV sets for a children's hospital ward with the proceeds of a cooky sale. Still another made a project of removing doors from those death traps for young children—abandoned refrigerators.

Such favorable social orientation depends largely on the work of the adult leader. "Akela," as the Cubs call their "good leader," is an adult interested in boys and girls, who usually has taken a special course in the lore of a particular group and in techniques of channeling group energies into whatever objective is at hand. Any adult with the time, energy and desire can be an "Akela."

"Akela" is human, even as you and I—subject to frazzled nerves in the midst of exuberant youth groupers, resentful if left to carry on without proper backing from other parents. But the "good leader" is full of good will toward young people and stands in such powerful relation to each one that parents can hardly turn away from their obligation to supply help where needed and to give constant moral support to the relationship.

When my own twin Girl Scouts

announce importantly that their leader has that afternoon taught them to make a bed with "hospital corners." my first reaction is to snap that I had taught them to do that very thing three years ago.

A second's thought reminds me that the making of a hospital-cornered bed takes on dignity when demonstrated by their leader in patrol meeting. I see that this is a prosaic instance of a phenomenon that will occur over and over during their Scouting days, when something their father or I have long pleaded with them to do or understand will be readily absorbed when their leader presents it.

THE "good leader" has a valuable tool in the idealistic behavior code provided by each youth group. Boys and girls at this age level are busy building their own systems of values, and while doing so they find support in their group code. Early adolescents are thrilled by the idealism they find in these codes, perhaps especially so in these times when most of the adults they come in contact with are falling over themselves to be "good fellows" and to avoid any suggestion of "preaching." Youth groupers love their rituals and symbolism (most of it is Indian), and anyone in contact with young people knows the seriousness of such pledges as the "Scout's honor."

Another agency through which leaders help their groups is the program of leisure learning for fun. Collections, skills of all kinds, animal husbandry, nature lore, scientific or artistic interests, citizenship projects, athletic abilities—from these are shaped units of activity which, when finished and approved by a counselor, bring some token of recognition to the doer. Whether this token is in the form of an arrow, bead, feather or badge, it always represents a solid body of accomplishment. Now, just as the uniform symbolizes his "belonging" to the youth group, so this earned insignia as it gradually accumulates upon the uniform comes to designate his advancement within his group.

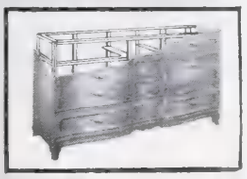
The leader works to insure in his youth group a steady growth toward self-reliance. Accomplishment in this sphere is greatly prized by the members themselves. When I asked my own twelve-year-old what in Boy Scouts meant most to him, he said, "They've got me more so I can look after myself. I can get my clothes and food together for a camp-out now and cook for myself and all."

This emphasis on independence, along with regular exposure to democratic procedure in meetings, means that as their age level advances youth group members increasingly can bear the responsibilities of their own organizations. But it never means that a youth group can operate independent of enthusiastic and energetic participation from parents. Not only must parents make each youth grouper feel their interest and pride in his organization, but they must, if that organization is to thrive, cheerfully contribute time toward the supporting work necessary in transportation, communications, financial management and sales programs.

UNFORTUNATELY, all parents do not grasp this necessity for their own participation. Many fail to see that even if youth groups could carry on without the parents, they would sacrifice their most valuable asset if they did. Youth groups, if they are to benefit our young people, must extend family relationships, not supplant them.

When I told a friend that I was writing an article about youth groups, she inquired, "And what will you do—paint a rosy dream or the horrid truth?" Her disillusionment was not surprising. For three years she had served as a leader with inadequate parent support, listened to complaints from non-participating parents and watched these knockers evaporate whenever they were offered jobs which might have improved the situations.

"And," she concluded indignantly, "I was looked on as a sort of baby-sitter. I really think some of the parents assumed I was paid!"



The "horrid truth" is that such conceptions are not as rare as they should be. A doctor friend, a father of three, commenting on my husband's work on a Boy Scout fathers' committee, asked me how men were contacted for these jobs and by whom they were paid. When I explained that no one paid them, that the work was done voluntarily by troop fathers, and that the committee would be happy for his help too, he said that of course he could not take any such position because he was a doctor and too busy.

At the same time another busy doctor had just volunteered to take over refreshments arrangements for our monthly Cub Pack meeting. Still another doctor was serving on the Scout committee and briefing the boys for First Aid and Public Health merit badges.

ested mothers is that their participation is impossible because they have younger children in the home. Actually, most of our active parents do have younger children. Far from seeing this as a disadvantage, they feel that not the least of the benefits of work with the youth groups is the pleasure and stimulation to younger family members from their contact with the groups, both at home meetings and at the groups' family get-togethers.

Another excuse is, "I have no place in my house for a group to meet." This statement is not necessarily made by people with small houses. That the size of the house is not too important is shown by the use often made of terraces and garages, and by the favor in which youth groupers hold kitchens as meeting places. Anyone who ever saw an "Our Gang" comedy knows that space, while desirable, is not a must when the gang meets.

This excuse of "no place for meetings" comes as often from families with large houses—perhaps with second living rooms or studies. But, alas, the second living rooms are furnished, like the first, in perishables. And Cook is annoyed if her kitchen is threatened.

Then there are those parents who are too shy to offer their help or who feel they have nothing to contribute. If their children have entered well-run groups, they may hesitate to volunteer their own services. It is up to the parents already participating to see that each newcomer has his opportunity for a place within the effort. If the more aggressive parents monopolize the group, it will fail in its purpose.

EVEN in the best-run co-operative groups, where help is most freely offered, there will be some parents who can't or won't participate. Should the boys and girls of these unco-operative parents be accepted into the group? I have heard this point debated in adult meetings.

"But it goes against the grain to see 'those others' hold off and at the same time expect their children to be included. It's so unfair! Can't we make some rule? Can't we say that only children of co-operative parents may take part?"

Yes, it is unfair, and all the more so since the biggest share of complaints and dissatisfaction seems always to come from "those others" who can't see their way clear to help. But, unfair or not, the children of these parents cannot be barred or discriminated against.

These young people are the very ones who most need what a parent child co-operative has to offer. Even though many come from homes of apparent privilege, they are, in this situation at least, in the role of underprivileged children. And boys' and girls' sensitivity is such that to call attention to the neglect of their parents is to betray the spirit of the youth group movement.

My own family is large, so I have had contact with several youth groups; but my closest work was with the Cubs. It may have been an unusually fortunate experience since my Den parents were all behind their boys, ready to help, and the Cubs were a neighborhood group, used to me and to being in my home. Or perhaps time has dimmed my recollections of the wild car trips with shrieking Cubs, the doughnut crumbs that somehow weren't confined to the playroom.

WHATEVER the reason, my memory of the Den is definitely a rosy one. I learned a lot from the boys and a lot about boys—about the qualities they value in selecting their leaders, the intense concentration possible to boys engaged in a real interest.

It was a pleasure to watch their growing appreciation of good sportsmanship. On their black day of defeat in inter-Den baseball they suddenly glimpsed a silver lining: "But that other Den Mother said we were the best sports they ever played. That brought us honor."

Maybe most satisfying was seeing the individual growth made by the boys. I remember one boy who entered always elbowing the smaller boys aside, disregarding the leader's opinion, disrupting the meetings with irrelevancies. At the last meeting of the year, when I stood up with the rest of our Den to give him applause as he graduated from Cubbing to Scouting, I found some very surprising tears in my eyes as I realized that this boy through his own efforts and the influence of his Den had become a mainstay of our group—that the "gang" could not be the same without him.

In another year we will have two more Cubs coming on in our family. My husband and I will be asked to serve again in leadership or supporting work. Where will we find the time? Parents always wonder. But our boys are worth our time. So we will take our opportunity to help the gang spirit "go right."

Help Keep America Beautiful

The sum total of little improvements by individual households institutes a major factor in beautying America's residential streets d keeping them litter-free. Imrtant, for instance, is how each usehold solves its refuse probns in terms of both community elfare and personal convenience. All too often, simply for the sake convenience, refuse cans are peritted to mar the scene or stand here they blatantly tempt neighrhood children and pets. If you ee yourself of the arduous chore lugging heavy cans, convenience one needn't dictate where cans all be placed for daily use. Made obile, cans can be stored near the ck door, unobtrusively out of neral sight yet conveniently acssible for use.

There are numerous types of mole devices available for hauling ns from storage site to collection site: there's a type that climbs stairs, and there are types devised for multipurpose service.

Evaluate your refuse cans in terms of your needs between collection days. When refuse overflows its storage bounds, it becomes litter.

Take stock of the condition of your refuse cans: make sure they aren't rusted through, leaky or otherwise past their prime. If new cans are called for, you'll find today's choice is a wide one.

Once you start appraising what can be done to improve your disposition of refuse, you may want to help the property-beautification cause further by building a hideaway to conceal cans attractively. (See HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, August 1955, page 98.) It goes without saying that in helping the general cause you simultaneously beautify your own property.

Multiple service is rendered by Hold-A-Can, which comes in 1- and 2-can sizes. A self-adjusting bracket keeps cans raised from the ground and makes them tipproof; spring action arm holds on to can lid. When stationary, platform is kept level by a support; tipped for rolling, large rubber-tired wheels take over. Powerful all-steel construction.

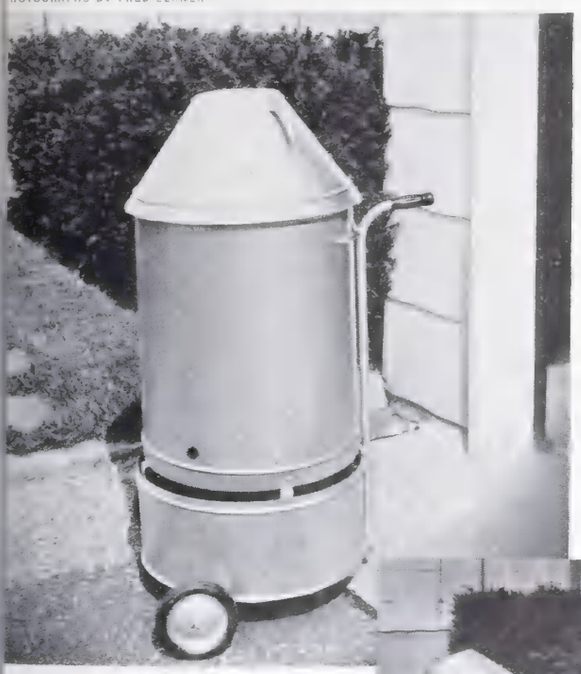
The folding steel structure of this McElmoyl Jani-tor makes for easy storage. It climbs up and down steps with ease, riding on ball-bearing, semi-pneumatic wheels which are 10 inches in diameter. Use it with the giant canvas bag for trash and general hauling or in the garden. Unhook bag from frame and you have a platform truck. Herculean in strength for transporting refuse or ash cans. Welded structure, 20″ x 20″ x 40″; rubber tires.



High-tempered aluminum used for Iron Horse can (left) is extra-thick gauge; an alloy content hardens the metal as it ages. The result is tough, corrosion-proof construction that's featherweight and lastingly retains its good looks. Lawson's out-size can (right) has 32-gallon capacity and is built to serve a lifetime under most rugged use. Made of heavy steel with hot-dipped galvanizing.

Colorbryte cans by Nesco are color-coated inside and out with acid-resistant finish and are sturdily made of steel with snug-fitting cover. You've a choice of moss green or sand, affording identifying colors for refuse and trash. Triangular Lawson dollies on which cans stand are all-aluminum with ball-bearing swivel casters. Dolly keeps can off the ground and instantly mobile.

simple menu which can be downed quickly: Everything on one plate, and a glass of milk. A half canned peach, placed round side up with raisin eyes and a maraschino cherry mouth, was the fruit on the plate. All we had with it was a hamburger plus a few carrots and celery sticks.

Halloween is such a fun time of the year for kids of all ages, and parents are delighted when you invite the young to a party, for they all like to know what their demons are doing on the big night. One year we had a regular ducking for apples deal, messy but hilarious. And a wonderful ghost story with a "corpse."

THIS whole affair is good to have in the kitchen so you can mop up easily. The kids sit around in a circle in the dark while a narrator tells the ghost story. Then the "corpse" is passed around in pieces. For instance, the hand is a rubber glove filled with ice water, a peeled grape for the eye ball, cold cooked macaroni for the insides, and so on, ad nauseam. Just dream up all sorts of similar horrors and your little guests will shiver for hours.

Another year we had a few friends rig their houses for the trick-or-treat department, and we went visiting from house to house. One had a huge light and when the kids scrambled up to the door in the dark, whispering excitedly for everyone to be quiet, suddenly a big roar went up and the light went on. The kids were scared out of their wits and ran for the cars.

At another house the owner had tied thin ropes across all the entrances, so everyone tripped over them, including me. The owner of another house was up on the roof with a hose which he lightly sprinkled down upon us. Those were the days! Young and old had a wonderful time, especially this adventurous age group. I really think that Halloween is almost more exciting for this age than Christmas, so spring into a production this coming October.

The next older age bracket, from ten to fourteen, is what I call "the vague age." They are ready for the scavenger or treasure hunt party. If you live in the country, you should have your treasure hunt in the daytime, for it is too difficult and rather hazardous for the kids to wander around in the dark. If you live in the city, then you can keep the boundaries within your own block so that there will be no crossing the streets. Then perhaps the hunt can be either day or night.

Ma and Pa really have to put on their thinking caps to work out original clues. We had treasure hunts for three years, each year with the clues getting successively harder. (Harder for Ma to think up, too.) We had all sorts of clues, from maps (you know, ten feet this way and twenty feet from a certain tree) to a crossword puzzle type of clue.

There was much excitement in choosing the teams, determining who should be in charge of the clues, etc. The object is to bring back all the objects, and the winning team of course gets the prize. Water guns are a wonderful prize (naturally they are put to immediate use), or cap guns, silly putty and the like.

For the scavenger hunt, the kids have to go to the neighbors to find anything from a buttonhook to a hard-boiled egg. An old newspaper or magazine of a certain date is a good clue. The botanical name for a common flower is another good one, too.

Have the kids come at six for supper or at noon for lunch. Food for this party is the traditional creamed chicken, mashed potatoes and peas, with ice cream and cookies for dessert. Milk is the drink. Expect much excitement over the hunt and a great to-do over the clues. Blue jeans or dungarees are the clothes to wear for this run-until-you-find-it type of party.

ANOTHER good party for groups of all ages (any age from eight to twenty-five) is the good old-fashioned hay ride. The rides are fun, a little uncomfortable, but the children don't seem to notice that. The night you select must be in the full of the moon. A musician, a concertina, mandolin, or ukulele pla is a must, for he gets the child to sing.

We time our rides to start arou seven. We go to a place about hour's drive from the stables a then put on a barbecue. The pl selected for the barbecue must accessible by motor, for some of parents have to be there to fix food. This is food that can cooked over an open fire w sticks or "forks" made fr branches. Hot dogs and marshm lows are naturals for this, and kids get a bang out of cooki their own food this way. Bowls tomatoes, fruit and buttered ro are side embellishments. Mar mallows and doughnuts for dess and cider to drink. You had bet also bring some cartons of m and paper cups and plates, a don't forget the mustard if y want the party to be complete.

WITH everybody wearing jea or dungarees, sitting around t campfire and singing are loads fun. If you happen to know a "te er of tall tales" employ him for t evening and the group will hang every word. The hour's ride ba to the stable at nine or ten with t full moon beaming down is a hap way to end a perfect evening.

If your daughters are not t grown up (I mean boy-conscious at fifteen or sixteen, a "Come You Are" party is amusing. Th is an all-girl affair. The hoste issues the invitations by calling h guests at odd hours and sayi "Come to my house Friday nig dressed just as you are." The co tumes range from pajamas to sca ties and bobby-pinned heads towels and shower caps.

Another successful evening f the girls is the "Slumberless Pa ty." They all bring sleeping bag and the more the merrier. Put the all in one large room—living room or rumpus room or what have you! We had one not long ago and the boys got wind of it (through Mike, natch!), and up the boys trooped. It made the evening, for it was an unexpected event.

The kids all sat around having Cokes, cookies and playing records until eleven, when we shooed the boys home, for I knew there would be much talking until the wee hours and I wanted the gals to settle down by midnight. Breakfast is the big deal for this kind of party. Plenty of hot cakes, melted butter and hot syrup, sausages and bacon should be your speed for the menu. Fruit and juices and milk can be on a buffet table where all can serve themselves. We had our party on Friday night so the gang could sleep late on Saturday morning, and fully recover from the "night out" over the week end.

A "THEME PARTY" is also gay. Everybody comes as a song or book title For days ahead there is a great build-up to this evening with all the youngsters buzz-buzzing about "What are you going as?". A song title party is good, for you can tie this in with dance records and the party becomes a platter party or "wing ding." The boys always seem to do the easiest titles, like carrying a clock ("Time on My Hands"). The hardest title—and the one that got the prize because none of us could guess it—was acted out by a gal who wore two attractive scarves tied over her shirt and skirt. One scarf had a moon and stars and the other a sun. The song turned out to be "Night and Day."

Mother and Father, please ask some of your friends in at the same time to play bridge or canasta or Scrabble. Your young gang will have much more fun if you are in another room having a small party and a good time. The youngsters know that they are not being spied upon, yet you are near at hand to help with the food, etc.

Recently we had our first "black tie" dinner. It was a party preceding a high school prom. As you know, everything at this age has to be a "big production," so this is a wonderful way to entertain. The kids love activity and the idea of having several places to go, and this gives them a glamorous start to a big evening, for they go on from here to a lovely dancing party. Use the party, incidentally, as a way to show teenagers how to entertain formally.

The menu, selected by Susie, Shannah and Mike, was smoked lamb, a casserole of new potatoes and canned onions and peas (can't we ever escape peas?), ice cream with chocolate sauce and chocolate cupcakes. The food is not the big problem. It is usually simple and easily prepared and served.

The tables and their setting, however, must be as glamorous as if you were giving a formal dinner for grownups. Place-cards are a must and there is much talk-talk about who would like to sit next to whom. We had 28 for this dinner. I put up bridge tables, set them with white linen cloths and napkins, candles and flowers—and champagne glasses, for we solved the great problem of "what to drink" with a non-alcoholic champagne. It's called "Catawba," put out by John C. Meier Grape Juice Co., Silverton, Ohio. The bottles are just like real champagne bottles, with pink foil and corks that pop and altogether they were a very festive addition to the party. The kids were mightily impressed.

The timing for this party is a lot different from an adult dinner party, for there is no cocktail hour. There is, however, a time element that has to be taken into consideration and that is time spent in the powder room. The girls all look so fresh and pretty, like a huge bouquet of flowers, but they must see that their hair is in place, and their flowers pinned on just so. I found myself in the dressing room acting like "Mother Hen," pinning here, adjusting there, and putting perfume on their hair and behind their ears.

I WONDERED what the boys were doing. I thought they might be adjusting their black ties and dinner jackets (most of them rented, I am sure), but Mike said no, that they were arranging their dance programs and talking about the latest model cars. These teenagers are very adult in their behavior and couldn't have been more attractive. It's astonishing how beautiful their manners become when they are all dressed up in full fig.

In arranging the table seating, have the girls and their escorts at the same table. I tell the couples where their places are so they will know where to sit. I whisk out the food. Father (dear Father) opens the sparkling grape juice, the cork pops (a good conversation starter) and our dinner party is off on its merry and rather elegant way.

The candle-lighted room, the flowers, the attractive group, the gay conversation made this the most delightful, prettiest party we have had in a long time.

matinee at the Mason Opera House. So my mother took us 25 miles each way on the trolley to see it and have our first meal in public, which she and my father decided—with no dispute—should be as fine as possible. I can remember nothing about it until we were sitting in the small room lighted with candles behind pink silk lampshades, with incredible expanses of snow-white linen, and a forest of glasses sparkling everywhere at our eye level, and with a fine, thin-nosed man dressed in black to take care of us—only us.

I do not know if Mother ordered in advance. I do know that she threw any dietetic patterns overboard. It seemed almost unbearable that a little fire should burn there at our table so dangerously, under a silver pan, and that the man could lean over it without going up in flames, and put the plates so tenderly before us with a napkin over his fingers, while candles flared in the middle of the day and people we had never seen before ate in the same room, as if we were invisible.

There was no mention of milk to drink, but instead we lifted the tall goblets of forbidden ice water waveringly to our lips, and looked up over them at the pink rose nodding in a silver vase between us and the world. There may have been other things to eat, but the chafing-dish chicken is all my sister and I can remember now, and of course the wonderful waiter who kept on remembering us too, after that first hushed luncheon.

It was a good start for us, that is if, in a world of shifting values, it is good to start two humans off with such firm high ones. I often think of it, almost as strongly as I did one day in Paris when I was lunching in the back part of the Café de Paris and saw that the table next to mine was being dressed with particular care.

FINALLY people came to sit at it: a handsome, famous actor, his beautiful British wife who was divorced from him, and their two children. The little girl was very English and of course lived with her mother, and the little boy was completely Parisian, as any reader of the gossip columns could have told you. But they all spoke easily together and were charming and happy. It was obviously a rendezvous that had been kept often by the four separated people, there in that opulent, gracious eating house.

The father and mother drank a cocktail and talked pleasurably, while the children sipped with courtesy at a very good sherry, enough to cover the bottoms of their proper little glasses. I forget the rest of the meal, but I sat long after I should have gone to keep an appointment, watching the cautious delight of the children at the rather elaborate dishes the waiters brought for them, and the quiet enjoyment of the parents. I was watching myself and my little sister, and feeling within me the way my mother and the English mother must have felt before the wide eyes, the hushed voices, and the trembling polite hands of their children.

NOW I have Anneli, almost ready for it: In a year she will be a little past five, halfway between the ages of my sister and me when we first sat ecstatically under the ministrations of a well-trained restaurant staff. In spite of the world-sickness that her father and I feel, we still want her first restaurant meal to be good. We have discussed it pleasurably, recognizing without shame the same eagerness in us that makes some parents buy elaborate electric trains and five-foot sailboats for their uninterested offspring. There must be chicken à la king in a chafing dish, and perhaps a baked Alaska because the heat and the cold of it are so exciting to a person like Anneli, and a gentle white wine for us and, if possible, cooled water in a little French bottle for her.

Meanwhile Anneli is being prepared with infinitesimal bites of whatever we find most subtle, slipped to her—without benefit of pediatrician—between her daily rounds of chopped green beans and pears and such. When she behaves unusually nicely, we think with complacency of what it will be like—that first lunch.

We will arrive about one-thirty at the very best, more formal restaurant we know in our city, having sustained Anneli with a short nap and two wholewheat crackers spread with sweet butter. She will wear some sort of smocked short dress made of wine-colored linen, white cotton gloves, white sandals on her thin little, very brown feet. I suppose she should have a hat, though she doesn't often wear one. Her eyes are as big and purple-brown with excitement as well-cooked prunes, and she stands up like a minuscule princess to the salute of the maitre d'hotel.

We go to a table perfect for three, half-facing the door to the kitchens so that she can watch the waiters and learn from them, half turned from the bar where a great many people are drinking—as she has often seen us do—but without as much enjoyment as we have. There is a drowsy diminuendo of chatter, and the human beings who have given themselves the time to be leisurely seem much more human than they may have earlier that noon.

Anneli looks at the strangest of the women, and the men most like her father, and then watches solemnly, tremblingly, as a split of Perrier water is poured for her, for her alone into a stemmed glass, and a waiter—we know the very one, past sixty, with the sly monkey-face of a college professor (but will he be there then?)—her own waiter, prepares on a wheeled table the silver bowl and the flame. Yes, we see her, my husband and I, as much this minute in our minds as we ever will at Voisin or the Café de Paris or dead Marcel's; and she is those other children; she is us; she is whatever tender creature can thus begin the long nibbling through the invisible tunnel of the world.

No amount of explanation could induce this five-year-old, whose own parents both play for pleasure and whose hi-fi-wired home is flooded with music a good part of the time, to believe that a really competent mother might not be musical.

And so it seems that a house which reflects the cultural level of the parents is the children's best guide to the arts.

Another area where fathers and particularly mothers feel the heavy weight of parental responsibility is in teaching good manners. In our culture, table manners, neat appearance, cleanliness and consideration for others are the earmarks of a civilized human being. But children are neither tidy nor polite by nature.

How to lead the "noble savages," to borrow a term from Rousseau, gently into agreeable patterns of behavior poses a dilemma. Harsh discipline and continual adult criticism creates an unpleasant parenthild relationship. On the other and, letting the youngsters grow p unchecked is not fair to them ither. Sooner or later they come p against a society that won't ac- ept untutored manners unless com- ensated for by genius. Somewhere etween the two extremes rests the ight answer.

Here again a thoughtfully de- igned house can help mold chil- ren. Table manners, for example, ake on a simple, natural grace hen the home dining area is right and attractive. The trend to- ard "family-room" dinner tables r kitchen eating areas with a gar- en view is an improvement over ie old-style, cramped breakfast ook. It means that for some meals ie whole family eats together in heerful, tension-free surroundings. he children learn by watching eir parents, who correct them ithout getting cross. In some omes, table manners are men- oned only at breakfast and lunch. Dinner is kept free for enjoying od and conversation. Surprisingly nough, there is usually no need to rrect manners when the meal is oing well.

A house that provides the right orage for children's clothes and ys also makes it easy for the nallest tikes to be tidy. Helpful etails such as low hooks in the losets, narrow, under-window toy helves, bike racks and large waste- askets are all aids to neatness. ne San Francisco home I visited ad a doormat inside as well as utside the "children's door."

Admittedly all children love to lay in squishy mud and wet sand. hild psychologists tell us that this lay is healthful and desirable be- ause tactile sensations are a part f learning. But after playing in ie mud, a child won't want to ash his sticky fingers and his rubby face until he's shown how uch nicer it is to feel clean.

MAKING a bath fun is one way to reach this objective. Some of he newer bathrooms for children ffer amusing fish mobiles over- ead as well as cabinets beside the ub for water toys. And in many omes there is a rear-of-the-house avatory with plenty of soap and aper towels to make scrubbing up n easy task.

A number of large-family moth- rs are also training their progeny n correct laundry techniques. By aving segmented clothes hampers —one part for jeans, one for white lothes and one for colored—the hildren are taught to throw their oiled clothes into the right com- artment. In one Albuquerque ome each morning the children unhook the bathroom hamper and wheel it to the laundry. That's their daily chore. With the help of this and other well-contrived conveni- ences, children can easily be taught the charm of cleanliness.

Consideration for their fellow man is one more trait that is com- pletely alien to most children. They are accustomed to having things done for and to them: after all, they were fed, held and loved as infants. Only as they start to grow do they learn that brothers, sisters, fathers and mothers have rights, too. Learning this is the basis of good manners.

Voluntary respect for the rights of others evolves slowly and natur- ally in the right kind of house. It starts with each child having an equal amount of room for privacy and possessions. I stress "equal" because the traditional way of al- lotting children's rooms is to give the oldest child the room with the twin beds. The next in line gets the less desirable quarters. Since the laws of primogeniture no longer apply, today's parents are much more equitable in giving each child a fair share of the house.

AS SOON as a child realizes that he's not being neglected he shows more consideration for others. In some homes this means knocking before entering another person's room. It means being quiet and let- ting a brother or sister or parents sleep late. It means letting them alone if they're studying or simply want to be alone. Such thoughtful- ness soon extends to all avenues of common courtesy.

This business of having a room of one's own is an increasingly im- portant factor in a child's life. A teenager in particular needs a room to help him or her grow up grace- fully. Because this phase of devel- opment is full of emotional uncer- tainty, children need privacy and pride in their own background to bolster up their egos. At this time a good many parents redecorate the teenager's room. It usually needs redoing by then. But a more "decorated" room also helps assure the youngsters that they're growing up at last. Parents often add an extra bed (because this age group loves overnight guests) and a tele- phone jack to keep their "impor- tant" calls private, too.

With all the emphasis on privacy and separate rooms, a good house must also provide frequent and varied opportunities for the family to get together. This family unity is important because it gives the children a feeling of security and teaches them to get along with

Getting Married Again?

Most of us get married again every time we go to a wedding—or even hear about one. No matter whether it's in the family or out.

If you remember your own wedding, you had lots of questions—and you got as many answers as you had advisers. It was all pretty confusing. No need for this to happen to the girl you know who's getting married.

You can dispel most of the confusion by giving her the most welcome present ever—a bookful of answers from the nation's leading bridal authority, House Beautiful's GUIDE FOR THE BRIDE. From it she can learn all the basic principles of what she needs to know to plan her wedding, her home and her future.

Here's the kind of helpful information she can get from the Fall issue of GUIDE FOR THE BRIDE now on sale at newsstands.

THE THIRD PARENT

other members of the family.

The Irving Axelrads pictured on page 103 are a family of seven who have worked out several especially successful family activities. Each evening at dinner they have "Telling Time." Every child has a turn describing some incident that happened to him during the day. This delightful custom makes for lively but controlled dinner conversation. It also trains the children to listen to each other without interrupting and to share in each other's activities and interests.

The Axelrads are also what you might call a musically attuned family. Three members play the piano —Mr. and Mrs., and Karen, who takes a ten-minute-a-day lesson from her mother. The boys profess no interest in studying music, but they're perfectly happy to sit around the living room listening to records or to have some one else play while they sing.

The whole family also congregates in front of the television on Wednesday nights to watch Disneyland. This is the only program they deliberately watch together, but it is one more excuse for a pleasant family gathering. On a recent Wednesday night, eleven-year-old Steve remarked that he wished the family would see more shows together. The possibility of his wishes being realized seems likely as the children grow older and are ready for the better adult TV programs.

JUST as doting parents want to give their children all the education and knowledge they can to help them lead purposeful lives, so too a good house has an obligation to the children. It should offer them as many opportunities for fun, adventure and quiet as possible. It has to have the elasticity of a juggler to keep balancing all the many elements that make up a full childhood.

Fun for children, to name one element, takes many forms. From the organized games like badminton and basketball that need special sports equipment to the less formal games of tag and hide-and-seek, a good house is expected to provide the proper conditions for play. Children also crave adventure and the excitement found in tree-climbing and exploring the country that surrounds the home. They need open spaces for running and secret hideouts for games of their imagination.

Pets are another essential part of childhood that a good house makes provision for. Youngsters seem to thrive on the affection they give to and receive from animals. And taking responsibility for another living soul is a real lesson in growing up.

Intellectual projects at a child's level are important, too. Many a celebrated career in science started as a hobby. Having the kind of room where rock collecting, model-building and chemistry experiments are permitted fosters a child's mental growth. And because all children's play is actually a preparation for adulthood, the games that imitate real-life situations are of great value. Electric trains, toy soldiers, nurse kits and tea sets all have an important place in a home.

CRAFTS like painting, sewing and gardening give the youngsters a foretaste of real creative work so that these, too, need to be encouraged. And about once in every family cycle there comes the time when the older boys feel the need for a large-scale building project such as constructing a jalopy or building a boat. These unsightly, long-drawn-out jobs are hard to live with. They're tough on parents and harder on a house until one realizes that it is about the last step before full maturity. Regarded in this light, even the smallest house can make room for one last childhood experience.

Coupled with the jalopy stage is the boy-meets-girl routine. When youngsters reach the teen-age party and dance phase a house can help or hinder them in their first social venture. A house that takes kindly to awkward party guests is a great asset. One that has a terrace with an attractive aura of romance about it and where the parents' chaperonage is actual but not overbearing encourages teenagers in their first steps toward a wholesome understanding and interest in members of the opposite sex.

About the time that parents feel satisfied and comforted in the thought that they've given their offspring all any children could possibly want in a home, the unpredictable younger generation goes off on a totally new tangent of its own. It's then that it becomes apparent that the three devoted parents have done a commendable job of raising their children, because they've helped turn out young people with firm convictions and high ideals—individuals with minds of their own.

Joan Smith will represent Massachusetts, _Georgia Washington_ will represent Virginia, _Jeannette Lafitte,_ Louisiana, and _Andrea Jackson,_ South Carolina, in the tableau depicting their ancestors.

Herself a relative of the Colonial hero who gave his name to Fort Lee, _Mrs. de Diego_ is a playwright and author of distinction, whose works have been translated into many languages and dialects, including the Southern, and she has traveled widely.

Mrs. de Diego says, "I always carry my own linens with me, and on my last world tour I took only Springmaids. They are everywhere considered the best example of American superiority. In Calicut a Nabob forced his way into my bedroom and I was terribly frightened until I found he only wanted to unravel a sheet to see how the smooth yarns were spun. In Yokohama a pillowcase was stolen off my bed by a Japanese spy so they could try to copy the lustre of the finish.

"The _Boy of Algiers_ is now wearing a fitted sheet as a dinner coat, and the _Sultana of Sarawak_ has made quite a riotous romper out of a purple percale pillowcase.

"In Monte Carlo they used one of my green sheets to cover a casino table, which inspired the _Duchess von Bourbon_ who is an ex-chambermaid, to double her bets and break the bank."

aks specifically of the artist, but his remarks apply beautifully to children (and to ourselves): "Everything that we see in our daily life is more or less distorted by acquired habits," he writes, "and this is perhaps more evident in an age like ours when the cinema, posters and magazines present us every day with a flood of ready-made images which are to the eye what prejudices are to the mind.

"The effort needed to see things without distortion takes something very like courage; and this courage is essential to the artist, who has to look at life as he did when he was a child and, if he loses that faculty, he cannot express himself in an original, that is, a personal way.

"To take an example. Nothing, I think, is more difficult for a true painter than to paint a rose, because, before he can do so, he has first to forget all the roses that were ever painted. I have often asked visitors who came to see me at Vence whether they had noticed the thistles by the side of the road. Nobody had seen them; they would all have recognized the leaf of an acanthus on a Corinthian capital, but the memory of the capital prevented them from seeing the thistle in nature.

"The first step toward creation is to see everything as it really is, and that demands a constant effort."

It would be gratuitous on our part to add anything further to Matisse's comment on the importance of awareness as prelude to any act of creativity.

Personal attitudes. It is up to us to strengthen our children's wish to remain free and sensitive in their envisaging of the world, despite the pressures they witness daily to make them conform to the usual forms and figures. Here comic books, coloring exercises (where the child has simply to fill in outlined figures with color) and copying methods often prove fatal. They standardize the child's attitude and narrow the range of his vision. They strait-jacket his fantasy.

"Copying destroys self-confidence, builds false skills, hinders initiative, atrophies the imagination." So read a striking sign on the walls of the New York Museum of Modern Art last spring during an exhibition of children's art. It refers, of course, to a method of art instruction that was all too popular not too long ago, when children were obliged to reproduce as faithfully as possible such geometric forms as the sphere, cylinder and cube, and such objects as a bottle, a pail or a piece of fruit.

TODAY, thanks partly to the liberating influence of modern art and partly to a more humane approach to education, children are no longer viewed as raw clay to be molded into model men and women. We have learned to individualize our attitude and system of teaching. We have learned to educate each child, not simply children in general.

We now try to bring out the uniqueness of each child by first trying to understand what it is that distinguishes him from any other child. We are personalizing our approach according to his shyness or his boldness, his clumsiness or his adroitness, his predilection for the physical or his preference for the fanciful. We are varying our methods as does an architect confronted with a special site, a peculiar climate, a particular client. We are doing no less for each child, and it is a tribute to our considerable advance in this direction that we need say no more about it.

It is in a child's creative play, in the expression of his experience of life, when all is still new and magical, that we can often best assay his special quality and learn to nurture it to maturity. He reveals himself in his art activities where elsewhere he may conceal the delicate center of himself for fear of our clumsiness or of our failure to understand.

Yet there is one cautionary word that must be spoken at this point: Don't play amateur psychiatrist with your child's mind by means of his art. Regrettably, there is a tendency among some teachers these days, for example, to classify a child according to his use of color or of line. (The bizarre terms are respectively "pyknic" and "leptosomic" types.)

Let your child's mind alone. It is free from the censorship and inhibitions of later life. It has not yet tasted from that tree of knowledge which will require the child's leaving the child's garden of Eden forever.

If a child should need special care, it were far better to leave his diagnosis to a capable family doctor rather than to anyone else, however sympathetic or otherwise well trained he might be.

Even the demonstration of too much curiosity on our part, the searching for meaning in every figure that he draws, might tend to drive the child inward for many years and prevent him from risking personal expression in his art, if it seems to arouse too much attention. Certainly our adult world is full of such examples of fearful, fully-closed individuals who are afraid of daring a personal point of view in public.

Now it is perhaps necessary to add a note of caution to the preceding one. The key word, in my opinion, to all relations between adults and children (as between adults and adults) is relax. So far as children are concerned, we parents are but one of three influences; the other two are, first, their peer groups or playmates and, second, their teachers. We can easily take too much credit or blame on ourselves for their successes or failures in art and other undertakings throughout life.

On the whole, if we were to adopt the casual but affectionate attitude recommended by Dr. Spock toward all our children's experiences, we should be doing very well by them.

Means of personal expression. It is difficult, if not impossible, completely to separate personal attitudes from personal expression. It is necessary, however, to make the attempt, if we are to help a child toward the expression of himself.

The first involves the child's private vision of the world; the second, his effort to communicate it to himself or to us.

There are many means of communication, but the vast majority of us use only two of them: speech and writing. In both cases words are employed to get across our ideas. In turn, our feeling of fulfillment, of self-expression in short, depends on our fluency, our vocabulary and our sense of success in making ourselves understood.

For most children there is little chance for such fulfillment, for theirs is a very limited vocabulary and very little fluency. Simultaneously, everything the child experiences is crying for expression. As a matter of fact, he often cries because of his inability to achieve expression, for without it he is without communication with those he loves and with those he recognizes as fellow creatures.

Largely because we as a have arrived at verbal commun tion, we have lost—most of other means of expression thr lack of use or of interest. Th becomes necessary to remind selves that not everything is said in words. If this were Beethoven, Da Vinci, Rodin Wright would have been novelist, orator or essayist, ins of musician, painter, sculptor architect.

THERE are many things to be and many ways of saying th There are pictorial ideas as as literary ones. There are text ideas, possibly best told in and embroideries. There are i of external space that require sc ture, and conceptions of inte space that call for architect There are other ideas that can be expressed in other mate and other forms. And unles child, who is our subject here, f a way to express them, the insp tional source of these ideas will up for lack of an outlet. He be reduced to what he can conc within the restricted limits o child's vocabulary.

So, our primary responsibilit to provide our children with a v variety of means of expression f which they may freely choose.

Obviously, water colors or po paints are not the only me There are music and conversat as well as literature and const tion, and the child should hav close acquaintance with and chance at each and all of them.

Mozart's genius was awake by a piano and a violin at the of three or four. Einstein's imag tion was kindled by the possess of a cheap compass when he a child. Goethe's by marionet Who knows precisely what it that lights a spark that sets a ch on fire for the rest of his li What we do know is that a ch should have such inspiration arou him, that he should be in the ha situation of being able to cho his influences, whether they ar book or a box of paints, th pounds of clay or balls of colo yarn. And we should arrange these things to attract him by t neatly separated groups from wh he is invited to choose, not conf him with their disorder and jum hout in any way undervaluing ecessary development and en- gement of the child's com- cation by means of speech). are intimate experiences that words and the child can lose apacity for these experiences s he finds a means to express . They involve subjective emo- . feelings and sentience, all of require visual symbols rather words to communicate them.

? case for plastic expression s been best made by Herbert . Contributing an important le to Education and Art, he s:

ducation has a two-fold pur- : to develop the personality apacity of the individual, and ect an understanding 'between and man.' It is doubtful if the onality itself can be fully de- ped unless it can project sub- e experience into concrete s, and do this with increasing and exactitude; but obviously econd and equally important f education remains frustrated ss the individual can communi- subjective experience, and experience can only be com- cated by specific symbols.

uch symbols are effective as a of communication to the de- that they are expressive as s of art. If we do not encour- our children to express them- s in symbolic forms, we fail velop the most efficient modes ommunicating experience. We the world dependent on a uage of thought and a mode easoning that can only express narrow and exclusive realm of epts and judgments.

But that is not the whole case ducation through art. However ow and exclusive it may be, irsive reasoning is of the ut- importance for the develop- t of humanity. But the vitality ought is dependent on feeling. in and again scientists and sophers have confessed that decisive moments of inspira- and invention have been meta- ical. That is to say, at the cal moment in the rational ment they have had to desert abstract concepts and 'think in ges.' " is, then, to help our children beyond abstract concepts and nk in images" that we enter on the early and, we trust, ring experience of art.

is, as well, to "think in feel- in personal emotion." And in regard the importance of the d's use of color becomes para- nt, for there is an emotional content and response to color which cannot be equally expressed in lines, which, after all, usually convey a story, an anecdote or a literal expression that might be as well communicated by words.

There is also an exuberant freedom in the use of color, particularly in freely applied colors such as oils and poster paints (rather than stiff wax crayons), which emboldens an unrestrained expression on the part of the child.

Clay too has the same emancipating effect and it can be made to express things which might not be managed by a recalcitrant pencil in unskilled fingers. However, if a child shows a distinct preference for drawing rather than coloring or modeling one should not insist on his using color or clay. The major debate in modern art often appears to be between the draughtsmen and the colorists, so it hardly seems profitable to engage a child rigidly on one side or another. All that is required is to encourage our children to try their hands at various expressive and plastic media.

FORTUNATELY for parents, a new book has appeared which is of eminently practical use in deciding what tools and materials to buy, and what art games to encourage among children. Written by Victor D'Amico and others, it is well titled Art for the Family (Simon & Schuster, $2.95). It begins simply and directly to enlist your attention:

"Art is for you! Do you like color? . . . bright colors like red and orange and yellow . . . soft colors like gray and beige and moss green? Would you like to invent your own colors? Do you like to touch pleasant things? . . . like petting your cat? . . . or feeling soft silk? Do you like to discover things? . . . drawings and patterns on the sidewalk? . . . or explore strange places? . . . If you do, then you'll like to . . . make feeling pictures . . . tell your ideas in clay . . . paint pictures of sound . . . make paper magics . . . build space designs . . . or any number of things."

many useful suggestions on how to get children and adults started (no small task in some adult cases) and how to keep them going. To these might be added other inspirational tricks, picked up from various teachers and books:

1. Draw a large block-letter S on a sizable sheet of paper. Have the child add to it in any way he sees fit—making it into a snake, a head and a body, or into any abstract design that appeals to him.

2. Crumple up a paper, then spread it out and have the child trace out the patterns made by the creases. Encourage him to vary the patterns.

3. Let the child make ink blots or drip paints, if he wishes, and work from the forms he has thus haphazardly produced. (Remember, we are after the experience of art, first of all, not works of art.)

4. Make some doodles on a large sheet of paper or have the child make them. With these as a point of departure, he may go on on his own.

Whatever the trick, whatever the medium, our aim is to get the child started with the means of expression we are making available for him.

Growth in self-expression. It is important, once again, to reassert our goal, for we must always refer to it in the education of our children in art, particularly when we discuss our role in it as parents.

Our goal is to call out by inspiration and example the unique powers of creativity in each child, to help him develop, grow and mature in his own fashion. It is to be wise enough to help him master his means of expression so that he can communicate his particular vision of the world.

We are not aiming at the child's creation of an art that has exact representation of nature, perfect perspective and proportion, but at personal observation and insight, spontaneous and individual expression in the child's art activities. We are interested, over and above all else, in his continuing growth as a fully developed individual.

Toward the end of Art for the Family, the authors indicate some of the signs of this growth in the form of questions which the reader is expected to answer for himself:

"Everyone will grow in a different way and at a different speed. Look at your work for ways in which you have been growing. Compare what you are doing recently with the work you did a month or two ago. How is it different? Do you experiment more with your materials, like mixing new colors, inventing new textures and shapes? Does your work show that you are using your imagination more and finding new ways of expressing your ideas? Do you control your tools and materials better and make them do more nearly what you want them to do? Do you choose the material that is best for your idea and not force it to do what you have in mind? Can you work for a longer time without getting tired or losing interest in your idea?

"The most important signs of growth in art," the authors conclude, "may not show in your work at all, but perhaps you can notice some changes in yourself that tell that you are growing.

"Do you notice color, texture, pattern, and movement more in the world about you? Are you less afraid to try a new idea? Do you like and respect your own ideas more? Are you more understanding of the work of others, and will you let them be themselves? Then you have grown . . ."

Although these questions are obviously addressed to adults, they can be used by adults to measure the growth in their children and to test to what extent they have been helpful in encouraging the child toward self-expression and independence.

Often, it is true, the education of a child, even at a very early age, is confided to educational experts, particularly in art, and all our remarks are more in the way of helping parents to understand the role of the art teacher rather than to prepare them for the role itself. Nevertheless, the more the parent understands, the better he will participate at home with the child's growing awareness and expression.

Parents can kill a child's impulse to creativity by indifference on one hand and too sharp criticism on the other. About indifference there is very little to say, if only for the reason that indifferent parents would not have read this far. As for an unduly critical attitude, this requires a real readjustment in adult thinking and the willing suspension of academic or conventional attitudes about art.

No matter how one views "modern art" and its distortions, it might suffice merely to remember that we are not asking for masterpieces from our children, but simply creative and unrestrained expression of their experiences. If, for instance, a child draws a picture of his mother with her arms indicated as much longer than we are accustomed to see them, it might relax the parent to realize that for the child a mother's arms are very important and he might be expressing that importance by exaggerating their length in his drawing. Similarly, as others have pointed out, when a child draws a horse with six or eight legs, he may be simply trying to indicate the speed he sees in a horse.

THE part we parents might play to aid the teacher, where there is one, is by contributing to the child's increasing awareness, by showing him new possibilities by working along with him, by encouraging him with real understanding and enthusiasm, by inspiring him with our own example.

We cannot hasten the growth of a tree by pulling on its branches, nor can we hasten the growth of a child by pushing him too fast. There is a natural rate of growth for most children and it would be well to have some knowledge of it. (Caution: The stages below may not apply to a particular child. To hold one back because he seems to be advancing too fast would be to misuse otherwise useful information about rates of growth. Similarly, to worry about lateness in developing is a needless affair. When the child is an adult, no one will care whether he learned to talk at three, four or six, and that certainly applies with even more truth to his ability in drawing.)

The first stage (from two to three or four years) might be called the age of scribbling. At this time the child simply moves his brush, pencil or fingers around for the sheer fun of watching them move.

The second stage (from three or four to seven or eight years) has been called the age of symbolism, when the child begins to draw figures which he says represent people and things around him. As he grows older, the figures grow more intricate and precise, although ordinarily they are far from recognizable individuals.

The third stage (from seven to ight to ten or eleven years—these re all rough divisions) is reached irectly from the second and with o visible break. It is a period of xperimentation and attempted con-rol. And it is primarily a transi-ional period to the next and last tage before young adulthood.

The fourth stage (from ten or leven upward) is the most critical f all the stages of a child's art xperience. It is also the most crit-al, it seems, in the life of the boy r girl, for it is the difficult period f puberty and adolescence.

"Play has lost its enchantment nd the child begins to worry about isual realism," Pierre Duquet ex-lains in Art and Education, "the hild's poetic vision of his world ives way to a rational vision . . .

"The golden age of plastic ex-ression is over; it has been re-laced by what may be called the cademic approach. If left to him-elf at this transition stage, he may ell lose his first flush of confi-ence. Up to this point he was nly dimly aware of his own awk-ardness, but now the veil has allen from his eyes and looking t his drawings impartially, he real-es that he is helpless to represent hat he sees. The little world of is imagination is crumbling about im."

It is at this time in their lives hat the greatest understanding is emanded of us, so that our adoles-ent children may continue to ex-ress themselves with freedom, and ot let themselves become so self-onscious that their self-expression s destroyed. And it is at this time hat both parent and teacher must ork co-operatively with full knowl-dge and sympathy for their joint hares in the child's development.

Even before this critical period, he child has been striving, as he ust, for greater and greater con-ol of his expression. That is part f the process of growing up. We ust accept the human inevitability f it. And we can help by not mak-ng a virtue out of childish clumsi-ess or crudeness in art for its own ake. Sometimes, of course, it can e charming, as are certain unex-ected adult expressions in the outh of a child, but in time they ill embarrass the child and us.

WE CAN help our children in art as we try to help them in ath-etics once we recognize the impor-ance of control and self-mastery in oth activities. When, to take an ex-mple, we teach a boy how to swing bat, we show him how he can achieve the greatest freedom and natural follow-through by handling the bat in an approved manner. The same is true for bowing a vio-lin or applying a paint brush.

We fail a child when we do not aid him toward grace and con-trol as he moves toward real and effective freedom of expression. As we can teach a child to speak with-out, we hope, forming the sentences and ideas he utters, so we should be able to instruct him in the vo-cabulary and grammar of art with-out defining and limiting his es-thetic vision and expression.

As for helping a child mature in art, one of the best books we can recommend in this regard is The Unfolding of Artistic Activity by Henry Schaefer-Simmern (Uni-versity of California Press, $5). It is even more useful for adult art education, for which it seems pri-marily intended.

Familiarity with the world of art and its great history. A discus-sion of this phase of our essay might well have preceded every-thing else we have said, for our atti-tude toward children and art is determined as much by our attitude toward art as toward children.

The photograph accompanying our opening paragraphs might have provided the occasion. It shows two little girls, one of them clutching a drawing board, lost in the study of a fine Seurat painting. Having tried their young hands at painting, the photograph seemed to say, they are anxious to discover the secrets of professional accomplishment.

But even if there were no draw-ing board visible or ever used, any-one knowing the gay, sunny period of Impressionist art, when modern painting was in its childhood and modern painters were still fasci-nated with sunlight and texture, would understand the fixed interest of the two girls. They are in the painting, exploring its lights and shadows, its Sunday picnickers in neat French groups, its drawing of the boats on the river.

And even if art as an activity might some day fail them, the world of art experience never will. As the child who can read is never alone, so the child who can see will never be in the dark. Throughout his life it will have meaning for him. It will fill his days with pat-tern, color and form. It will en-hance his life and extend his vision.

If art is expression, as we have maintained, then the appreciation and enjoyment of art are expres-sion transferred from the artist to the spectator. For the closer we come to the artist in his act of creation through appreciating his work of art, the closer we come to experiencing a creative act of expression on our own part. But each work of art must be felt as our own, or it will have no value and we shall have no experience.

Although it would be an exaggeration to say that only those who have tried to paint can appreciate a painting, there is some element of truth in Goethe's statement that "one can only grasp what one can produce oneself." We might add that if one has not painted or experienced art creatively, then to appreciate art well will mean taking as much effort as if one had painted oneself.

"Just as no one can discover his life purpose apart from the process of living," DeWitt Parker has written, "or the purpose of another except through sympathy; so no one can know the meaning of art except through creating and enjoying and entering into the esthetic life of other artists and art lovers."

ONE further remark about a child's familiarity with the world of art: Too many art teachers, zealously trying to avoid copying on the part of their students, deliberately keep their young charges from visits to museums and exhibitions for fear of the influences they might "suffer" from seeing the works of older masters.

Actually, all good artists have worked with a thorough consciousness of the long history of art behind them, as well as before them. They know the masterpieces of their predecessors as no casual spectator ever can, and they have drawn, literally drawn, a great deal of their inspiration from their canvases.

This acceptance of influence on the part of the artist has been very well described by André Malraux in his Voices of Silence:

"Whether an artist begins to paint, write, or compose early or late in life, and however effective his first works may be, always behind them lie the studio, the cathedral, the museum, the library or the concert-hall. Inasmuch as painting, though representing or suggesting three dimensions, is limited to two, any painting of a landscape is bound to approximate more closely any other painting of a landscape than the actual scene depicted in it. Thus the young painter has not to make a choice between his personal 'vision' and his master or masters, but between certain canvases and certain other canvases. Did he not derive his vision from some other painter or painters, he would have had to invent the art of painting for himself."

Malraux perhaps exaggerates in his effort to assert historical influences and is unnecessarily harsh on the subject of personal "vision," which is certainly possible to prove by referring to such artists as the Douanier Rousseau, Giotto and our own Picasso. But, on the whole, his point is a valid one.

As for Picasso, I've had occasion to question him on the subject of "influences."

"What do you say to young painters," I asked him, "who think of themselves as so influenced by your work that they can't escape it?"

"They should be influenced," Picasso replied, and everyone at the dinner table laughed.

"They should have parents," he continued stubbornly. "Like dogs with a pedigree, they should come from somebody. But they all want to be fils naturels [illegitimate offspring]. Take me; some people say my father was Cézanne."

"Was he?"

"Of course he was!"

Coming from an artist who has given the wheel of art the sharpest twist in its history, the danger of influences should consequently seem a fairly minor danger for parents and teachers to be concerned about in the art education of children.

Visits to museums, repeated trips to the great works of master spirits will contribute to the encouragement and stimulation of the child; it will not lead, as some seem to fear, to his falling into conformism and academicism.

IF THERE is any conclusion to be drawn from our study of children and art, it is this one:

Don't let fear of anything occur in your relations with your children, and as a result no fear of expressing themselves freely and fully will ever occur to your children.

If they do not become artists in the professional sense, it won't matter a great deal, if at all, for they will have become artists in living—free and sensitive in a world of beauty of their own creating. Having formed it, they will have formed themselves, and that is the real beauty of creative expression.

JAMES ABBE

"It's mine—and it grew from a seed I planted. Have you a garden?"

How do you enter the wonderful world of gardening?

By DR. JOSEPH E. HOWLAND

Those who are fortunate entered it as children. Someone has helped them focus their natural childish curiosity until they saw a plant as a miracle. Sometimes it came from planting a seed and watching it grow. Or it may have started with slicing an onion so that the arrangement of the hidden parts came as a revelation. Or it may have come from watching and wondering why a leaf turns in the air as it falls.

What prompts this response, or who helps crystallize it, is unimportant. The first thing must always be an inquiring mind. Inquiry comes naturally to a child. He wants to know why things are as they are; everything interests him. He is so anxious to explore everything that he fails to wait for a slow answer to anything. Someone has to help him consider one thing long enough to see all that there is to see. Someone has to help him exhaust all the possibilities. Is he seeing what he thinks he is seeing? Is there a better explanation?

A seed contains the whole plant. Watching it with seeing eyes means the unfolding of the whole story of growing plant life. Never again will plants be "just plants" or leaves "just leaves." Nothing so imprecise is good enough for a mind that has wondered about life as a seed grew before its eyes. It needn't be the academic dryness of a botanist cataloguing what he sees in a leaf or flower, however, for the latter too often wonders only about "What do I see?" rather than about the greater "Why is it so?".

Great rewards await the inquiring mind in its discoveries of the wonders of the world of plants. Everywhere and in everything its possessor does in life will be more plants to enjoy, as old friends or as fresh discoveries. These are treasures that changes in age, health or wealth can't take away. Nor do they depend on companions.

Parents can do much to help a child enter the wonderful world of gardening. Their enthusiasm is first in importance. The child whose parents aren't satisfied with a casual look at things has a tremendous advantage. He is much more likely to have his every "Why" made reason enough for an exploration together. Example, too, introduces friendly competition, for every child wants desperately to excel. It is his way of building confidence in himself. When he sees more than his guide, he is fired to look even closer for any possibilities that he may have overlooked

PARENTS also help by making time available for deep, searching study of plants. The more fortunate ones can provide garden space too. Any parent can supply a garden of some sort, if only a few pots in the window. Then there are the trees along the street, the flowers in the parks. Each has many lessons when parent and child are "tuned" to see together. Garden tours open up revealing experiences to the child who knows how to see beyond the over-all beauty, to appreciate the wonder of one plant. Nor can we afford to forget books. Botany books can be fascinating to the awakened mind of even a young reader who has looked carefully at plants.

Interest wanes if gardening is allowed to lapse into mere onlooking. The child craves a chance to do things. He must before long have a plot of ground of his own. At five he is not too young. Six is better, if his finger-skill is slow to develop. What is important is a reasonable chance for success. Without success in the plants he grows he will lose his enthusiasm. Rekindling his pleasure in gardening may be difficult indeed if his marigold does not bloom, or his squash vines wither.

Success in growing plants calls for a wise use of a bagful of tricks. First, do all the hard work before the child comes to the scene. This includes preparation of the soil and rounding up the needed equipment. Second, keep the child actively at work while he is on the scene. He doesn't care what he does as long as he is kept constantly busy on useful work. Assign him the jobs he can do best. Then he will get great personal satisfaction from knowing he has done a job well. What this job is depends upon his particular physical skills. The five-year-old drops peas easily, but dusty petunia seeds call for a skill young fingers just don't have. Pulling weeds, yes; but slicing them off with the hoe, no. Setting out tomato plants, holding them by their sturdy leaves, is a fine job for a seven-year-old. It would be a mistake to think he could plant the feathery-leaf cosmos which must be held gently and without pinching.

Third, stick to fast-growers for the first garden. Prompt results are a great boost to morale. Fast-growers are also by nature the easiest to grow. They often complete their cycle before the bugs and blights of the year get started. They seldom need staking and tieing, time-consuming jobs that kill that awakening interest which should have no discouragement.

Four, pest control is the parent-guide's job the first year. Oh, let the beginner spray and dust, too, but mainly to get the feel of the job. Be sure the serious pest-killing has been insured by prior action. The same applies to watering. Beginners just haven't the needed patience to get the water down deeply enough into the soil. They move on to a new patch long before the old one is wet down to the minimum 6 inches.

GARDENING is a lifetime's learning, with the joys of discovery and accomplishment at every step. The child's first encounters mustn't be so packed with things to remember that he becomes discouraged.

Five, garden feeding, however, can't be put off. Correct methods must be learned. Rates have to be right. The range from starvation to death-bringing overfeeding is quite specific. Beginners respond well to these facts. They like to feel that is does make a difference how things are done. Accomplishment that demands knowledge adds stature to the work as long as too many rules needn't be learned at once.

Six, encourage family competition. The child wants his efforts appraised. It is only necessary to see that the competition be fair for his age and experience. Adults like the ease of decision in the multiple-award system where everybody above a certain score gets a blue ribbon. The child is a realist. He knows somebody has to be best. He wants to know who it is, and why. Be sure he isn't frustrated by discovering the judges failed to decide this.

Seven, show your pride in craftsmanship. Perfect your own, and talk about it as something that adds pleasure to your life. Instill the idea that it is a legitimate goal to treasure, one that can be achieved only by individual effort. Let the beginner know that it is a badge of honor appreciated by all peoples, a passport to prize through life. Admit that it isn't won lightly, but assure him that it is open to every normal person. Show him how one skill builds upon the next, how each day adds to the day before. Remind him that being a craftsman in gardening moves him a long step toward craftsmanship in other rewarding fields.

Craftsmanship in gardening starts with radish rows that are straight, plants that are spaced uniformly. A beginner understands this, and takes pride in his developing abilities. Next year he can master hoeing, maybe spading, spraying, dusting, the transplanting of more delicate plants from their seed flats, and staking and tying the plants that need support without injuring them. All jobs must be done time and again before they fit neatly into craftsman-like order.

Eight, the parent-guide, too, must grow. Visit other gardens. Join a garden club. Keep up with the new ways. Enter competitions yourself to check on just how you rate with others.

Nine, provide the child with his own tools, scaled to his strength but, more important, his tools. Keep them sharp for him the first year. Paint them in a bright color to make them easier to spot when "lost." Provide a special place to store them. Give them the dignity of work tools, not toys. As far as practical, make them duplicates of your own favorite tools which he has seen you use.

REMEMBER, please, that the best of gardeners forget from year to year just how to perform a specific operation. Unlike most activities, gardening is a long cycle, with 12 months going by before a job is repeated. Be patient if a child forgets from year to year what he has learned (Don't we all!). Your success is to be measured by one gauge only: Does your child find it fun to grow plants and to observe the results of his efforts.

Special small sprayer replaces expensive big tank truck, makes custom-mixing on the scene practical after a quick soil test.

Lawn feeding tailored to suit the needs of your soil

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL reported in June (page 125) a new development in gardening—liquid feeding of lawns on a regular schedule as a summer-time project of local oil companies. The idea was that this kept tank trucks and crews busy all summer and freed the lawn owner from the bother of feeding his lawn.

Since then another type of liquid feeding has come into existence. Instead of being an "off-season" venture of fuel oil dealers, it depends upon full-time specialists who test the soil and custom-mix a solution to supply the specific needs of the particular soil. This mixing is done on the job in special equipment that is bantam size instead of the usual big tank truck used for general feeding with a single standard solution. This small unit has special agitators that insure uniformity within the solution. (Last June we warned that constant agitation is needed in any liquid feeding.)

The same warnings that we made in June about "knowing the man" apply. We suggest again that you check to see that he uses nationally known plant foods, and now add the suggestion that you check for spray equipment designed for the job.

Lawns starved because heavy May and June rains washed away the plant food will profit greatly from September feeding, especially if tailored to their needs. This newest lawn-feeding service takes all the work out of the job. Cost? About what you would pay to have someone spread dry plant food on your lawn by hand.

The Indian sang his death song

100 YEARS AGO, during a frontier skirmish, an Indian brave, singing his own death song, charged down on a young officer.

Lieutenant George Crook, 4th Infantry, coolly fell to one knee, carefully aimed, and dropped the brave in his tracks.

It was not Crook's first Indian, nor his last. (His right leg already contained a flint arrowhead he was to carry to his grave.) And by the time he made general, Crook was the greatest Indian-fighter this country has ever had.

Yet, he was also one of the best friends the Indians have ever had. For he understood them well, dealt fairly and firmly, and always kept his promises. When Crook died, Indians wept. And a Sioux chief named Red Cloud said: "He never lied to us. His words gave the people hope."

No nation can ever have enough men like George Crook. But America had, and still has, a lot of them. That's important to remember. Because it is a wealth of human character rather than a wealth of money that gives America its real worth. Just as it is the Americans, all 160 million of them, standing behind our country's Savings Bonds, who make these Bonds one of the world's finest investments.

For your sake—and America's—why not take advantage of this fact? Invest in—and hold—United States Savings Bonds.

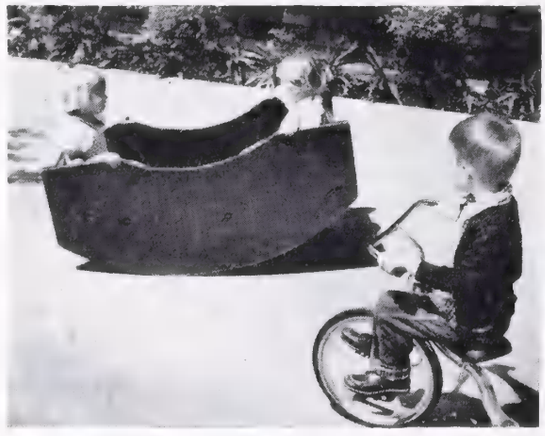
To Be Made by Father

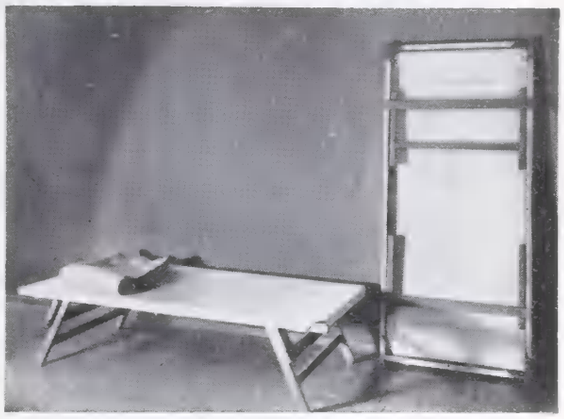


Locomotive with wood plank base, wood crate "cab," and 5-gallon can "boiler." Four projects on this page were designed by Ronald Hess for the Nursery School of Neighborhood Church, Pasadena, Calif. Sarah M. Beckman, director.

Children often enjoy toys father makes far more than expensive ones. Here's a tunnel of fun made of composition, war-surplus piping. It is light and easy to move, and rests safely on cut-out supports made of solid 1" x 10" boards.

Although designed and made by a professional, this clothes rack is useful equipment for school or playroom that father could make with ease. Sturdy, accessible, it is set so solidly on its feet that even bumper crops of overloading will not overturn it.

All parts of this "rocking boat" are cut from ¾" Douglas Fir plywood. It is 24" wide, 48" long and 24" high, and will safely hold four small children. The radius of the outer edge of the rockers is 48".



The "jumping board," made from a 2" x 12" fir plank 10 feet long, is suspended between the saw horses. Wood cleats nailed to ends of plank prevent its slipping off supports. Horses are 24" wide, 36" long for stability.

GRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Here real dolly is loaded with blocks, pieces of wood, nails, and hammers to practice missing that thumb. This item of play equipment was planned by Helen Brice Smith for the Pasadena Nursery School of the Neighborhood Church.

Just right for youthful rest hours are these cots made of canvas with wooden frames and legs. Shown both set up and folded, the simplicity of construction is self-evident. This is another Ronald Hess design.

Architect Robert Mosher constructed these children's parallel bars from four 4" x 4" posts set firmly in concrete with two 1½" brass handrails (salvaged from store-remodeling job) screwed to their inside faces 20" apart. For children eight years or older, bars are 48" from the ground.

It's Nature's seeding time!

Follow the experts who know that gentle fall rains and summer-warmed soil insure maximum seed germination. New grass gets the jump on weeds and stools out into deep-rooted turf.

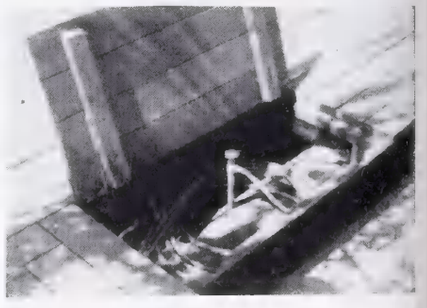
For a lawn to thrill you, SOW Scotts ®. Its all-perennial blend is famous from coast to coast . . . Scotts means grass at its best. For the nourishment your lawn needs, feed TURF BUILDER ®. When you must devote a sizable area to children's play activities

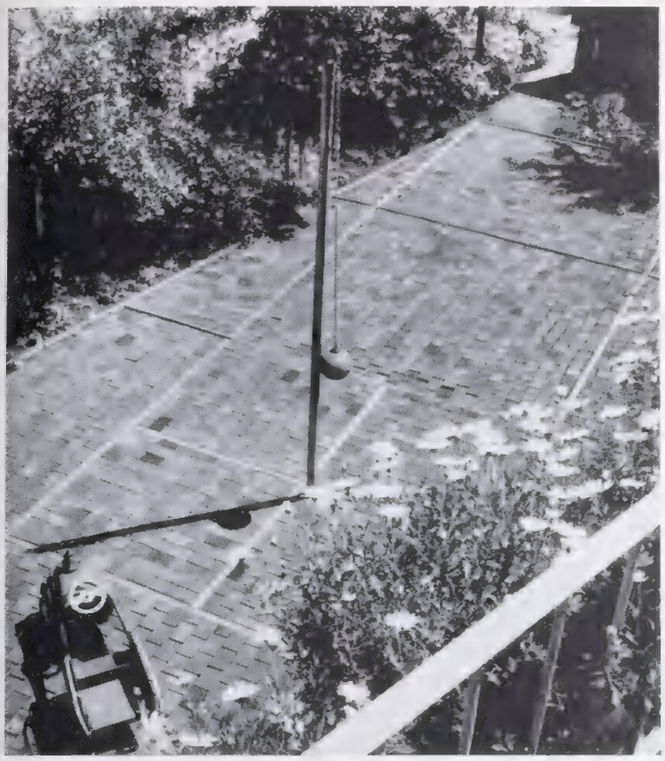
During the 5- to 12-year-old period, children need a big area for their highly active play and you may have to give up most of the garden to it

DOUGLAS BAYLIS, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT



Swings and climbing devices mounted as above look much neater than the usual miscellany of separate items. Conversion later into vine supports or even the framework of a garden shelter house will be a simple project.

THOMAS CHURCH, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT



Wheeled toys are more likely to remain on paved areas, if you outline latter with raised seat walls like those above. The extra seating comes in handy, too, as does the storage place created underneath for things like garden hose and small tools (right).

DOUGLAS BAYLIS, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT

No play surface is better than lawn grass, but no grass can survive daily pounding. If your play area is small, then you must pave. Brick on sand is fine for games that require non-skid footing like tetherball; tanbark is better for games that are rough-and-tumble.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

walnut, delightful to look at and divine for sitting because it is precisely molded to fit the sitter. Price is comfortably under $25. Must remember to tell Mrs. Wilson when she gets back in the fall. She's always complaining about a dearth of chairs for those 17 squabbling committees that are everlastingly meeting at her house. Half-a-dozen well-mannered folders ought to ease the tension quite a bit.

Mrs. Holcomb was dead set on having a chintz slipcover for her new loveseat, and I was equally determined she shouldn't. Don't often dismiss a client's request that categorically. But this time I was so sure she'd be sorry if she had her way that I felt morally obligated to thwart her. As it was, we had made a shaky enough compromise between the elegant citified character of the room and the easy-going country air of the provincial furniture. One touch of chintz would have thrown the game to the country cousins making the whole room a Big Mistake.

But I wasn't having much success finding an upholstery fabric. Solid colors were out, considering Mrs. Holcomb's appetite for pattern, and none of the woven-pattern fabrics showed any promise of fitting into our peculiar blend of square dance and minuet. Then my client began to talk about a toile. If I had to give way on the chintz, a toile would probably be the best candidate. I admitted (to myself, that is). At least I weakened enough to stop for a second look at what seemed to be a toile on display at Lehman-Connor. It was a toile. But not a chintz. They had woven an authentic toile design into a rugged tapestry. No slipcover fabric this, but a permanent upholstery that we could tailor as formally as we pleased. It came in several colors including a sharp blue and a sharp red that I'd like to try somewhere sometime. But the black was by all odds the most formal, so I took a sample of that to Mrs. Holcomb. As I predicted, she was sufficiently enchanted with the pattern to overlook the fact that it was not chintz. Now that the loveseat is all finished and a huge success, she is congratulating herself on having been right all along. And I, of course, am congratulating myself ditto.

Best argument I know in behalf of the relaxed frame of mind is what happens when I drop into any showroom that's handy for a ten minute browse before keeping an appointment. Almost always have something eminently usable to show for it, which is more than I can say for many an hour I spend doggedly searching.

Latest fruits of this time-killing technique are James Crumerine's lamps at America House. Now there's a man who knows how to reduce a decorative lamp to its barest essentials! Comes up with something so much prettier than all those wedding cake creations. A simple, beautiful shape for the base, a pleasant color, a few lines of incised pattern, and a well-proportioned shade—that seems to be his recipe and it's just about foolproof for my money. Still it lends itself to seemingly endless variation. Of his current lot I liked best a table lamp with a black pattern base, a bit of white line decoration, and a white shade striped with black wood slats. Belongs to that rare species—the accessory that looks well in any room. —M. R.

TYPICAL COMMENT: "Music has been my whole life—but not until I heard my first Music-Appreciation Record did I realize how much I had been missing when I listened to orchestral music. I subscribed originally for my son, but quickly found that my own enjoyment of orchestral music was increased far beyond what I dreamed possible."

—Jarmila Novotna
STAR OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA

SPONSORED BY THE BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB, this new idea is designed for those who enjoy good music but who are aware, too often, that they do not listen to it with complete understanding and appreciation. There is no doubt about the reason: most of us are not primed about what to listen for. Music-Appreciation Records meet this need—for a fuller understanding of music—better than any means ever devised. This enjoyable form of self-education can be as thorough as the Music Appreciation courses given in many universities.

YOU SUBSCRIBE BUT TAKE ONLY THE RECORDS YOU WANT . . . A new Music-Appreciation Record is issued—for subscribers only—every month, preceded by an announcement written by the noted composer and music commentator Deems Taylor. After reading this descriptive essay you may take the record or not, as you decide at the time. You are not obligated to take any specified number of records. And you may stop the subscription at any time you please!

TWO TYPES OF RECORDS ARE AVAILABLE . . . All Music-Appreciation Records are high-fidelity, long-playing records of the highest quality—33⅓ R.P.M. on Vinylite. They are of two kinds: first, a so-called Standard Record—a twelve-inch disc—which presents the performance on one side, the analysis on the other. This is sold at $3.60, to subscribers only. The other is an Analysis-Only Record – a ten-inch disc – priced at $2.40. The latter is made available each month for any subscriber who may already have a satisfactory long-playing record of the work being presented. (A small charge is added to the prices above to cover postage and handling.)

TRY A ONE-MONTH SUBSCRIPTION — WITH NO OBLIGATION TO CONTINUE . . . Why not make a simple trial, to see if these records are as pleasurable and as enlightening as you may anticipate? The first record you choose will be sent to you at once —at no charge. You may end the subscription immediately after hearing this record, or you may cancel any time thereafter.

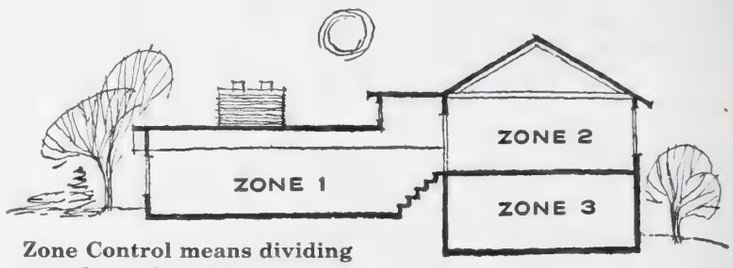
MAR 30A

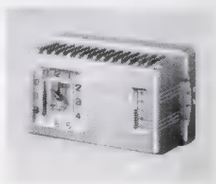
A handsome fireplace with its welcome warmth adds so much to family enjoyment on a winter evening! But this extra heat upsets the balance of ordinary temperature control systems and soon makes the rest of the house too cold. Large picture windows on sunny days will do the same thing. Only Zone Control, with its separate thermostat systems assures even comfort all over the house.



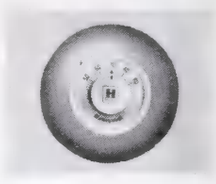
Bedrooms are often on separate levels and are used at different times from the rest of your home. Too, bedrooms sometimes face in another direction from your living room and therefore have a different exposure problem. This is why your sleeping area cannot be controlled comfortably by your living room thermostat. You need to zone your bedrooms with a separate Honeywell Thermostat!

The extra room in your house, whether basement game room, upper level playroom or first floor den, will have different exposure and use problems from your living area. Naturally, you want these rooms comfortable when you use them. The ideal way is with Honeywell Zone Control—it keeps your family comfortable in all parts of the house.

Honeywell Zone Control gives rich comfort to every part of your house



Zone Control means dividing your home into two—or more—comfort areas, each with a separate thermostat.



These modern thermostat systems can be used with Honeywell Zone Control

Electronic Moduflow. For major occupancy zones such as main living area. This is the new super-sensitive thermostat system that gives the very finest control. The jewel-like Golden Circle thermostat you see here goes on your living room wall. It works with a thermostat outside your house that anticipates changes in comfort needs.

Automatic Clock Thermostat. For night set-back zones such as bedroom areas. The famous Honeywell Clock Thermostat automatically turns the heat down at night for better sleeping comfort and greater fuel savings. Then it turns it up, warming the room before you awaken.

Honeywell Round. For intermittent-use zones such as den, playroom or basement game room. This is an unusually attractive decorator-designed manual thermostat. You can set it for the exact temperature you wish—or turn it back to save fuel when a room isn't used. The ring around the dial snaps off, can be painted to match any color scheme.

If you're building or plan to build a new home, be sure and talk to your architect or builder about Zone Control. And send for your FREE copy of the fully illustrated, colorful booklet on Honeywell Zone Control. Address. Honeywell, Dept. 2745, Minneapolis 8, Minnesota.

THE RECORDS YOU WANT DELIVERED TO YOUR DOOR

Each month, the Club's musical experts make their selections of the top records in four major fields of music. As a member, you may choose from the following Club Divisions: 1. Classical; 2. Listening and Dancing; 3. Broadway, Movies, Television and Musical Comedies; 4. Jazz.

You receive advance information about all Club Selections. You are free to accept or reject any of them. The records you want are mailed to you, direct from the Columbia factory.

FREE BONUS RECORDS

AND for every two records you buy, you receive a special 12" Columbia (LP) Bonus record FREE! They will be special records made exclusively for Club members, in limited editions not available elsewhere at any price.

HOW THE CLUB OPERATES

Each month you receive free the Club's interesting Magazine which brings you complete, advance information about all Club Selections. It lists the monthly Selection and an alternate choice in each Division.

Naturally, you will be most interested in the record Selection for your Division. If you decide you'd like to have it, you simply let it come to you, automatically, by mail. If you do not want it, you notify the Club by returning the convenient mailing form always provided. You may, if you wish, order the alternate record for your Division, or records from any other Division. Or you may take no record at all that month.

You are billed for the Club Selections or alternates you accept at the regular list price, usually $3.95, but occasionally $4.98 when the list price requires. A small charge is added for mailing. Your only obligation is to accept at least four records a year from among almost 100 offered. You may cancel your membership any time after purchasing four records.

ACCEPT THIS FREE OFFER!

Decide now which of the magnificent free records offered in this announcement you want to own. Indicate your choice on the coupon and send it direct to the Club, or if more convenient you may enroll at any established Columbia Records dealer's shop. In either case, your gift record is mailed to you free. And remember, this is only the first of many benefits you'll enjoy by joining the Columbia (LP) Record Club. Send the coupon now or see your dealer at once.

4 MUSICAL DIVISIONS TO PLEASE EVERY TASTE

CLASSICAL. Beethoven, Brahms, Mozart, Wagner, Tchaikovsky, Mendelssohn, Haydn, Debussy, and other immortals, played by the world's finest orchestras, under distinguished conductors.

LISTENING AND DANCING. Outstanding orchestras, Andre Kostelanetz, Paul Weston, Percy Faith, Xavier Cugat, Sammy Kaye and others, playing your favorite music.

BROADWAY, MOVIES, TELEVISION AND MUSICAL COMEDIES. Prized albums of such great shows as "Kiss Me Kate", "Pal Joey", "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and hits to come.

JAZZ. Louis Armstrong, Bix Beiderbecke, Count Basie, Duke Ellington, Woody Herman, Benny Goodman, Dave Brubeck, Eddie Condon, Gene Krupa and other jazz greats.

From the sweeping grace of the "curve of beauty" . . . the charm of a tiny bouquet

. . . a new pattern in Tōwle Sterling–Silver Spray

© 1955, TOWLE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, NEWBURYPORT, MASSACHUSETTS

In concept and execution Silver Spray embodies in every detail the superb artistry, the painstaking craftsmanship that are the hallmark of The Towle Touch in sterling.

SILVER SPRAY captures in glowing, living sterling the classic "curve of beauty"–the flowing ∫ curve considered by generations of artists to be the most pleasing form in art or nature. Towle designers have added to the pure, sweeping sculptured lines of the curve of beauty a simple spray of flowerettes that, in addition to their delightful decorative effect, are placed to give each piece a focus of functional balance.

SILVER SPRAY you will feel – invites the hand – and more – it is that rarity in tableware, a pattern that looks beautiful in the hand. And on your table you will enjoy yet another virtually unique characteristic of Silver Spray – a complete harmony of each place setting piece with the other.

SILVER SPRAY embodies many useful Towle Touches, of course. Among them the practical "place size" for knife, fork, and spoon–that happy in-between luncheon and dinner size that Towle was first to introduce.

But see Silver Spray in all its enchanting beauty and learn first hand of its many unusual features. Any of the fine stores that carry Towle Sterling will be happy to show you Silver Spray. And also discuss with you their convenient plans that will make Silver Spray yours to enjoy at once. Six piece place setting...$35.00.

Let your eyes choose style and color–

but always ask "What's Inside?"

IT'S EASY to lose your heart to the beauty and imagination that distinguish today's furniture.

But Mrs. America keeps her head on her shoulders–and doesn't buy before she asks "WHAT'S INSIDE?"

When The Man proudly replies–"AIRFOAM–in seat, back and armrests"–you know your choice is good business, as well as in good taste.

For AIRFOAM means cool, airy, lasting comfort beyond compare. AIRFOAM means welcome relief from the dust, lint and fluff that excite the common allergies. AIRFOAM means easier housework, fewer repair bills and long-lived good looks.

And–no matter how modest your budget–AIRFOAM gives you the thrill of owning the best, the smartest, the most modern furniture cushioning there is!

Goodyear, Airfoam Dept., Akron 16, Ohio

INSIDE VIEW of furniture above, showing AIRFOAM (cream color) in seats and backs. This truly modern cushioning will give your furniture years of smart, new appearance and deep, rich comfort–because there's nothing in AIRFOAM to sag, snag or break down!

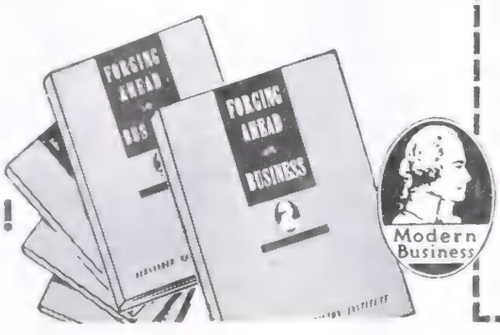
Airfoam–T. M. The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio

HALF the world is half asleep! Men who could be making twice their present salaries are coasting along, hoping for promotions but doing nothing to bring themselves forcefully to the attention of management.

They're wasting the most fruitful years of their business lives . . . throwing away thousands of dollars they may never be able to make up. And, oddly enough, they don't realize—even remotely—the tragic consequences of their failure to forge ahead while time is still on their side.

These are the men who are unknowingly headed for the frustrations and the disappointments of mediocrity. They'll go part way up the ladder and down again by the time they're fifty years old. They'll be executive material in their twenties and thirties—and clerks in their fifties. They'll have high hopes for themselves and their families while they're young; but only struggling, skimping and regret later on when their earning power should be at its height.



Send for Your Free Copy of "Forging Ahead in Business"

If you want to discover how to succeed while you are still young—if you want to avoid the heartbreak of failure in later years—send today for "Forging Ahead in Business" . . . one of the most practical and realistic booklets ever written on the problems of personal advancement.

Here you will find—not a "pep talk," not an academic lecture—but cold, hard facts on how to improve your position and increase your income. You will be told what the qualifications of an executive are in today's competitive market . . what you must know to make $15,000, $20,000 or more a year . . . what you must do to accumulate this knowledge.

"Forging Ahead in Business" was written for mature, ambitious men who seriously want to get down to bed-rock in their thinking about their business future. If you feel it is meant for you, simply fill in and return the coupon below. Your complimentary copy will be mailed to you promptly.

Soft, beautiful carpet makes you so proud of your home

We really can't blame you two for being so proud.

Every young couple we know feels that way about their house when it's carpeted.

Because there is nothing that does as much to make a house beautiful, does as much to make it a home, as carpet.

For carpet is not only handsome in itself – soft and warm and welcoming – it sets a rich and flattering frame around your furniture.

And carpet has a day-to-day practicality that makes it wonderfully easy to live with. Carpet is quiet because it swallows the noises that make a house "restless". And it provides safe, sure footing for playing children – or you, when you're rushing to the phone or the door.

Carpet adds so much and costs so little – in time, in work and in money. A quick vacuuming keeps it lovely . . . no tedious scrubbing, rinsing, waxing, or polishing. And, when you move, your carpet goes along with you – you haven't invested time and money in floors you leave behind.

Yes, all this – for so little. At today's prices you can probably afford to do two rooms for what you think one will cost.

Drop in at your store this week. See the display of lovely colors, modern patterns, exciting new weaves and textures. With small monthly payments you can have beautiful, long-wearing carpet on your floors right now. You'll be so glad you did.

COSTUMES BY BRITISH WOOLLENS

They picked it above all others...

The young ladies you see on this page are typical of young ladies everywhere.

To young ladies just like these—from one coast to the other—Gorham showed a preview model of its new sterling pattern "Celeste." And overwhelmingly, these brides-to-be chose "Celeste" as their favorite... far and above the patterns of all other silvermakers, including today's most popular designs.

It's not surprising that a new Gorham* Sterling pattern should prove itself so outstandingly accepted even before being introduced to the public. For well over a century, Gorham patterns have been purchased by and for more brides than any other make. Because of this American tradition, "Gorham" and "Sterling" have come to mean one and the same thing to people everywhere.

Visit your authorized jeweler or department store and see for yourself the heavenly new Gorham pattern "Celeste." You can be sure of your choice because "Celeste's" unusual blend of sterling design and shape has already won an enthusiastic guarantee of lasting popularity. And of course you know that the Gorham mark stamped forever on the back of every piece guarantees the finest in solid silver today, just as it has since 1831.

The Gorham Sterling knife handle is made from a single seamless silver tube—not two halves soldered together. It is dent-resistant and rattleproof. "Celeste" place settings—including place knife and fork, place spoon, salad fork, teaspoon and hollow-handle butter spreader—at $35.00 (Federal Tax incl.). Prices subject to change without notice.

The triumph of music over matter

By RICHARD WILLIAMS

A young man, a painter by profession and a freethinker by mental inclination, secretly aids a political prisoner to escape from the prison of a tyrant state. The police commissioner of this state, a venal and lecherous old man, suspects the painter. The young man is in love with a fascinating and famous actress. It appears that the police commissioner, susceptible to all feminine charms, is attracted by the same woman. He arrests the painter, subjects him to torture, and by some trick invites the actress to witness this torture. He then confronts her with the price of her lover's freedom. That price is what is known as a fate worse than death. At first she consents; at the crucial moment, however, she picks up a knife and kills the police commissioner.

As you no doubt have recognized, this is a sketch of the plot of Puccini's opera, La Tosca. Assume that you were to submit this plot to a producer today; the chances are that he would refuse it on the instant, finding it not so much unbelievable as twice-told, outmoded, bordering on the ludicrous—in short, simple and square.

If, at your insistence, the producer were then to read the entire libretto, his verdict would hardly change for the better. Even if he were to find occasional felicitous dramatic inventions in the libretto, he would point out that the villain Scarpia is a stock character without any softening or individual traits, a soot-black villain speaking in desperate clichés. He would object to the fact that Cavaradossi, the painter, lacks any convincing reason for acting so furtively, and that his conduct in the affair of the prisoner lacks the most common of common-sense precautions.

Finally, he would indicate that a central scene in which an elderly man chases a young woman around the room, upsetting various pieces of furniture, would seem ridiculous on the modern stage.

Are we then to discount the plot entirely? Are we to enjoy Tosca the opera in spite of Tosca the play? Not at all. Set this melodrama to music, and what happens? Set it to music such as Puccini gave it, and what happens? Far from smiling over its bare construction, we are thrilled by it. Far from being irritated by the sparse outlines of Scarpia's character, we believe him to be three-dimensional and we share the fear that his companions in the play feel in his presence. Far from realizing that the painter is a dull fellow, we listen to him sing and our hearts go out to him when he sings his love to Tosca and when he takes farewell of the world. The scene in which Scarpia makes his proposition to Tosca remains nerve-racking, familiar though we are with not only the outcome but with every move that is made.

AS FOR Tosca herself, our feelings for her are something special! It is plain that the plot of Tosca, invalid though it may be on its own merit, serves music admirably. It is equally plain that the music scours away the time-encrusted and slightly shoddy creakiness that may have rusted the story. One part can't do without the other, but the amalgamation is strong. It is only in its double existence that Tosca continues to exist.

The effect of horror in the theater depends on suspense, and suspense depends on surprise, and surprise depends on our ignorance of what is going to happen. We cannot be surprised by the plot of Tosca because, even if we haven't seen the opera, we could foretell the action, so predictable has it become through theatrical usage.

Yet through the music, as linked to the story, we are still able to feel concern, tension, excitement, and even horror. What an extraordinary testimonial to the power of music does this opera furnish! Music does not depend upon a plot. It can stimulate without a story. It can create suspense without surprise. And it can create horror,

Tosca, then, points to the fact that an opera can succeed and remain fresh and powerful even when the play has become weak. Conversely, the music can take the play and fuse new life into it: it strengthens anew the material of the play, provided only that the original matter had possessed some merit and vitality. Tosca is an illustration of the triumph of music over matter.

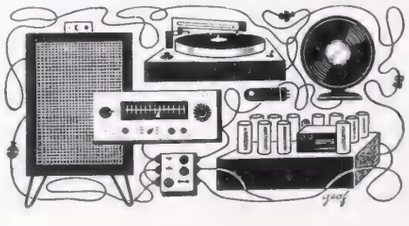
Perhaps I have denigrated the plot too much. It is not that bad. It is not bad at all as most opera plots go. Tosca the play was written by a very skillful nineteenth-century playwright, Victorien Sardou, and written to order for the talents of a great actress, Sarah Bernhardt. For years Bernhardt played the part with success, as she did other Sardou plays, such as Fedora and Cleopatre.

Sardou's play, to be sure, is a good deal more explicit and interesting than the opera libretto which Puccini's librettists, Illica and Giacosa, fashioned from it. Sardou's play, besides being a love story, is a story of political strife. The libretto had to be compressed and became little more than just a love story. The one character who is not stinted in either the play or the opera is, of course, Tosca. On her Puccini lavished his care, his affection, the best of his art.

Through the music and because of the music she appears as a thoroughly believable human being, one whose acquaintance it would be exciting to make. She is an actress with the mercurial temperament of the actress. As a woman in love she has all the charm of a woman in love. She is jealous, coquettish, impulsive, becomingly vain, gullible, easily offended and easily placated, but capable of rising to greatness when the occasion demands it. And all those qualities are made clear in Tosca's music.

Once again let us observe that an opera is not merely a collection of arias but an entity, clothed in a closely woven musical fabric. Tosca's fabric shimmers and shines, is rich in color and opulent in texture, just the kind of garment to set off and enhance the actress.

In this opera, for the first time, Puccini deals with brutality and horror; he shows power and is able to give the torture scene most effective music by a device of frequent repetition of somber melodic motives. We would expect from Puccini that the love music, including the duets in the first act and in the last act, be sensuous and fragrant; he did not disappoint us. And with the theatrical instinct of which he was a master, he spots the famous arias, the show pieces, at the right moments so that very soon in the first act you hear "Recondita armonia," (Hidden harmony), the tenor aria; then in the second act Tosca's famous "Vissi d'arte" (I lived for art); and in the last act the tenor's farewell, "E lucevan le stelle" (The stars were shining), which Puccini himself deemed one of his best inspirations.



TOSCA needs a good Tosca. Without a singing actress of great ability, the opera is unthinkable, like Carmen without a Carmen. It is only natural that every dramatic soprano should aspire to sing the role. Some of the most famous Toscas in our country were Ternina, Emma Eames, Geraldine Farrar, and Maria Jeritza, who became famous at the Metropolitan when she sang "Vissi d'arte" lying on the floor.

We are not quite so rich in American Toscas today. Two of them, Maria Callas and Renata Tebaldi, are better known here through records than through personal appearances. However, there are a thousand young singers right now studying in small towns in Italy or some college in the United States who dream of one day being a Tosca. Out of the thousand, one or two will emerge. Toscas come and Toscas go, but La Tosca will go on for a long, long time.

Callas, Di Stephano, conducted by De Sabata (Angel).

Tebaldi, Campora, conducted by Erede (London).

WANTED: One of the Immortals, to write this ad

We're stumped. We need somebody's help and we're willing to pay for it.

We have just marketed a new high fidelity speaker for music-lovers. Every test, every comparison, every demonstration indicates it is far and away the finest product of its kind we have ever made.

How do you describe such a product? Our engineers get too technical; our salesmen too eager; advertising people too enthusiastic.

There must be somebody who can tell the story with just the right blend of clarity, simplicity and emphasis.

Beethoven could do it

. . . and so could Bach or Brahms. If they ever heard their music reproduced through this speaker—and provided they could use words as well as they did notes—we're certain they'd have been inspired to create a new symphony which would likely have been called "Omega M."

That's the name of our speaker, and here is a picture of it.

This is what is technically known as a 15-inch coaxial speaker. It looks very much like a lot of similar speakers. What sets ours apart from every other speaker on the market is the fact that, after one year's experiment, we have been able to produce a product guaranteed to out-perform any other hi-fi speaker selling for up to one hundred dollars more!

Why Beethoven would love it

We're certain that Beethoven would have appreciated the economy of this product, ridden as he was with poverty. More importantly, he would have waxed exuberant over the fidelity with which our "Omega M" reproduces his mighty music—or anyone else's.

He wrote for live audiences—and when his melodies ranged from the lowest note of a tuba to the top harmonic of a violin, he knew they'd both be heard, even if not by him. To find that same range of sound, living, complete and undistorted, in a mechanical instrument would have been exquisite pleasure to him, as it can be to you.

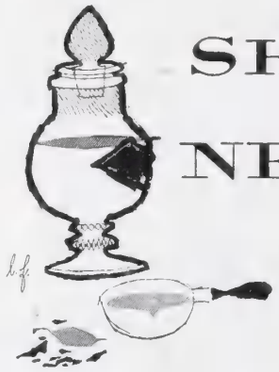
The $100 saving explained

You're thinking—aren't there other good speakers?—and, how can we save $100 and still retain quality?

Our answer is that our engineers have dared to do an "impossible"—and make it work! Without getting technical, let's say they discarded a principle of speaker design which for years has been considered "the only way to do it" and substituted a revolutionary new kind of tweeter. Not only did this give us a speaker capable of high fidelity performance from 30 to 20,000 cycles of sound; but it made our product so much easier to manufacture that, at $99.95, we challenge comparison with any speaker selling for $200.00!

Will you write an ad?

Do you see why we feel stumped? Perhaps you, as a lover of music, could tell our story as it should be told. Here's how:



Simply go to a Stromberg-Carlson dealer and ask to hear the "Omega M" speaker. Then write an ad—any length, any style—and send it to us in any form. To each of the writers of the ten best "ads," postmarked before December 15, 1955 and selected by our advertising agency, we will award, free of charge, one of the speakers themselves. And if you don't know who is your nearest dealer, drop us a postcard for his name and address.

PANTRY SHELF NEWS

By JULIE POLSHEK

A browsing expedition brought to my attention a bottled anchovy purée from England, a wonderfully convenient way to utilize the savor of anchovies as a flavoring ingredient. A dash of the purée in canapé spreads or salad dressings provides a tangy fillip, and stews, especially where beef or veal is concerned, profit in like manner. Used discreetly in cheese soufflé, egg dishes, the anchovy savor subtly enriches blended flavors of the food without definable evidence of its presence. Osborn's Anchovy Essence is available by mail order from Charles & Co., 340 Madison Ave., New York City; their postpaid price for the 6-ounce bottle is $1.15.

Apple butter, as it's made by Nashville House Restaurant in southern Indiana, has no equal that I know of. They bake the apples after cooking them down and therein lies the reason for the distinctive, delectable taste of the butter. Sugar and cinnamon in just-right quantities to enrich this baked-apple flavor are the only other ingredients.

Furthermore, as Mr. Rogers of Nashville House stated in his letter to me, "We happen to be in a section where we get good, tart winter apples and so have something good to start with." Then modestly he adds, "We found that in baking the cooked-down apples we came upon an idea that added something to their goodness."

By way of further background information he went on, "We started serving the apple butter in our dining room, but so many people wanted to buy it that we put it on sale in our Old Country Store. Although it gets a little expensive on account of parcel post rates, we found that folks came back again and again with orders, which we feel indicates they think it is worth the money. We have many other homemade foods; we think them good products, but really there are lots of other folks who also make very excellent homemade products. But our baked apple butter, we think, is in a class by itself." I enthusiastically second that claim.

A circular of homemade foods sold in the restaurant's country store indicates that plum, peach and grape butters are also available. I haven't tasted these three, but would surmise their quality is exceptional.

All these homemade foods are supplied in screw-top Mason jars, attractively labeled. Mail orders call for a 2-jar shipment which costs $1.95 postpaid for apple butter, $2.15 for the grape or plum; $2.45 for the peach. Old Country Store, Nashville, Brown County, Indiana.

Ways to dress up canapés and hors d'oeuvres have perpetual interest, which prompts my passing along information on Gala Cocktail Flowers from Denmark. They are cupped water biscuits decoratively enhanced with petal-like edges. The ornamental embellishment cut into the center of the cup, although eventually covered, has glamour value while the crackers remain on their serving platter.

Taste-wise, Cocktail Flowers also have considerable merit. For practicality, their depth and cupped shape have obvious advantages, both for spreads and tidbits. Any crackers that remain unused after an exciting new pattern bearing the greatest name in Sterling Silver . . . Wallace —and, Place-Mate an exciting new sterling dish which you get free with each place setting

SILVER SWIRL, the new Wallace pattern created by famed designer, William S. Warren, is an exciting blend of traditional decoration and contemporary silhouette. It's regal! It's rhythmic! Smart young women will love it because they know it belongs in the homes of today . . . because they realize that not a single home in America can boast of sterling with finer craftsmanship, greater loveliness than sculptured "Third Dimension Beauty" by Wallace. It's truly the only sterling silver of its kind in the world. The introduction of SILVER SWIRL is exciting too, because with every place setting you buy, you get as a gift an exquisite piece of sterling holloware. We call it the "Place Mate" because it is such a beautiful addition to each place setting. Handsome for individual servings of candy, mints, nuts—or just perfect for the after dinner cigarette. This beautiful gift is to help us celebrate our 120th year of silvercrafting. See SILVER SWIRL at your favorite jeweler's. $29.75 for a six-piece place setting. With each place setting the "Place Mate" dish, a $5.00 retail value, free of charge during this introductory offer period.

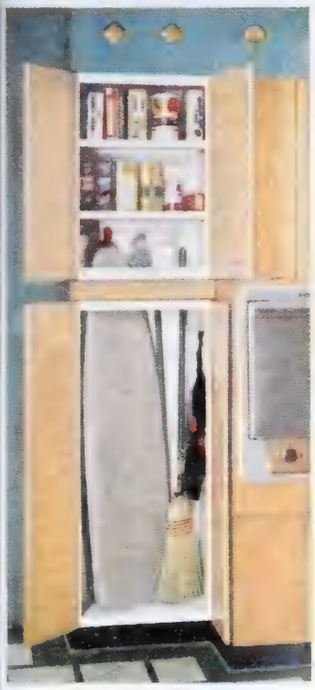
If you've a yen for colored appliances—See how Republic's spicy Sherwood natural grain finish becomes a perfect foil for a perky pastel-shade refrigerator! Your Republic Steel Kitchens dealer can adapt this interesting plan to your home.

Before—Unattractive, woefully misarranged and lacking in storage and counter space. Only modern touch is the spanking new refrigerator.

A small kitchen needn't be inconvenient!



Just see how skillful planning transformed a scant 10′x11′area into a beautiful kitchen of smooth, work-saving convenience! The secret —generous work surfaces and a place for everything handily near where it's first used, thanks to Republic Steel Kitchens. And who wouldn't treasure that "island"? It serves as dining bar, sit-down work counter, storage area... and deftly discourages cross-kitchen traffic.

REPUBLIC STEEL Kitchens

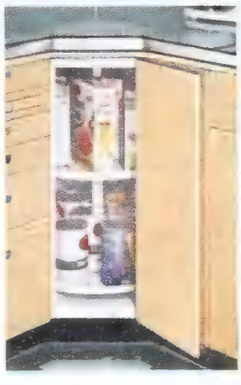
REPUBLIC STEEL Kitchens

Gain counter space with "pulldown" cooking units that fold up against wall when not in use. In cupboard below, Republic's silent-moving inner sliding drawers conveniently store bulky pans. Above, there's a custom-looking range hood to draw off unwanted odors.



Behind closed doors go brooms, mops, ironing board in the spacious lower section of Republic's utility cabinet. Or, if you prefer, have shelves all the way up and use it as a linen closet in bathroom or hall. Your dealer also has Republic Steel Kitchens in snowy-white Perma-Finish enamel.

Handy, ma'am!—And spacious enough for your biggest turkey platter. Republic wall cabinets have adjustable shelves —to meet your comfort reach. The neat cup rack is one of many stock accessories to keep your kitchen orderly.

Slim, trim space-savers—No waste space, no burrowing for small, evasive items in big drawers when you use Republic's easy-to-switch shallow ones. Tray cabinet needs only nine precious inches of space, ideal for cookie sheets, trays.

No corner cutting here—Republic's Lazy Susan captures lost space. Wide 10″ door and two high shelves offer truly practical storage. And there's nothing so carefree as lovely Formica counters with a smooth-coved back rail.

For real help in kitchen planning, see your Republic Steel Kitchens dealer or get... "Praise-Winning Kitchens," a colorful, 28-page idea book. Send 25c with coupon filled out to Republic Steel, Berger Division, 1058 Belden Ave., Canton 5, Ohio.

Drapes custom made to your measurements approx. $1.50 a yard including labor

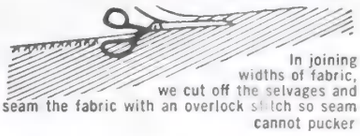
We have made draperies and sold yardage to thousands of satisfied customers through the past six years because we offer unequalled selection of fine fabrics, lowest prices and exclusive custom tailoring.

Only Carabao offers these custom tailored features

Carabao drapes are custom made to your exact width and length measurements



Fabric is "tabled" for precision cutting so your drapes will always hang perfectly

French pleated by hand. We use plastic crinoline to assure perfect headings

Weights are sewn in the full 3-inch hems to give hanging perfection

In joining widths of fabric, we cut off the selvages and seam the fabric with an overlock stitch so seam cannot pucker

Seams are positioned in the pleats so they are completely invisible

It's easy to order by mail. Just clip the coupon below and send for complete information, prices, easy directions for measuring. Enclose 25¢ for swatches of 60 colors of all 7 fabrics.

THIS 49½c STORM WINDOW protects your family all winter!

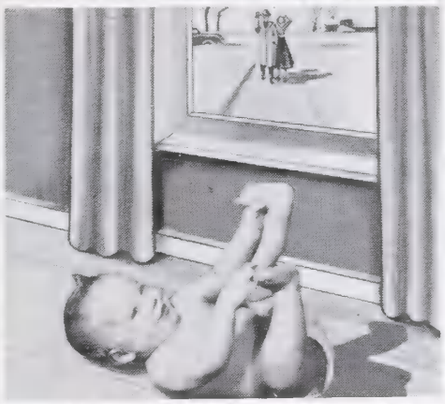
New Trans-Kleer Storm Window Goes on In 5 Minutes Without Tools, Hooks, Screws or Nails

10.8 Sq. Ft. Window Costs only 49½¢

Used by U. S. Army in Iceland and Alaska — Now Available to Public



NOW . . . Storm Windows need not cost you up to $14.00 apiece. American industry has developed a lightweight flexible product that enables you to seal out wintry blasts for only 49½¢ a window! Imagine it! For pennies per window you can insulate EVERY ROOM in your home! This new material was developed by the Gary plant of a billion-dollar American manufacturing firm—for use by the U.S. Government during the last war. It looks like glass, yet can't peel off, never chips, shatters or rattles. Actually flexible like rubber. Has a tensile strength of over one ton per square inch. Crystal clear, not milky or yellowish like some plastic materials. Weighs less than 1/10th of the lightest glass windows ever developed. Even a large window comes to less than 8 oz. Not affected by snow, sleet, rain or dampness—because it's 100% waterproof. Won't crack even at 53 degrees BELOW FREEZING! Use and re-use it YEAR AFTER YEAR for winter comfort and protection.

STRETCHES WITHOUT BREAKING!

This amazing storm window stretches without breaking! Has tensile strength of over one ton per square inch! Push it with your foot—it stretches—then springs back undamaged! Developed for Armed Forces in last war. Installs quickly, easily inside windows of all sizes. Made by world-famous REYNOLDS METALS COMPANY.

LOW-COST HEALTH PROTECTION

You can hardly see this TRANS-KLEER storm window—it's wonderfully transparent, yet it protects your loved ones from winter's frigid blasts. And each window costs only 49½¢ each!

Sensational Discovery Used By Army To Fight Cold

One of the big problems of the last war was how to defend our troops and protect equipment against the ravages of Arctic winters. One of the world's greatest manufacturing companies was ordered to build a special plant and soon millions of yards of this new material was moving out to Alaska, the Aleutians, Iceland and Greenland. It was not available to the public because every inch went to protect our men, vehicles, planes and weapons. Finally, it was released to the public and ever since the demand has been greater than the supply! The Gary plant of famous REYNOLDS METALS COMPANY is working round-the-clock trying to supply it!

Use Year After Year—No Upkeep Cost!

At winter's end just fold away your Trans-Kleer like cloth for use next year. You can air the room anytime, too—lift the Adheso border to let in fresh air, then press back and it's sealed tight again! Cleans easily with a damp rag. It's no wonder so many home owners, hospitals, churches and public buildings use this tried and tested REYNOLDS product! TRANS-KLEER comes in kits 36 inches by 432 inches and costs you only $4.95 complete with Adheso border! That is enough for 10 windows—each measuring 10.8 sq. ft.—just 49½c each! In all you receive 108 SQUARE FEET for only $4.95! Good GLASS storm windows cost from $7.95 to $16.00—for ten you'd have to pay $79 to $160.00. With this remarkable REYNOLDS product you not only save a terrific amount in the purchase price, you also cut down enormously on your fuel bills!

Install Trans-Kleer Windows in 5 Minutes

Trans-Kleer storm windows require no nails, hooks, screws or tools. No back-breaking toil or broken glass to contend with. Cut off required amount, trim to fit the inside of your window, large or small, square, round, rectangular – it makes no difference! Then press on the special Adheso border supplied and your storm window is firmly in place. Simple, easy – a child can install them! And Trans-Kleer windows, because of the LOW CONDUCTIVITY development give you real winter protection, actually keep wintry blasts out of your home.

2,000,000 Windows Sold!

For years, demand for Trans-Kleer has outstripped the supply. Lucky buyers of the first windows told their neighbors and the word spread. Last year alone, over 2,000,000 were sold, yet thousands of folks were disappointed when the supply ran out. Advertising had to be curtailed and our huge supply was exhausted earlier than anticipated. There will be another wild scramble for them this year. Production has been planned for 2,500,000 windows this year—but even this huge total might not be enough unless you act FAST!

Test In Your Home AT OUR RISK!

Here's your chance to get Trans-Kleer on a HOME TRIAL BASIS. You can't lose a single penny. Mail the coupon below and a 36 by 432-inch kit—108 SQUARE FEET—will be shipped you immediately, complete with Adheso border. Deposit only $4.95 plus postage with the mailman. Try TWO windows inside any room. Test them -see for yourself how they seal out drafts. Compare the temperature—any 25c thermometer will do—compare with any other room in your home. See the difference – feel the difference! Then if you're not convinced they're every bit as effective as any storm window—why, just keep the TWO windows and return the balance and get your $4.95 back at once!

Avoid Disappointment—Order Now!

Millions of folks in the U. S. and Canada are reading this same ad in hundreds of magazines and newspapers. Despite enormous production facilities, the REYNOLDS ALUMINUM people can turn out so much and no more! Don't wait until it's too late! Play safe! Rush the coupon NOW! If you wish to save postage cost, send check, cash or m. o. for $4.95 and the windows will be shipped postage free.

ADVICE TO READERS

To Obtain Best Results From Storm Windows

All types of Storm Windows, glass, thermopane, plastic can save many dollars in fuel bills if used right. Follow these 5 rules for best results: 1.—Check all leaks. 2.—Make sure windows fit tight. 3.—Caulk aluminum type before installing. 4.—Store wooden frame type in dry place to prevent warping. 5.—Replace all cracked panes at once. Trans-Kleer ends storage, caulking problems, shattered glass, panes to replace, leaks to seal! No hard toil to put on or remove! Put on quick INSIDE regular window with new, improved ADHESO border. Lift Adheso border to let stale air out. Press back and you have perfect sealed-in insulation again! (See picture) Freezing weather is coming. Play safe! Order your TRANS-KLEER windows NOW! THE MOPPER is a great big wonderful polar bear of a robe that you'll hang on your bathroom door and dry off in after tub or shower. Made of thirsty white terry cloth, it's both a towel and a robe, has shirred shoulders, yards of fullness, a tassel tie at the neck, and one size fits everyone. $6.95. If you're over 6', order King-size Mopper, $7.95. Ppd. Woodmere Mills, Dept. HB-10, Box 167, Bennington, Vt.

ADD-A-COUNT is a terrific educational toy for four- to seven-year-olds that is acclaimed by child guidance experts. It's a plastic balancing scale whose weights are numbers from 1 to 9, and it balances only when the sum of 2 numbers on one side equals the single number on the other. Even grownups have fun checking its accuracy. $1 ppd. Carol Beatty, 7410-HB Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles 46, California.

TWIN-SPOUT TEAPOT comes to the table in the guise of a green-eyed black cat! There are two separate compartments inside: one for tea, one for hot water—and a pouring spout for each. The black pottery cat sports a red bow tie and topknot, has a wicker-wrapped handle. 4-cup capacity, $2.25 ppd. Salt and Pepper Shop, 776 W. Beech Street, Long Beach, New York.

Who Spends Two Dollars For a Dust Cloth? AND WHY?

Two dollars is a lot of money for a dust cloth. At that price, who buys them? Here's a partial list of buyers of our Conniver, whose names may be familiar to you:

The Mark Hopkins Hotel—San Francisco's finest
Mrs. Ozzie Nelson—a busy homemaker, both on and off TV
Emily Post—authority on social behavior
Mrs. Charles MacArthur—you know her as Helen Hayes
Mrs. Ben Hecht—he co-authored "The Front Page"
Mrs. Ralph E. Flanders—wife of Vermont's embattled Senator
HMS "Queen Elizabeth"—best-known ocean liner afloat
Cora Baird—Bil and Cora are the marionette folks
Ilka Chase—if you read or watch TV you know her
Mrs. Arthur Murray—dances through housework with Conniver
Dr. Karl Menninger—internationally known psychiatrist
Mrs. Robert E. Sherwood—her husband wrote "Abe Lincoln in Illinois"

Should you spend two dollars just because these buyers did? No, not necessarily. But you should know WHY they splurged so that you can decide for yourself.

Here Is Why the Buyers Buy . . .

People buy Conniver (and they buy it again!) because a touch with Conniver on any surface—wood, glass, metal, porcelain, plastic or leather—applies a tough but invisible film of Silicone that shrugs off dust or dirt! The result is that anything wiped with Conniver is afterward beautifully cleaned and polished with just a flick of the cloth. That's because Silicone is one of the finest "release materials" known to science—and Conniver is loaded with it! The Silicone stays in the cloth, too.

Use Conniver on woodwork, furniture, mirrors, porcelain and chrome kitchen appliances, windows—everywhere in your home. It won't hide or discolor any finish, but it will enhance lustre. By the way, regular use of Conniver prevents the formation of both rust and tarnish. Nice to know that, if you own silverware, or if there are guns, golf clubs, garden tools and such around the house.

You clean Conniver just by shaking it. Or, if you prefer, dunk it in a mild detergent solution. It will come up smiling, because the Silicone is there for keeps!

We Guarantee It—to the Hilt!

We just don't know how to write a stronger guarantee than the one we've put on Conniver. We say that if Conniver doesn't do everything we promised, we'll instantly refund your money—and you may keep the cloth! There are no strings on this. You are the judge.

Conniver buyers know that every word we've said is true. You will know too—so mail us your order right now.

We sell Conniver in two sizes. The standard 12x18-inch Conniver is $2.00 (or three for $5.00). And the double-size 18x24-inch deluxe Conniver is $3.00 (or three for $8.00). We pay the postage, but we cannot accept C.O.D. orders.

You buy Conniver by mail—only from us in all the country. And we Guarantee that you'll be glad you did!

The new CONTOUR group by

Cavalier

CHATTANOOGA 2, TENN.

Graceful, sweeping lines . . . tawny, burnished shading. Magnificently proportioned cases. Softly curved contours. Deeply recessed drawer fronts, with a pin stripe accent of gleaming gold. Drawer pulls of polished brass . . . with legs to match! Gliding panels on bookcase bed. Windsor tan cabinet-grade elm veneers and solid beech. Write for free folder giving complete description and "where to buy" these perfectly matched pieces.

The Nocturne Group

An unusual texture and color treatment of group shown above. The wrap-around case, in charcoal, has undertones of smoky blue to dramatize the Cerulean blue of the Algerian leather-grain fronts.

Furniture: John Stuart

It's all wool carpet—and so thrifty. With FIRTH TUFTWOVEN* "Sun Tweed" you can carpet two rooms for what you probably expected to pay for one. Because of the new revolutionary Tuftwoven process, you can now enjoy the matchless luxury of wool for no more than ordinary substitutes. And what a practical choice this rich, tweedy carpet is! It hides footprints and soil. The pure wool texture feels so luxuriously deep and springy under-foot—and it stays fresh and beautiful year after year, under the heaviest family traffic. Wait till you see "Sun Tweed's" glowing colors—sparkling, sunny shades that add a new feeling of warmth and cheerfulness to your home. See how much more it offers you at surprisingly little cost. Diamonds never get old! Kaskel's, New York's leading diamond specialist since 1882, have originated a novel plan for you to enjoy great savings on diamonds reset in brand new 14 Kt. gold or platinum mountings. Kaskel's plan is simple. They fine-comb the many outlets where diamonds can be secured at much lower than regular wholesale prices. These markets uncover first grade diamonds at amazingly low bargain prices. Kaskel's resets them into beautiful diamond rings, diamond bracelets, diamond pins, diamond earrings, diamond watches . . . AND . . . Kaskel's grades them for you according to nationally accepted standards. These unusual beauties are yours for a fraction of the usual market cost. You take no risk. You are 100% protected by a written bond and a money back guarantee. You can see your selection before you buy. Any size genuine diamond can be yours on a pay as you like lay-away plan. There are no extra charges.

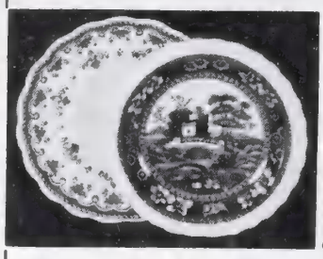
TENNESSEE FARM SAUSAGE caused a mad scramble in Window Shopping because we all wanted to sample. It's made from "whole hog" which, in meat talk, means it has the finest ham, tenderloin, bacon and shoulder ground right into it. Whatever the trick, it's downright delicious at the breakfast table. Six 1-lb sacks shipped in dry ice, $5.85 ppd. Tennessee Farm Sausage, Box 2338, Dallas, Texas.



BRELLA-BAG is a smartly-styled new carry-all with its own cocktail-size umbrella. Both are made of waterproof acetate taffeta in toast, red or turquoise, and the bag is flocked with a fishnet design in black to match the plastic patent trim. Bag is 11½" x 10" x 5". Umbrella is 21" long. $6.95 incl. tax. Add 50¢ post. Lee Hendry, Little Silver, N. J.

HANDY HOOK is the kind of hanger we've always wished someone would make, and here, at last, it is. It hooks over any closet rod or wall peg and provides neat hang-up space for such difficult storage problems as purses, umbrellas, belts, brushes, garden tools, etc. You'll want one in the car, too, for your husband's suits. $1 for 2 ppd. Chairs in black or natural finish.

Over a century of working with solid woods enables Unique's Master Wood Workers to build furniture from extremely hard, solid pecan wood. The exceptionally beautiful grain is reflected richly in the clear soft finish. Illustrated is a setting from the open stock dining room group.

For Your Treasure House—

Distinctive Sabine Pecan

in SOLID PECAN from the heart of native forests in Louisiana

Plan a delightful bedroom with a choice of pieces you will treasure forever. The durable, stable quality of solid pecan permits rendering of the soft-flowing, shaped and curved tops, and smoothly-shaped, raised panels.

Occasional pieces with molded foam rubber cushions are ideal to combine with dining room groupings for combination living-and dining areas, so popular in homes today.

Introducing Care Free Fashions

Simmons Hide-A-Bed sofas coats by Harry Frechtel in famous Candalon Fabrics with the spot-resistant Sylmer Process*

YOU'VE never known how much a fabric can do for a fashion until you see these new Candalon fabrics. It's not only that they're so lovely to look at and luxurious to feel, but the special Sylmer process by Dow Corning gives them practical qualities that have been impossible up till now. These fabrics are spot-resistant, not only to the regular type of soiling, but to all non-oily stains such as tea, coffee, soft drinks, fruit juices, even ink. These fabrics are also wrinkle-resistant, which means they will stay smooth and new-looking.

We need hardly tell you about Simmons famous Hide-A-Bed sofas, except that these new 1955 versions have a host of improvements, including lower seating height, comfort-angle back and luxury-sofa seating comfort.

As for the coats by Harry Frechtel, every woman who knows fine clothes knows these are among the finest.

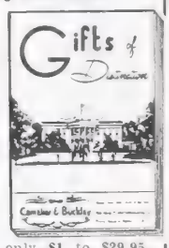
"REAL" BABY SEAL PAPERWEIGHT



"Sebastian", the baby seal, is the most luxurious paperweight that ever guarded an executive's papers or decorated a ladies' desk! He's genuine sealskin from his inquisitive nose to his tail flippers. He has genuine leather collar, wistful black eyes and the most beautiful whiskers this side of Alaska. Solidly weighted, too, so the papers Sebastian sits on really stay put. A Wonderful Christmas gift for folks who love the unusual. A most provocative conversation piece on your own desk. $3.95 ppd.

ELECTRIC SHOE SHINER DOES A PERFECT JOB FAST!

Here's a silent, smooth-working electric "servant" that gives your shoes a mirror-bright polish in record time! Just plug it into any A.C. outlet. The heavy duty motor goes to work instantly. Switches off automatically if too much pressure is applied, so it can't "burn" leather. Comes with soft woolly brush that converts it to an exceptionally effective silver polisher. Makes a time-saving, work-saving gift that will be used with pleasure for many years.

SADDLE SEATS

FOR TELEVISION RIDING!

Mount up! Get on your horse! It's western movie time!

Now your little buckaroos can ride right along with their favorite western heroes. New television saddle seats eliminate bouncing on chair arms and sofa cushions . . . sprawling on the floor. Children sit up straight because that's the way real cowhands sit in their saddles. Saddles are double stitched of genuine leather, complete with real conchos, leather strings, bedroll, and bright-patterned saddle blanket. Saddle sits securely on sturdy hardwood legs, rubber-tipped to save your carpets.

21" high Saddle Seat..... $7.95
23" high Saddle Seat.....$12.50
